

Lake Rise Makes Parking Lot Fishing Hole

Dewey Lake rose into the parking lot at the Jenny Wiley boat dock Monday following almost a week of rainfall. In fact, Don Whittaker during the day caught eight bass in the water which covered the parking area. (The fisherman in photo is not Mr. Whittaker.) Elsewhere in the county, lowlying areas were flooded. After the rain ended, frost was reported Saturday night in most sections of the county.

Voting Law Has Board Befuddled Naming of Precinct Election Officials May Await Opinion

When The Times inquired this week about the date for appointment of precinct election officers for the May 29 primary it learned that the county election commission isn't 100 percent sure new election officers will be named. Kentucky Statute 127.040, which is a part of the new election laws enacted by the 1972 General Assembly session, reads: "The county board of elections shall, not later than Sept. 20 each year, appoint for each precinct in the county two judges, one clerk and one sheriff of election, who shall hold their offices for one year and until their successors are appointed. They shall serve in all elections held in the county during the year." This statute has given reason for the belief held by some that a new set of election officers for the May primary isn't necessary that those appointed last October will remain in service. But those who argue that election officers must be appointed—among them, County Clerk C. "Ollie" Robinson—point out that the election officers who served at last November's election were not named by the Sept. 20 date required by the new act. So they contend that election officers must be appointed for the coming primary.

This Town . . . That World

Lenna Moore has been away for a week or more now, and I'm tired of defending him. There have been certain uncouth fellows who persist in explaining that they have called him to Washington to explain his whereabouts when the Watergate raid was staged.

NO TRANSLATION NEEDED

In Denmark, it is reported, the Progress Party, which is only a year old, is No. 2 in the public opinion polls. What does it stand for? It would levy no income tax on those earning more than $8,500 a year. And no Danish army, just a Defense Ministry answering service which says only two words: "We surrender" . . . in Russian.

NO COMPLAINT

The remodeled, streamlined, much-discussed, and sometimes cursed, Postal Service has a strong supporter in Texas. James Morell sends me a clipping from the San Angelo Standard Times which reports that the Postal Service had taken such heed of complaints about slow service that it plumb reversed the trend. The newspaper reported that it received an air mail letter from a Houston firm on a Monday, the day before its Tuesday postmark.

A BREATH OF FRESH AIR

Every week when I see "The Waltons" on TV I resolve to mention this fine program in the next week's paper, then promptly forget to do so. "The Waltons," the simple story of plain, home-loving, family-loving human beings living and loving and working together is like a breath of fresh air. Especially after you've been holding your nose while beholding some of the other stuff TV dishes up under the guise of entertainment. We would urge everybody to watch "The Waltons," but if it becomes too popular they'll, sure as shootin', kill it off.

Army Reservists on the 'Attack'

Members of the 810th Supply Co., U. S. Army Reserve, Pikeville, are shown in a "frontal assault" during last Saturday's cleanup effort here on a concentration of waste materials which created a large garbage dump on the old Middle Creek road, just outside West Prestonsburg.

Although two days of the three-day "County-Seat Cleanup" staged by the Prestonsburg Junior Chamber of Commerce were washed out by rain, 59 tons of waste materials were picked up Saturday and hauled away to the city dump. The Army Reserve unit at Pikeville supplied 60 men and three trucks. Floyd county furnished two trucks and their drivers, and city employees joined in the cleanup effort.

Murder Docket Clear As Man Admits Guilt

The last murder case on the Floyd circuit court docket was settled Monday morning when 73-year-old Mont Robinette entered a plea of guilty to the charge of slaying his wife and on motion of the Commonwealth was given a 10-year pen term.

Later, Robinette's attorney filed a motion for probation. The defendant has been ill in a Louisiana hospital and was not able to appear in court during the regular criminal term which ended last Friday.

The May civil term of court will convene next Monday. No jury-trial cases will be heard during the session.

Convictions recorded last week included that of VFW Post No. 5839 on a charge of possessing intoxicants for the purpose of sale. The Post was fined $100. Irvin Shepherd was fined $100 on a drunk driving count.

Two who had been convicted earlier were booked at the jail last week—Roy Isaac, who had been fined $500 for knowingly receiving stolen property, jailed April 25, and Martin Frasure, who was booked April 26 to serve 90 days in jail after his conviction of shooting and wounding.

Floyd 'Stripped' Sites Inspected; One Job Halted

A limited area of strip-mined properties in Floyd county was inspected during a tour made Monday by environmental protection officials.

Heading the tour was Bernard Carter, executive assistant to Commissioner Thomas O. Harris, commissioner of the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection. He was accompanied by Ken Ratliff, assistant director of the Kentucky Division of Reclamation; Dick Hite, supervisor of the Eastern Kentucky area reclamation office here, and Irvin Harris, of Prestonsburg.

Strip-mining areas on Clark Branch of Buffalo Creek, which flows into Dewey Lake, was first visited. A tour of the entire Johns Creek section had been planned. Other areas visited were Ivy Creek and Sugar Loaf.

Mining operations under way at Sugar Loaf by Harry Hale Ranier were suspended on order of the Division of Reclamation during the day. It was said a coal seam not covered by the permit issued to Ranier was being mined.

Beer-Drinking In Church Held Against Jacobs

The national list of crimes is long, and Floyd county's own isn't short. And now this county has recorded a brand-new infraction to its category.

The innovation was recorded at the county jail last Friday when James Jacobs, of the upper Right Beaver Creek section, was booked by Deputy Sheriff Sollie Holbrook on a charge of drinking beer in church.

Jacobs also was accused of disturbing church.

Ten others arrested were charged with traffic violations, and all but one was booked for drunk driving. Those booked and names of arresting officers follow:

Blaze Causes $20,000 Damage

Two fires during the past week levelled a local wholesale storage building here and destroyed a mobile home on Auxier Road.

Fire was reported Saturday morning at 2:30 a.m. by a passing Prestonsburg police cruiser beside the residence of John Earl Harris on Riverside Drive. The blaze had begun in a frame house belonging to Harris and used by him as storage for his wholesale business. Firemen, who remained at the scene till 5 a.m., were unable to save the building's contents.

D. in educational psychology from the University of Kentucky in 1965 with minor areas in higher education and linguistics. He served in the U. S. County To Take Action To Save $3 Million Job County Attorney James R. Allen said this week that Floyd county and the city of Martin will move soon to acquire easements for the $3 million stream improvement project in the Martin area.

The project, which is already funded to the extent of $1 million, has been hanging fire for three years while ineffectual negotiations for property easements have been under way. Both the city of Martin and Floyd county have employed various individuals at different times to carry on negotiations, but their efforts have failed in the cases of about 40 landowners in and outside Martin.

Now, the U. S. Corps of Engineers, which would carry out the flood control project, has notified city and county that the tentative deadline for getting the project under way is next October 1.

County Attorney Allen said both governmental agencies plan to move at once. "This work is too important to the people in Martin and along Beaver Creek in that vicinity for us to lose it," he commented. He added that he is convinced that, once it is completed, the people will be pleased with the result.

Officials say they will take condemnation proceedings at once in order to be well ahead of the Oct. 1 deadline. The suits will be filed by the county but the city of Martin will pay for easements inside the city limits.

Before condemnation action is taken, however, County Judge Henry Stumbo and County Attorney Allen will visit owners of property outside Martin in a final effort to reach an agreement. For those who request the service an engineer will also define the property lines affected by easements.

The stream project will, the Corps of Engineers estimates, reduce the flood stage at Martin by 5.7 feet. It is planned to begin near the junction of Right and Left Beaver Creeks, above Martin, and end downstream near the Sammy Clark Branch, between Martin and Allen.

Office Here Promises Hope of Enforcement

In an area where surface mining is among the heaviest in the state, the establishment of a strip-mine reclamation office here a month ago has provided the people of 16 Eastern Kentucky counties the hope of stricter reclamation law enforcement as well as a place where they can voice their complaints.

Opened here March 30 by the Kentucky Division of Reclamation, the office serves the northeastern reclamation area which includes, besides Floyd, the counties of Martin, Magoffin, Pike, Johnson and Breathitt, as well as all mining counties in the northeast section of the state. The Division of Reclamation is a branch, along with several other environment-related agencies, of the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection. Similar offices are now in operation in Hazard and Middlesboro.

Northeastern Area Supervisor Richard Hite said the office here serves four primary functions. He outlined these as follows:

1. Strip-mining permit approval. After applications for permits are filed at the office here, inspectors examine an area in order to determine its suitability for stripping operations. (There are presently 12 of these inspectors working out of the Prestonsburg office.) Slope measurements are taken, the presence of such things as houses, cemeteries and barns are noted and the location of streams are considered in the inspector's observations. The applicant's credentials are checked and recommendations are made concerning the site under consideration. These comments and recommendations are then sent to the central reclamation office in Frankfort for final approval or rejection.

2. Strip-mine inspection. Surface mines in operation are observed to make certain that state regulations are being properly followed. Inspected are methods of handling coal, water control, silt structures, control of "spoil," or backdirt and rock, and proper "bench" or terrace works.

Watergate Affects Us All

The Times has seldom commented editorially on national events and issues, because it is primarily a "local" newspaper, concerned with Floyd county, first, then the immediate surrounding area.

But this Watergate affair is a national tragedy and one which could affect every American. For that reason we depart from our established editorial policy to urge upon our people the importance of what is happening, these days, and the importance of their conduct as citizens.

Political pundits are weighing the probable cost of this disgraceful affair to the Republican party and are guessing at how it may tip the scales in favor of the Democrats. Partisans of both parties in the months to come will be deeply involved in Watergate—those on the one hand "making hay," those of the opposition seeking to get the voter to forgive and forget.

But how many will lend their talents as they should toward defending the country against the consequences of this sorry mess?

There is no defense for those near the President who stooped to housebreaking and theft. Those who sought to cover up crimes committed are likewise indefensible. These people may have achieved in a few short months more toward the internal breakdown of the nation than the Communists have succeeded in doing in thirty years or longer.

Because the situation is fraught with danger to the American concept of government, it is time for Democrats and Republicans alike, as Americans, to join in praying that the President of the United States, though partisan he is, will stand tall and clean of the stench and corruption that have surrounded him. For, if this country loses all its trust in government, its days as a republic may be numbered.

Already the fallacy that all politicians are crooks pervades the thinking of a great percentage of the people. This is not true, but Watergate does not prove it untrue. There are good men in Washington, just as there are in the smallest village in the land. Not perfect men, but men who still cling to high ideals and fight for them.

The President of the United States must be one of these. If he is not, the whole political process as we know it may be on the way out. And, with that gone, government changes form and liberties are lost along with the cherished dream of a free land and government by the consent of the governed.

HENRY C. HALE

of Floyd County

Democratic Primary
May 29, 1973

A man of proven ability who will be on the job 24 hours a day.

As you know, I am a candidate for Sheriff of Floyd County in the Democratic Primary on May 29. I have visited and talked with many of you already and will continue to do so until the polls close on election day. I want to thank all of you for the kindness and encouragement I have received from you. As I have talked to you about the important office of Sheriff, it has been heart-warming to feel the trust and confidence of you, the people of Floyd County.

I was born and raised in the Middle Creek section of our county, a son of the late James Hale. I am married to Winifred "Penny" Osborne of Martin, Kentucky. We are the parents of five sons and one daughter. James, age 24, in the U. S. Air Force; Tom, George, Berr, Kay, John, all in school.

I am a World War II Veteran, serving in the Navy in the Pacific. I have been employed in coal fields for about 16 years and in farming and construction work. You, the voters of Floyd County, have elected me to 3 terms of State Representative 1948, 1950, and 1952, and as your Sheriff from 1962 to 1966.

When I am elected your sheriff:

1. I will enforce all the laws of the State of Kentucky, which is the first duty of a Sheriff.
2. I will be a fulltime, working Sheriff who will be available to you both night and day. As we all know, a Sheriff's duties do not end at 5 p.m. and neither does crime.
3. Deputies will be dependable, respectful, and of sound judgment. They will attend local law enforcement classes that are available. They will also be uniformed and in clearly marked cars—as you may recall, I began this practice in my other term as Sheriff and is not something new. As before, I will provide funeral escort and deputies for any public gathering and meeting.
4. Your taxes will be collected and accounted for with complete accuracy.
5. I can and will co-operate and work with all other law-enforcement officers in Floyd County for the greater safety of all.

My aim will be an honest and fair administration. With the help of you, the fine people of Floyd County, we CAN make our county a good place to live and raise our families.

Vote and Support Henry C. Hale for Sheriff of Floyd County.

Converting Coal To Gas Held Solution to Fuel Crisis

Frankfort, Ky.—A federal official indicated last Thursday that this country's immense coal reserve, by converting coal to gas, was the most practical answer to the current energy crisis.

Dr. J. C. Bresee, of the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, told members of an interim Kentucky legislative subcommittee on natural gas that the main thing they could do would be to encourage research on gasification of coal.

The 1972 General Assembly appropriated $400,000 to the University of Kentucky for such research during the current biennium.

Sen. Delbert Murphy, D-Owensboro, suggested Thursday that all they apparently could do in the matter was to increase that appropriation in the 1974 session.

Subcommittee chairman Rep. Donald Blandford, D-Philpot, agreed but added that UK should report on what it has done so far, tell if it needs more money and what it would do with it.

Such an accounting was given by Dr. O. J. Halhn, of the UK engineering school, who also said the project should be given $600,000 each year of the next biennium, or triple its current appropriation.

Bresee said he felt coal liquefaction was the answer to the energy crisis and said Kentucky could anticipate having synthetic oil production facilities being built in its coal-mining areas.

He described various techniques of coal gasification and liquefaction that are now being worked on. One that showed promise, he said, was a method of drilling holes into thick underground coal seams, fracturing the coal chemically and bringing it to the surface for refinement.

He said that would produce "pipeline quality gas" and could be done at a cost that would be no greater than importing natural gas.

Country Bumpkin

By C. B. STURGILL
(In The Mountain Eagle)

So you were once a country bumpkin, the laughing stock of all your fancy city cousins?

You came from away out in the sticks where your only companions were the family cows, hogs and chickens.

You hit snucks at the first hoot of an owl and were jarred awake by the barnyard rooster long before dawn's early light.

Your initial activity of the day was a hurried trip to the distant john (which could be painfully cold on a wintry morning.) Next, you milked the cows, slopped the hogs, scattered hay for cattle and shucked corn for the horses... all by lantern light.

By this time breakfast was on the table, and you were hungry enough to eat it raw. But, first, you had to clean up at the backporch washstand (sometimes after breaking ice), comb your hair and scrape the lingering barnyard manure from your shoes.

By now, most of the chickens had left their roost, and dawn was etching familiar silhouettes on the landscape, enabling your mother to blow out the coal oil lamps in the kitchen and dining room.

That was your signal to grab your dinner pail and book satchel and head down the long road toward that distant one-room school.

Here you joined other country bumpkins in pursuit of academic knowledge and rustic pleasure.

You studied hard, worked hard, and played hard, but somehow you just couldn't shake the feeling that you were a second-class citizen.

You envied the affluence of your fancy city cousins... their easy-going lives, their indoor johns, their piped-in water and lack of menial chores.

They had everything you thought you wanted but couldn't latch on to.

But grieve no more, my country amigo. The shoe is now on the other foot.

And when you walk down their garbage-cluttered streets the pungent odor of barnyard manure smells better to them than fresh roses and wild honeysuckle.

They'd gladly trade you a free pass through that Big Gate up in the sky for just one month of your simple kind of living.

But you hang on, tooth and nail... unless, of course, you have a hankering to choke to death on their polluted air, or die of starvation in one of their super-market grocery aisles.

Square Dancing in the Mountains

By HELEN PRICE STACY

Entertainment that can be traced back more than 1,000 years into the history of the British Isles and old countries of Europe has been kept alive in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky.

Each year, square dancing experiences a new revival at Hoedown Island, Natural Bridge State Resort Park, near Slade. Those who want to learn how to square dance, or just practice what they already know, will receive expert direction from Richard Jett.

"When it's square dance time, folks call it a time of magic in the mountains," Jett said. "For generations families have been coming to dances of this kind at Natural Bridge and some of the state's best dancers began here."

Beginning May 5, Jett will be calling dancers together to form sets and start promenading in a circle at the park's Hoedown Island.

Jett is principal at Wolfe County high, Campton. He is a native of Breathitt county where some of the ancient dances were a part of early mountain frolics. He recalled that most families had menfolk who could "make" music or call sets, but in an emergency, dancing was also done to country music on the radio.

In the book "Square Dancing in the Mountains of Eastern Kentucky," Jett tells of a night when a group danced for four hours to radio music. "There were commercial announcements, slow singing and fast, stories and jokes. We danced when the fiddlers played and we danced when the announcers described the merits of chewing tobacco."

"Gone are the days," said Jett, "when the hill country family, after a long week of hard work, move the furniture from the front room (or upper house as it was called then) and invite the neighbors in for a good session of square dancing. Many of today's older folks fondly recall when they would congregate in a home or one-room school at about sundown and dance till break of day. But the mountain dancing that we enjoyed so much can still be found in the mountains of Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina."

Proof for his statement can be found in the schedule of events this year at

Hoedown Island, Natural Bridge State Resort Park:

Square dancing each Saturday from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m.; May 5 through November 10; May 25-August 24, dancing Friday from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m.; May 27-Kentucky Mountain Shindig—2 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 10:30 p.m.; June 16-Seventh Annual Mountain Style Square Dance—1:30 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 11 p.m.; July 3-Fifth annual Mountain Music Festival - 2 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 11 p.m.; August 4

Grand Ol' Opry Show and Square Dance - 7 to 11 p.m.; August 31 - September 2 - Jett's Eighth Annual Western Style Square Dance Festival.

On August 24, 25 and 26 Jett will be in charge of the Smoky Mountain Square Dance Festival at Gatlinburg, Tenn. In connection with this festival, which will take place at the new civic center, Kentucky Heritage Artists have been invited to display over 300 paintings in all media.

To The Voters Of District Three:

Do you, the voters, want someone you can trust and depend on or do you want four more years of what you have, now? I think you will agree it is time for a change—time to put District 3 back on the road to progress again.

Hite Store Business Sold to Newsome

The S & S Market at Hite will change ownership within the coming week. Jointly owned the past 20 years by Anne and Clyde Stephens, the business has been sold to Willis Newsome, of McDowell.

The store had its founding in the early 1900's at what was then known as Alphoretta. The present owners succeeded their father, the late Grover Stephens, who bought the business in 1917 from "Black" Justice. In the last 10 years it has grown from a small, country store to a large super-market, employing at times as many as 10 persons.

Anne Stephens is postmaster at Hite, and she and her brother retain ownership of the building in which the store is housed.

Heritage Artist Speaks At Meeting of Club

Wayland, Ky.—The Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club in April, observed the Kentucky Federation's program on Kentucky Heritage by having for its speaker Kentucky Heritage artist, Russell May, of Prestonsburg.

Mr. May's numerous paintings of Kentucky, and more particularly Eastern Kentucky, have become familiar to the people of this area in the past six years while he has been painting local scenes. After giving a brief account of his two-month study in Austria under the renowned artist, Gerhard Neswadba, Mr. May showed a number of his paintings and recent prints, including the widely advertised "Falls of the Big Sandy." The speaker emphasized that Eastern Kentucky is becoming more increasingly aware of art, in that while at least 100,000 persons viewed the 97 works exhibited in the Kentucky Heritage group while it was in Washington, D. C., 4,000 people viewed the same exhibit in Whitesburg, in a county which has a population of only 28,000.

The program was held at the home of program leader, Mrs. Otto Martin, Wayland. Mrs. J. T. Spillman conducted a brief devotional prior to the program, followed by the Flag Salute.

During a business session, the club president, Mrs. S. M. Martin, requested all members to bring discarded eye glasses to the May breakfast to be sent to the Society for Prevention of Blindness by the Kentucky Federation headquarters. The May breakfast will be held May 12 in the newly decorated Wayland Methodist Church basement, at which time officers will be installed for the coming club year.

Preliminary reports were given on collections for Cancer and Heart Fund drives, which amounts were $108 and $87, respectively. A letter was ready by Mrs. Martin from Jim Hammon, Prestonsburg attorney, who was a recent speaker to the club, enclosing a check for $20 to be used in the club's civic activities.

Those present were Mrs. James West, Dayton, Ohio; Mrs. Charles Scott, of Indianapolis, Indiana; Mrs. Gene DeCoursey, Mrs. Mary W. Martin, and Mrs. Bert Stapleton, of Estill, Kentucky, and clubmembers Mrs. Blanche Bamer, Mrs. Bill Castle, Mrs. M. M. Collins, Mrs. Patricia Duff, Mrs. Elizabeth Duff, Mrs. Alice Hornsby, Mrs. Don Hughes, Mrs. Rex Martin, Mrs. S. M. Martin, Mrs. Rudolph Spencer, Mrs. J. T. Spillman, Mrs. Milton Trusty, Jr., Mrs. Nancy Tackett, Mrs. Mervil Dixon, Mrs. Otto Martin, and the speaker, Mr. May.

As of October 1972 about 19 percent of all blacks 16 to 21 years old dropped out before completing high school, compared with 13 percent for whites.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Hent Newman, of Hi Hat, announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Barbara Lou, to Charles Edgar Hyden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Hyden, of East Point.

Miss Newman is employed by the Paintsville Gas and Water Company and Mr. Hyden is employed by American Standard.

The wedding will be solemnized June 1 at 4 p.m. at the Church of Christ of East Point.

CARD OF THANKS

We, the family of Curtis (Ted) Martin, would like to express our appreciation to all the friends, neighbors and relatives who were so kind and sympathetic to us in our time of bereavement. We would thank the ministers of the United and Regular Baptist Churches who held services for our dear one, and the Hall Brothers Funeral Home for its courteous and efficient service. The many beautiful flowers and expressions of sympathy are truly appreciated.

CURTIS (TED) MARTIN, JR

You KNOW it!

You want another network? But we've got CBS, NBC, ABC and KET now!

A long time ago, or a short time ago, (depending on how we look at 25 years) our Rural Electric Cooperative suggested that America needed a national electricity network. And a lot of people thought we were nuts!

But now that some large sections of our country are facing the dark thought of electric power shortages, the network idea seems brighter.

America's energy crisis is here. Some areas run short of electric power. Others are short of gas. Most of our oil comes from other countries. And coal costs have soared right through the roof.

Now, Rural Electric is saying that we need a full blast national effort like the one made to get a man on the moon.

The RECC idea has three parts: a) Set up a nationwide network that connects high-voltage power lines so we can quickly send electricity from where it's needed least to where it's needed most. b) Start a giant program of research and development to find new sources of energy, to improve our present systems, and to learn how to use our present fuels more efficiently. c) Find out how we can get all the energy we need without ruining our air and water.

We're convinced this can be done, if our national leaders will get with it. But if we can mix cows and clocks for a moment, we suggest that we'd better get to the barn door before time runs out.

If you know one of our congressmen or a senator, why not drop him a note and ask him to look into the RECC idea. Write anyway, even if you don't know him.

Attention!!!!!!

To all Brother Mine Workers of District 30:

I would like to introduce myself to you as the third candidate for President of District 30, since my other two brothers, Mr. Feltner and Mr. McCown, failed to mention my name. I am George E. Faine, of Wheelwright, Kentucky. I did get the nomination from my local and enough to get on the ballot to give the members a chance to select a man who has worked for the union and with the district for some time.

I have been a member of the union for 26 years. I have served as an officer of Local Union 5899, of Wheelwright, Kentucky for 22 years, I have served on the Mine Committee and Safety Committee and also as Treasurer. I am now serving as Recording Secretary of my local. I was also elected to the Policy Committee for the last contract and am very proud to have had a part in the making of this contract, which I feel is the best we have ever had. I was also appointed to the Black Lung Committee of District 30 for which I spent some time this last year in Frankfort working for the new Compensation Law which took effect January 1, 1973.

I am not running with any slate or individual because I believe in the contract and the constitution of our great Union. I can and will work with any elected officer or member of this District.

Your vote and support will be deeply appreciated. I will work for you instead of you working for me.

Sincerely,
GEORGE E. FAINE

May 6 Benefit Set by Jaycees Honored on Retirement

The Floyd County Area Jaycees will sell apple butter on Prestonsburg streets Sunday, May 6, for the benefit of the proposed Jaycee camp for the mentally retarded to be located in Eastern Kentucky.

Tim Atkinson, chairman of the Jaycees Apple Butter Committee, announced that members of the local chapter will station themselves at streetside points in Prestonsburg Sunday, asking motorists to purchase the jars of apple butter. The apple butter sells for 75 cents with 55 cents remaining in Floyd county for local projects, including the camp for mentally retarded, and 20 cents reverting to the state Jaycees for state projects.

Mental retardation has become a concern of the Kentucky Jaycees in recent years. Plans are now being drawn for the permanent camp facility in which children from throughout the state could enjoy recreation and training in an outdoor setting. The camp would be operated in cooperation with local mental health centers. A similar project in West Virginia is now in operation.

Vote for
FORREST McCOWN
For District 30, UMWA, President

My opponent last week made some remark about me that is not true. He said, in effect, that my qualifications are based only on the fact that I voted for and supported President Miller in the national election.

I served as Vice-President at WHEELWRIGHT Local Union for some time, as Mine Committeeman for many years and on the Safety committee. My opponent worked in a truck mine in Perry county where they had about 15 or 20 members and served as Vice-President over that many men. I serve from 1,200 to 1,400 men, and I think I am more qualified than he is.

At Wheelwright Local 5899 my opponent received 76 votes. I received 63. Mr. Feltner, you got 5.

Vote for a man who can and will help the disabled miners, widows, pensioners and active miners.

Mr. Feltner has served you 14 years as a field worker, and he hasn't done anything. Give me four years, and if I don't do anything I will step down. Let's clean house at the District 30 headquarters!

Vote for ELDER FORREST McCOWN. A vote for me is a vote for you. Thank you, and may God bless all of you.

Leadership — Or Crony-Ship — It's Not Helping Floyd County

Bill Reynolds brags of ten years of service in the State Legislature and his close ties "with our leaders." He certainly has those, and is quite proud of being the "Frankfort roommate" of Democratic Party Chairman J. R. Miller.

What he does not explain is that he got those close ties by rubber-stamping every piece of legislation that administration officials have run past him in the last 10 years—at your expense. It's pretty nice to have a legislator who approves of everything you want to do, regardless of whether or not it is good for his own county.

Like a crippling tax on coal—one of Floyd County's most important industries—but not on oil or gas, which might hurt Daviess County, in Western Kentucky, where Chairman Miller and Governor Ford come from.

Like a Reapportionment bill, which the Administration wanted, but which took away six precincts in the upper end of Floyd County in the State Representative's District, and took away two precincts in the lower end of Floyd County in the State Senator's District. Nearly 2,900 voters in Floyd County lost their Floyd County vote by that bill, which Bill Reynolds voted "YES" on. Their choices now come from Pike County, Johnson County, Lawrence County and Boyd County.

After ten years in Frankfort, Bill Reynolds can only come up with four points for "His Record on Legislation Affecting Floyd County." Take an honest look at that record:

1. He claims the "best record in the House on Education bills." Yet, he refused to appear before an audience of Floyd County teachers and discuss that very record in his last election. There is only his own stated word, with no facts to back that word up.

2. Claims to have "co-sponsored the coal miners' Black Lung Benefits Act and voted to improve the Workmen's Compensation Benefits for the working man in the coal mines. He was one of 15 men in 1970 to sponsor a bill making it easier to claim black lung benefits, but in 1972 Bill Reynold's name does not appear on a single piece of legislation pertaining to black lung or workmen's compensation. He did vote YES on the omnibus workman's compensation bill of 1972, which improved benefits for black lung sufferers. In truth, that bill was sponsored by his Senate friend from Pike County who made over a million dollars last year in handling black lung cases as an attorney. That same bill sets attorney's fees and also increased workmen's compensation rates to the coal industry to such a high point that dozens of small mines in Eastern Kentucky are closing down every week. One would almost question how much the "working man in the coal mines" was helped.

3. "Voted to remove the tax from medicine and food." This was an Administration Bill, rubber-stamped by Bill Reynolds. Part of this bill was good for the people but the very same bill added a tax of 30 cents per ton to all coal mined in Kentucky. Some of this burden could have been put on oil and gas but that might have hurt Bill Reynolds' friends in Western Kentucky and his own employers in West Virginia.

4. Worked for the "Homestead Exemption Bill, which gives a $6,500 tax exemption to our senior citizens." Agreed. After 10 years, he should have accomplished something for somebody.

Do you want another two years of representation in Frankfort by a man who can list only one legitimate accomplishment for Floyd County over the past ten years? James "Jitter" Allen is nobody's crony and nobody's tool. He only wants what is best for Floyd County. His record is as a young man working for this county and its people.

Vote for James "Jitter" Allen for State Representative.

High wire artist demonstrates Torino's incredibly smooth ride.

Just released: Gran Torino 2-Door Hardtop with new Luxury Decor Package and WSW tires.

It took a lot more than a smooth ride to make Ford Torino the best selling car in the mid-size field.

The closer you look, the better we look.

Optional AM/FM stereo radio with front and rear dual speakers.

Torino's instrument panel. All gauges are easy to read, controls within easy reach of driver.

Front disc brakes are standard on Torino. Power front disc brakes optional.

Optional electric rear window defroster. (Torino's major competitor doesn't offer it.)

Torino offers optional steel-belted radial ply tires on all models.

A longer wheelbase and wider front and rear track than major competitor, for a smooth, stable ride.

Behind Torino's smooth ride are better ideas in engineering. Like angle mounted shock absorbers for increased directional stability. Rubber body/frame mounts that help isolate the passenger compartment from road shocks. And a coil spring rubber-insulated front suspension that helps minimize noise and road vibration.

Inside you'll find expansive room up front. Plus the kind of luxury you'd expect from high priced automobiles.

So take a good, close look at Ford Torino for '73. Discover why it's become the best selling car in the mid-size field.

Onions, Indians' Medical Plant

Onions, both wild and cultivated, were used by the Indians not only as food but as a remedy for the ills common to their race. They had some excellent remedies of onions, some of which were adopted by the whites as the Indians taught them.

One of their widely used remedies for croup in children was to put a poultice of fried onions on the chest. This remedy is still used by some people.

For pneumonia, sliced onions were bound on the soles of the feet and in the palms of the hand "to draw out the fever."

Indian babies cutting teeth were given onion stems to chew on, which took away the pain and swelling of the gums.

To inoculate their people against colds, the Indians put sliced onions in a closed fireplace and breathed the hot fumes. It is said the "steamy odor" prevented colds and flu.

For snakebite, onion poultice moistened with bear grease was applied to the wound. As a cure for insomnia, they ate raw onions before going to bed. For a bad headache, the Aztecs used wild honey eaten with raw onions. For debility of the digestive organs, they ate plenty of hot onion soup. For earache, they dropped onion juice in the ear.

Almost any plant the Indians saw, they talked to it in their language, asking it: "What ailments can you cure?" So they were ever on the lookout for herbs that could heal their diseases.

For the very aged and infirm members of their tribes, they had them eat cooked onions. Even in the days of Queen Elizabeth of England, Nicholas Culpepper wrote: "Cooked onions are good for the old people, whose lungs are stuffed and the breath short."

Indian women ate onions to relieve painful menstruation. Indian braves ate the seeds of wild onions "to increase the sperm." The tribes all hung strings of onions inside their wigwams for good luck and good health. Later the whites took a cue from the Indians and planted onions around the house "to ward off disease."

To cure a bad cold, the Indians sniffed onion juice up their nostrils "to open up the air passages." For a cold with high fever, they mashed steamed onions, strained out the juice and drank it. For a case of flu, they covered the victim's body with ground-up onions, wrapped him up warm and kept him wrapped until the sweat flowed freely.

As a cure for bronchitis, they bound an onion poultice on the chest and placed over it a bag of hot ashes. They changed the ashes often to keep them hot.

For asthma, they used a sirup of boiled onion juice mixed with wild honey. It is said this was a very effective remedy. Much the same remedy was used in England in the time of Queen Elizabeth. Back then the people roasted onions on hot coals and ate them with honey—a highly valuable remedy for asthma. Nicholas Culpepper wrote about it: "Roasted onions and honey help a persistent cough and break up the congestion of the bronchial tubes." The Indians lived in the days before there were any drug stores, or doctors. So they depended entirely on nature's herbs to cure their various ills. Their "doctors" were called "medicine men," and had to take special training in how to prepare herbs for various ailments.

The number of working mothers—women with children under 18—increased 3.9 million in the 1960's. Working mothers now number 12.7 million.

The unemployment rate for 16 to 24-year-old student seeking work was 12.5 percent in both October 1971 and October 1972.

As all of you know the election is drawing near. It is in your hands to choose the one that will be your next Magistrate. I am a democrat candidate for reelection to the office.

I have worked very hard and tried to make your tax money do as much good as I could for you people.

If re-elected my only promise is to do all the good I can to help everyone. I have been informed that there's a rumor going around that if I am elected I will give the office to some one else. That is not true. That never did enter my mind. If elected I will be your Magistrate.

So if I don't get to see you between now and election day I hope you will come out and vote for me.

Again, I want to thank you for your vote of confidence you have had in me in the past.

The primary is now near and we voters are weighing the candidates for the various offices. That, of course, is our duty. Our system of government will work only as long as voters weigh how each candidate measures up and elect the best qualified to office.

I have never participated very much in political affairs but now I feel I should speak out for two men whom I know to be qualified and honest—Joe W. Lewis, candidate for Sheriff, and Dewey Roberts, candidate for Magistrate, District 4.

I have known both men for 28 years and I want to take this means of endorsing them for the offices they seek. I am a minister and owe not only allegiance to God but to my fellowman. We need these men in office. Joe Wheeler Lewis and Dewey Roberts are men who have demonstrated that they believe in law-enforcement.

If Joe Wheeler Lewis is elected Sheriff and Dewey Roberts as Magistrate, the law will be enforced and crime will be lessened in this county. I urge all my friends to join with me in electing these two men. If they are elected, Floyd County will be a better place in which to live.

To the Voters in Floyd County Voting
For Representative in the 94th District

After talking to numerous people in Floyd County, I have found much resentment because six of your precincts have been added to Pike County. I can understand your concern about this situation, and the fear that you will not be represented.

I would like for the people to know that if I am elected I will do everything I possibly can for them as we are both Eastern Kentucky counties in which I am greatly interested. I further promise to make every effort to have their precincts returned to Floyd county as under the law it is now possible and should be done.

If my opponent is elected, he will not want to see this happen as he is expecting his largest number of votes from them and will do nothing to have it changed back for the people.

So I hope you will give this matter some serious thought and decide how you want your precincts to remain.

Again let me reassure you that you will not be let down in representation if I am elected.

Thank you,

JOHN M. PHILLIPS

WANT ADS DO THE JOB FAST

To the Voters of District 3:

I would like to take this opportunity to apologize to my good friends of Magisterial District 3.

As we all know, we have had more than our share of bad weather this year, which in turn has caused the rural roads to be in very bad shape.

I have tried to take every opportunity to help restore our roads to satisfactory condition. While trying to fix the roads, I have left myself short of time, instead of trying to talk to the people of District 3 concerning the upcoming election. But I think and I hope that you, the voters of District 3 think that it is more important to repair our roads and help the people of Floyd County than to campaign.

Let me continue to work for you.

JOE W. LEWIS AND HIS RECORD
(The following is a copy of a Page 1 news-story published in The Floyd County Times on Jan. 8, 1970)
Circuit Judge Hollie Conley, in his instructions to the grand jury empaneled Monday for the first court term of the new year, called for strict enforcement of the "dry" law in this county.
He pointed to the overwhelming dry vote cast at last year's local option election and told the jury it should work to see that the people have what they obviously want.
"For the past three or four years," Judge Conley remarked, "our county has been in pretty good shape." He commended outgoing sheriff, Joe W. Lewis, for a job well-done. "I'm sure the new sheriff will do an equally good job," he added.
"Whiskey violations," the judge told the jury, "are not the worst crimes to be brought before you, but many times when there is a murder, a breaking and entering, a child desertion or a broken home, whiskey is involved."
For four years of honest, impartial enforcement of the law, vote for Joe W. Lewis for Sheriff

Deputies will be in full dress uniform while on duty; 4. There will be four marked cars with two deputies in each car, fully-equipped, patrolling our four Magisterial districts; 5. There will be an auxiliary force on hand for all emergencies; 6. There will be a deputy available for funeral escort; 7. There will be a deputy available for all sporting events; 8. There will be a deputy available at all teen-age dances; 9. There will be no unnecessary brutal treatment toward our teen-agers or any other citizen while under arrest; 10. 100 percent straight-forward effort at all times; 11. Skip Plowing To Cut Delay In Corn Planting This Spring

Lexington, Ky.—Plant corn without plowing? That may be the best answer for many farmers who are behind schedule in corn planting because of the wet weather, according to Morris Bitzer, Extension grain crops specialist at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"Working soil which is too wet is not a good way to catch up," says Bitzer. "Tillage operations on wet soil will result in poor physical condition of the soil which will hurt yields."

Heavy disking or no-till planting will allow you to go ahead and plant corn without taking time to plow, Bitzer points out.

"You can eliminate both plowing and disking by planting your corn no-till," says Bitzer. "The no-tillage system has really caught on in Kentucky in recent years. Last year, some 225,000 acres—almost one-fourth of the corn grown in Kentucky—was planted using the no-till method."

With the no-tillage system it is necessary to apply a contact herbicide such as Paraquat with a surfactant either before planting or immediately afterwards before the corn comes up. The contact material can be combined with the residual herbicide which many farmers apply with conventional tillage.

"Be sure to use plenty of water with the contact spray," says Bitzer. "It takes 40-60 gallons of water per acre to get coverage good enough to kill all the green vegetation."

If you aren't set up for no-till planting, you can eliminate plowing by disking deeply, says the UK specialist. It may be necessary to disk two or three times. If the disking doesn't kill all the "green stuff," you may need to apply a contact herbicide.

Don't delay planting corn because you haven't applied fertilizer and herbicides, says Bitzer. For conventional planting, you can substitute some other herbicide system for the pre-plant incorporated herbicides.

If the recommended phosphate and potash fertilizer has not been applied, 200-300 pounds of a mixed fertilizer in the row at planting should supply the early plant needs. You can apply additional phosphate and potash after planting. Nitrogen fertilizer applied four to five weeks after planting should be as effective as an application at planting time, notes Bitzer.

The UK specialist says the later corn is planted, the greater is the risk of insect damage. Also, insects are often more of a problem with no-tillage. Thus, some situations may require the use of a soil insecticide. Diazinon seems to be the most effective in providing some control of the southwestern corn borer, which is a problem in late-planted corn in western Kentucky.

Bitzer says the longer corn planting is delayed, the greater are the chances for yield reductions. "Rather than plant corn too late in the season, you should consider switching to another crop," he points out. "Soybeans are hurt less than corn by late planting and are an excellent alternative for a cash grain crop. If you need feed grain, consider grain sorghum. For forage production, the forage sorghums or sorghum-sudan hybrids may be the answer."

Tackett Retiring After Forty Years

Hassell Tackett, who for more than 40 years has at various times served the East Kentucky Beverage Co., Pikeville, as route salesman, route supervisor, sales manager, plant manager and personnel manager—and always as "goodwill ambassador"—is retiring, it was announced last week.

But Mr. Tackett will continue to work, part-time, in the capacity to which he is especially suited—in public relations.

Tackett was the first employee of the company and its first salesman, having been employed by a predecessor company when the East Kentucky Beverage Company was founded. He has been a part of a growth which has seen the company grow from two trucks serving parts of Pike and Floyd counties to its present size, operating more than 50 trucks and serving 13 counties in Eastern Kentucky.

Mr. Tackett has been active in civic, business, church and political affairs, having served as a director of both the Hazard and Pikeville Kiwanis Clubs, a director of the Pike County Chamber of Commerce, as treasurer of the Babe Ruth and Little Leagues in Hazard, and as president of the Kentucky Soft Drink Association. He lives at Green Meadow with his wife, the former Lillian Calhoun, and daughter, Leah Dean, who is a teacher at Mullins high school.

Consumer Comments

By ED W. HANCOCK
(Attorney General of Kentucky)

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has announced its revision of beef grade standards to provide for grading meat from young bulls. In an effort to hold down consumer meat prices, producers feel they may be able to produce more beef more economically by feeding young bulls specifically for market.

Young bull (bullock) beef may be more variable in taste than the steer and heifer beef most consumers are accustomed to. The newly-revised standards require that when meat from young bulls is graded, the word "Bullock" must be rolled onto the carcass along with the familiar USDA grade shield.

The change of grade standards was brought about because of interest developed in feeding young bulls especially for the production of retail beef. This interest developed after research showed that young bulls gain weight more rapidly and efficiently and put on less fat than steers.

The USDA announced that the grade standards revision will become effective on July 1, 1973. After the effective date, consumers in Kentucky and other states will have the opportunity to see how they like bullock meat.

If the animal is to be classified as bullock, he must be under the two year age limit as specified in the standards. Most of the young bulls will be marketed at twelve to eighteen months of age.

One final change in the standards provides that bulls will no longer receive a quality grade, but will be graded only for yield of lean meat.

So, after July 1, consumers may finally realize some financial relief from the high price of meat, and that's no bull.

If you have a consumer complaint or problem, you are invited to call the Attorney General's Division of Consumer Protection between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m., toll-free, at 1-800-372-2960.

To The Voters Of District 4:

I am in favor of Hollie Hamilton for Magistrate of District 4. He is a young man and knows our needs. So, I believe he will fully support what he has promised the people. We all know the background of the other men who are running. I am a disabled coal miner and all you people know what I stand for. It is time for the young people to speak out for the best of our District. Hollie is a working man and the people should know that he labors for what he earns. Some say it takes money to win a race but I would say all Hollie Hamilton needs is your vote. So go out and support Hamilton for Magistrate. We're going to try very hard to win this race. With your vote we can.

Kentucky Afield

By Hope Carleton
Dept. of Fish and Wildlife

While Kentucky anglers are seeking their favorite fish from the state's bountiful lakes and streams, other outdoor enthusiasts are also busy following the events and happenings of spring.

Some are observing the greening of the trees, the budding of wildflowers, dogwoods and rebuds. But it is during these trips afield that a great problem has arisen so far as the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources is concerned.

The problem is that many persons are finding young wildlife like baby birds, squirrels, rabbits, raccoons and deer. Quite often they mistakenly believe that it is an orphan, pick it up (having the best intentions for saving its life) and take it home to raise.

What the well-intentioned people don't realize is that the parent in many cases is close at hand and is far better suited to take care of its own infant. The "foster" human parent usually does not know the food requirements of the young animal or what formula to feed it and how often.

Joe Bruna, Director of the Division of Game Management for the department, pointed out that even though the individuals have the best of intentions they are destroying a great deal of wildlife. In fact, they are loving them to death.

Bruna said that, even when the foster parent is successful in raising the alleged orphan—when the animal becomes an adult it bites, pecks, claws and scratches—and then it's turned loose.

When this happens, the mature animal has never known anything except human living. Yet, it is turned loose in the wild to fend for itself. What happens to the released wild pets? Many starve to death. And quite a few are destroyed by people who mistake the animals' unnatural behavior as symptomatic of a disease. Though the animal may be approaching a human merely for food, or affection, a person could easily conclude that the animal is rabid.

In Kentucky there have been cases of rabies in wildlife. This is a very good reason to leave young wildlife alone. If you pick up an animal that does have rabies, you could be infected from a bite or even a scratch.

There are still other problems in picking up wild creatures, according to A. H. Henson, director of law enforcement for the department.

First of all, a pet permit is required for holding any wildlife in captivity. This permit is available through the local conservation officer. Persons taking animals out of season (which is the case with picking up the alleged orphans) cannot be issued a permit. Therefore, confiscation of the animal and arrest for holding wildlife in captivity would be the only recourse for the conservation officer.

There are some cases where wildlife may be held in captivity legally, and either pet or propagation permit can be issued. However, the main concern of the department is for the animal. Therefore strict regulations are imposed for the creature's well being. For more information contact your local conservation officer.

The best course to take, according to both Bruna and Henson, is not to "love our wildlife to death." Whenever you find wildlife in the field, leave it alone. Its parents can, and will, take far better care of it than a foster parent.

OBSERVE BIRTHDAYS

Charles Connors, of Auxier, celebrated his 84th birthday on Easter Sunday at his home with a dinner. Renee Ferguson joined him in the celebration of her ninth birthday. Both received many personal gifts and birthday cakes with candles. Guests sharing the joint celebration were James Connors and family, Prentiss Connors and family, Mrs. Bernice Connors and family, Junior Connors and family, Mrs. Earle Connors, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Wells, Esther Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hilton, Rev. John Ratliff, Mrs. Bess Wells, Bennie James Slone and family, Miss Millie Sturgeon, Mrs. T. B. Connors, of Estill.

Employment of out-of-school youths 16 to 24 years of age rose by about one million to 12.4 million in the year ending in October 1972. The number unemployed, at 1.5 million, was about the same as it was in 1970-71.

Close to three million persons were graduated from high school in 1972, about the same number as in 1971. However, the proportion enrolled in college the following October was 4 percent lower in 1972.

Proven Leadership Means Continued Progress For Floyd County

W. J. "BILL" REYNOLDS has served Floyd County in the Kentucky Legislature for 10 years. During this period of time he has served with distinction and has risen to be House Caucus Chairman, one of the five leadership positions in the 100-member House of Representatives. This is not an appointive position, but is filled through an election by House members. Bill Reynolds' colleagues in the House of Representatives, have honored him three times in electing him to this position of leadership. He is the senior House member on the Legislative Research Commission and serves on various interim committees between sessions.

HIS RECORD ON LEGISLATION AFFECTING FLOYD COUNTY:

1. He has the best record in the House on Education Bills.
2. He co-sponsored the coal miners' Black Lung Benefits Act and voted to improve the Workmen's Compensation Benefits for the working man in the coal mines.
3. He voted to remove the tax from medicine and food.
4. He co-sponsored the bill, and led the fight to pass the Homestead Exemption Bill, which gives a $6,500 tax exemption to our senior citizens.

It has been shown, that to get things done effectively at a local level, one must have a good working relationship with our leaders on the state and national level. Bill Reynolds has, through his years of service, developed this type of working relationship. Bill Reynolds knows our local, state, and national leaders. His experience of working with these leaders will be most beneficial as he continues to work toward a better Floyd County.

Telephone Survey Of Hunters Slated

Frankfort, Ky., April 26—"Is there a hunter in the house?" That's the telephone question for 3,000 Kentucky households between May 7 and May 17.

The calls will be from the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources' annual telephone survey, in an effort to determine how much game was harvested by Kentucky hunters during last year's hunting season.

If you are one of the 3,000 households contacted by phone, the caller, a woman, will ask if there is a hunter in your household. If there isn't, the caller will thank you and hang up. If there is a hunter, however, she'll request that you cooperate with the department by filling out a brief questionnaire about the number of hunting trips, and about kinds and numbers of game harvested.

The questionnaires will be mailed from the Game Management Division, according to Carl Kays, Earlinton, the wildlife biologist in charge of the project. The information gathered in this eighth annual survey will be used by biologists in recommending lengths of future hunting seasons and bag and possession limits.

All the calls in the survey will be made between 5 and 9 a.m. And all calls will originate from the Frankfort office on a wide area telephone service line.

So, if you receive a phone call some evening between May 7 and May 17 and the caller asks "Is there a hunter in your household?"—it's no prank. It will simply be part of the annual telephone survey for the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

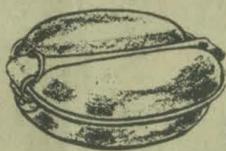

Mrs. Carolyn Hutto, a member of the Louisville Board of Education, testified before the House subcommittee on education in support of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965. The education subcommittee has been hearing testimony from school officials and politicians from throughout the country in its study of the possible extension of ESEA funding. President Nixon has proposed the categorical grant program be eliminated and replaced with special education revenue sharing funds.

Forestry Div. Tree Sales Campaign Termed Successful

By PAUL HOWARD

"Our Forestry Division's nurseries produce several million seedlings every year," said Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Commissioner Thomas O. Harris, "in order to provide low cost seedlings as an encouragement to landowners to plant trees on some of the over one million acres of idle eroding and unproductive land in Kentucky. Kentucky's landowners need to be planting their unproductive land to trees now if they are going to help meet the future demands for timber created by an ever increasing population."

That statement, made several months ago, began a vigorous tree sales campaign in which the Forestry Division made 12.5 million seedlings available to Kentucky landowners.

One of the first steps, according to Forestry Director Harry Nadler, was a meeting of the forestry staff to plan a tree sales manual. Within a week after this early January meeting the manual was written and assembled—including pictures of prime tree planting sites, information on tree planting, species of trees to plant on different types of soil, and information on pesticides. Copies were soon in the hands of forestry's field personnel throughout Kentucky and being used with good results.

The next step in the campaign was a round table meeting with all of Kentucky's conservation agencies, many private industries and others aware of the need to plant trees today for Kentucky's future needs.

"I would like to publicly thank," said Nadler, "the Soil Conservation Service, U. S. Forest Service, U. K. Extension Service, the Soil Conservation Districts, Kentucky Farm Bureau, Kentucky Department of Agriculture, our own department's Division of Conservation, and all the representatives of these agencies who contributed so much input to that meeting. All of them have been extremely helpful in getting the word out and helping us to inform the public of the need for tree planting."

"Governor Ford was also very helpful in calling tree planting to the public's attention when he declared March Tree Planting Month in Kentucky."

"Due to the efforts of these people and the strong leadership provided by our nine district foresters in the field, we have sold 10.5 million seedlings so far this spring. This is a greater number of trees than we have sold in any year since 1966."

Commissioner Thomas O. Harris has said, "We were able to get a great deal of much needed tree planting done in Kentucky this spring through the hard work and cooperation of many individuals and agencies. This is a hopeful sign, as is the response of the public to the call for more tree planting. Possibly, it indicates that people are becoming increasingly aware of their responsibility to contribute to the betterment of their environment—in this case, trees for tomorrow."

LAWS PROTECTING WOMEN NO LONGER AN ISSUE

In debating the Equal Rights Amendment to the U. S. Constitution, state labor laws that protect women are no longer an issue. Court decisions interpreting the Civil Rights Act of 1964 have either nullified the laws or extended them to men, according to the U. S. Women's Bureau.

An Interested Wife Helps . . . Artist Russell May Tells How He Switched from Sign-Painting

Governor Ford and Mr. May with landscape which the artist presented the governor at the recent Lexington exhibit. Mr. May also presented a painting to Lt. Gov. Carroll.

The stereotyped picture of the artist staring in a garret no longer is for real. They get around, they see people—crowds of people. And if they're like Prestonsburg's Russell May they work best while people almost literally peek over his shoulder.

Art has taken Russell May to the nation's capital, to Austria, more recently on tour with his works in company with other Kentucky artists whose paintings have been in the Kentucky Heritage Art Exhibit in Lexington, Louisville, Danville and on through the state.

Six years ago, Russell May was a sign-painter. A good one, but not an artist. He tells how he made the big switch.

One day he and his wife, Eve, were out driving with their young son, Rusty. They passed a display of paintings which Mrs. May admired.

"Normally, I would have kept right on going," he said. But something, and I'm still not sure just what it was, made me hesitate. On impulse I stopped the car, backed up and we got out to look."

"I remarked to Eve, 'I would give my good right arm up to here,—a gesture toward his shoulder—if I could paint like that with my other arm.' " "You could, you know," she said. "If you really wanted to, you could paint like that."

Perhaps she was remembering other times when he became interested in something—fishing, bowling, piloting his own plane. An enthusiastic man, anytime he became interested in something he would go all out to learn all he possible could about the subject.

When he was learning to fly for instance, "Many a night I fell asleep surrounded and inundated by air maps and route charts. My poor wife was on the other side of the bed trying to sleep underneath another stack of maps and papers."

Before they left they had bought two paintings.

He started copying these, over and over, dozens of times, until he had finally memorized every detail of pattern, design, color, tone and brush stroke.

Not until he could reproduce from memory both paintings was he satisfied. That was the beginning.

When Mr. May was in Lexington, early last month, during the Kentucky Heritage Artists show Pat Werle, Lexington Leader staff writer, detailed his story:

Speed painting, as he practices it in oils, is quite different from purely inspirational painting or painting from models.

Even with memorized patterns, however, an infinite variety of effects can be achieved, and of hundreds of paintings no two are ever exactly alike.

"The patterns are there in part because they are a real part of me," says Mr. May.

Born on Abbott Creek, near Prestonsburg, he was raised in Appalachia and knows first hand the subjects that he is painting. "But," he adds, "As I paint I just sort of let the brush take over; wherever it wants to go is alright with me. I rarely know until a painting is finished just what it will be."

Painting from memory, so firmly are these patterns imprinted on his mind, he is able to keep up a running commentary and carry on conversations as he works. He produced an 18 x 32 inch canvas in oils, from start to finish, in an hour.

He had given an earlier demonstration at the center and both paintings were then presented to the residents of Emerson Center. They will hang in the lobby.

Inviting questions from his audience of nearly 100 persons, he said, "Don't hesitate to talk, and don't feel you must be quiet and whisper; just ask anything you would like to know."

As he talked and painted, he explained the variety of brushes he uses. They are something else!

They range from sign painting, to house and window sash painting, to regular artist's brushes, palate knives, and even a pencil was brought into use as a tool—anything, in fact, that will achieve a desired effect is permissible.

The condition of some of these favorite brushes of his was almost beyond belief. But in his talented hands they managed to get the job done and to produce spectacular effects.

Mountain landscapes, reminiscent of Calendar Art and completely devoid of pollution and disturbing elements, are his specialty.

Towering mountains, and clear, cool streams, birch trees and pines, wildflowers of every hue and color, dirt paths, rock formations and wooden bridges, they all are there.

"My landscapes are escapes into fantasy or childhood memories. They serve to let the viewer escape from the reality of present day problems," he says. Candidly, he remarked, "I don't really expect that my paintings will ever hang in great museums—I don't paint for the few. I paint for the people, and it makes me happy to be doing this kind of work."

So intent on learning and painting and so great is this personable and charming man's love of the mountains that he went to Vienna, Austria, to study with Gerhard Newadba, one of the great European landscape artists. "This was one of the greatest experiences of my life," he says.

Newadba's influence is not readily apparent but is rather a subtle and pervasive element in Mr. May's paintings. Particularly the ones that are hanging in this exhibit.

One senses almost imperceptibly something—the somewhere between Appalachian Mountains and Austrian Alps.

Six years ago Russell May had no thought of becoming a professional artist. He owned a very profitable sign painting and manufacturing and advertising business in Prestonsburg, and at times he employed as many as 20 men and served an area which encompassed 15 states.

Gradually during the past few years he has been weaning himself away from the business he had built. Not, however, without some trepidation and much soul searching.

About a month ago, he finally made the complete break.

The total number of young men and women 16 to 24 years old attending school in the year ending October 1972 was 14,264,000; of that number, 5.2 million had jobs.

Variety is the spice of life, according to the old adage. This holds true in the garden as well as in everyday affairs and, when it comes to vegetables, the trick is in knowing which varieties are best.

To determine this, it is always well to check with your county Extension agent for the best and most up-to-date information on vegetable varieties. His advice is based on recommendations of University of Kentucky horticulture specialists, whose business it is to evaluate the different plant varieties.

But broadly speaking, here are some of the things UK garden specialists say should be considered. First, the vegetable variety should have a reputation for substantial yields. It should possess good quality or flavor and be disease resistant. Too, some gardeners may want to grow those vegetable crops that, when matured, will occupy the smallest amount of garden space.

The gardener also should be familiar with seed company terminology that describes their products—terms like "immune," "resistant," and "tolerant." Vegetables described as "immune" are those not subject to damage or injury from particular insects. "Resistant" vegetables can, to some degree, withstand attacks by certain insects or diseases. If a plant is listed as "tolerant," this means it is capable of surviving and making acceptable growth if disease or insect infections do not continue for a long period of time.

For specific information on making the best selection of vegetable varieties for his particular needs, the gardener should stop by his local county Extension office and ask for UK Leaflet HO-3, Vegetable Varieties in Kentucky. This publication not only lists about 30 vegetables best for Kentucky gardens, as determined through evaluations by UK horticulturists, but also gives descriptions of each variety, the approximate days to maturity, recommended uses, and diseases to which it is resistant.

The county Extension staff may be able to provide you with a copy of this leaflet to take home. However, if their supply of this publication is low, as sometimes is the case at this time of year, they will at least have a copy on hand which you can check for the information you need.

Here are some of the varieties recommended:

Tomatoes: Cardinal; Burpee Hybrid; Campbell 1327.

Beans (Pole): Kentucky Wonder; Blue Lake 231; White Kentucky Wonder 191.

Beans (Bush): Lockette; Provider; Tendercrop; Tenderette; White Half Runner.

Peppers: Yolo Wonder; Hungarian Wax; Perfection Pimento.

Cucumbers: Ashley; Pioneer.

Sweet Corn: Spring Gold; Gold Cup; Silvercross 16.

Lettuce: Bibb; Grand Rapids; Great Lakes.

Potatoes (Irish): Cobbler; Kennebec; Katahdin; La Rouge.

Prehistoric Mammals In Kentucky

By MARIANNE STYLES KOHLER
(Travel Writer)

Before there were languages or the men to speak them, a story was being written. The earth was recording her own diary, painstakingly unfolding an incredible history. Seventeen millions of years ago, the land we know today as Kentucky was the floor of an ancient ocean, swarming with myriads of animals. All this is told in the record found in the rocks or on the surface of the ground in all parts of the state.

Swirling, churning, creeping, the waters of the North seemed to fight for supremacy with the southern waters of the Gulf of Mexico. These two great seas intermingled, causing marine life from both elements to be present in Kentucky. The earth shifted as she turned, gradually causing the northern waters to recede, and for ten or twelve million years the Gulf of Mexico reached into Kentucky.

Like a restless sleeper, parts of the ocean floor would be lifted up only to be submerged again until the land began to appear in various elevations when at last the water retreated, making the soil of Kentucky an entity.

It was as if the land was married to time, and together, through the passing millenniums, their progeny was one great event after another. One of their offspring was a gigantic physical proportion and is known as the Great Ice Age.

Tons of ice in enormous sheets, some 6,000 feet thick, moved over the northeastern part of the continent as far south as where the Ohio River now flows. The frozen intrusion into Kentucky was slight but enduring, lasting a hundred thousand years or more. The intense cold affected life all over the state, but only the northern area along the Ohio River suffered any physical changes.

Driven from their natural habitats by the chill of death, the prehistoric beats came in packs to struggle for existence—mammoth and mastodons (elephant-like creatures), peccaries (pig-like), tapirs (like little rhinoceroses) and Arctic bear, foxes, horses and elk (similar to the ones we know today), all making their own sounds of desperation as they roamed the forests for food and wandered over the hills to fight to their death if necessary over ponds, streams and salt licks.

Among the most curious of those assembled was the great ground sloth (belonging to the same group as the anteater), a prolific animal that appeared in large numbers along the northern boundary of the state.

It was a strange environment for these giant mammals, but instinctively they were drawn to a large area of marsh land where they found deposits of salt in the earth. They herded into the bog to lick the salt. Many became mired in the marshes and in great numbers the Pleistocene mammals, some weighing close to 2,000 pounds, lay down to die.

The mass expiration left huge bones, teeth and tusks in an open graveyard, seen only by other animals for many years.

As the ice melted, it altered rivers and streams, and brought to a close another chapter of Kentucky history. The glacial period was over, but the mammal skeletons were to rest in their eerie burial grounds through hot summers, blustery winters and thousands of time-swept dusty years until discovered by man, who, with his innate curiosity, would ponder on his findings.

Some historians feel that great civilizations undoubtedly grew and waned on the North American continent before Kentucky was inhabited by humans. It is generally felt, however, that man reached this area long before the sailing of Columbus into Western waters. Again, the earth's diary reveals that the original Kentuckians were a primitive people, possibly barbarian and savage.

Later, Indians from as far north as Lake Erie came to the salt lick in Northern Kentucky to kill the deer, buffalo and other game that habitually visited there in large numbers. The well-known place was referred to as "Big Bone Lick" and apparently was a neutral hunting ground for many tribes, since no relics of Indian battles have been discovered.

As time passed, scores of men and animals must have wondered at the huge bones that covered the ground—for, as the salt attracted the game, the game attracted man.

It was to be the year 1739 before the bones were reported and officially recorded. The French-Canadian explorer, Charles de Lanqueil, arrived in the valley and the graveyard of bones, probably with Indian guides. There is no authentic account of the lick having been visited by white men before this time.

Salt was manufactured at Big Bone Lick by the Indians before 1756, and by the whites as late as 1812. It required 500 to 600 gallons of water to make a bushel of salt, in a long and tedious task of boiling, sifting and drying.

It was in 1756 that the first white women came to Kentucky... and to Big Bone Lick. Mrs. Mary English, her two sons and her sister-in-law had been captured by the Shawnee Indians and taken to their village, where Portsmouth, Ohio now is. After a short time a party left the village, taking Mrs. Inglis, together with an elderly Dutch woman, on a 140-mile jaunt and crossed the Ohio, where they camped at Big Bone Springs to make salt.

This was the chance Mary Inglis had been waiting for and she prevailed upon the elderly woman to join her in trying to escape. They were successful in getting permission to go pick grapes, and, concealing a blanket, tomahawk and knife, they walked away from the group. On their way they came upon a Frenchman sitting on one of the big bones, using it as a bench to crack walnuts.

The women escaped after a long ordeal in the wilderness and along the Ohio River, sleeping the shells of old canoes, fighting each other and finally separating. Mrs. Inglis made it to safety and sent help to the old Dutch woman, who was also returned safe.

In 1773, James Douglass, of Virginia, visited Big Bone Lick and found about ten acres void of trees and vegetation of every kind, and large numbers of bones of the mastodon and the Arctic elephant scattered on the ground. He used some of the ribs to support his tent, and other bones for seats. When his group left, they carried with them mastodon teeth weighing 10 pounds each, 11-foot-long tusks and thigh bones four and five feet in length.

As the fame of the great bones spread, more and more expeditions came to the valley of the big bones, saw the large lick that had tempted the giant creatures, perhaps bathed in the springs and drank from the waters of the creek.

In 1805 Thomas Jefferson, as president of the American Philosophical Society, had a party gather one of the most comprehensive collections ever taken from the lick. (An unknowing servant later caused the entire collection to be ground into fertilizer.) In 1840 it was estimated that the bones of 100 mastodons, 20 Arctic elephants and numerous other animals had been removed. Specimens were plentiful for a few years more until finally there were no more to be seen.

Museums in Europe and America now exhibit the relics from some of Big Bone's prehistoric visitors. But, unfortunately, there are no exhibits of much size in Kentucky.

In 1767 a collection of the bones was delivered in London to Lord Shelburne, minister to the American Colonies, and he sent a portion to Benjamin Franklin, who wrote on August 5, 1767:

"It is remarkable, that elephants now inhabit naturally only hot countries where there is no winter, and yet these remains are found in a winter country; and it is no uncommon thing to find elephant's tusks in Siberia, in great quantities, when their rivers overflow, and wash away the earth, though Siberia is still more a wintry country than that on the Ohio; which looks as if the earth had anciently been in another position, and the climates differently placed from what they are at present."

We now know his conclusions were correct.

In the period preceding the War Between the States, a hotel was built at Big Bone Lick. It became quite the fashion to visit the hotel, drink the sulphur waters and take baths at the springs.

The hotel is long since gone, as are the bones that spread over the surface of the land, but Big Bone Lick is far from forgotten; today it is Big Bone Lick State Park.

The park has picnic grounds, a playground, shelters, a swimming pool and a campground. A museum is under construction on the grounds and plans are to open it this summer.

There are many stories that can be told at the park... the story the earth herself can tell. Big Bone Lick might become part of a highly educational and interesting project for the millions of visitors that already come into Kentucky year by year, as well as a study ground for thousands of school children and college students, just as it still attracts archaeologists from across the nation.

The park is located on Highway Ky-338, off I-75, just a few miles south of the Ohio River.

East Kentucky House Has Been In Two States, Eight Counties

By HELEN PRICE STACY

Any house built in 1786, and still standing, should have a guard standing by to see that each log, chink and chimney rock is preserved as a monument to a way of life. Traveling through Eastern Kentucky not long ago, I discovered such an old log house in the middle of a creek bottom in Knott county.

Later I described the house to Floyd county historian, Henry P. Scaif, of Stanville.

"It's the old Fielding Johnson place," he said. "That house has been in two states and eight counties and was moved only once."

The house was built on Carr Fork when the territory was part of Virginia. When Kentucky was established from Virginia, the house had a new address, but the same location. Before Knott County was formed the house was in Letcher County. In the same process of evolution, it has been in a total of eight counties.

Doors in the house were made of hand planed black walnut; joists were sawed with a rip saw. For decades, the structure was a tavern where whiskey was sold and where the wayfaring stranger found lodging for the night.

During the War Between the States, a deaf mute who lived in the area was walking toward the house when soldiers road up and ordered him to halt. Unable to hear them, he continued walking toward the house. The soldiers, not aware of his condition, shot and killed him on the path.

One outstanding resident of the house was the Rev. Simeon Justice who in 1834 married Adelpia Carter Johnson, widow of Thomas Johnson. The groom was a native of Pittsylvania County, Va., and had enlisted in the army at Fort Rutledge in 1777 at the age of 12. Justice became drummer boy and his brother John, who enlisted at the same time, was fife player.

Justice weighed 400 pounds at the time of his marriage to Mrs. Johnson and it is said he had a special chair built to accommodate his bulk. When he died in

Berea Scholarships

Berea College has recently received a gift of $100,000 which makes possible the establishment of a DeWitt Wallace Reader's Digest Endowed Scholarship Fund and enables the college to offer a scholarship of $200 to each of 25 incoming freshmen who have shown qualities of Christian leadership in their home communities and who meet other requirements for acceptance by Berea College.

Established in 1855, the college charges no tuition, is inter-denominational and interracial. Its primary purpose is to serve youth from Southern Appalachia whose high school records demonstrate ability to be successful in college, who have high recommendations, and who come from families of low income. Its program of student financial aid provides assistance in meeting costs for room and board and other fees.

The DeWitt Wallace Reader's Digest Endowed Scholarship Fund now provides opportunity for special recognition and financial assistance to selected Christian youth who wish to apply for admission in the fall of 1973.

Forestry Fights Insect Disease

In the forest, insect and disease activity never ceases; but the light and warmth of spring and summer bring this activity to a maximum. Moderate weather also favors fungi - the primary cause of tree disease. This can mean destruction to our forest stands, shade trees and ornamentals.

To protect our trees, the Division of Forestry in the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection activates its Insect and Disease Section on a number of projects. This year, for instance in addition to the annual trend survey of forest tent caterpillar activity, the division will join with the University of Kentucky in an aerial spraying project involving sixty acres of land in McLean county. The forest tent caterpillar, a defoliator of oak and other hardwoods, has been epidemic in Hopkins, McLean and Muhlenberg counties for the past five years.

Again this year, the division will work with the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service in a gypsy moth trapping program. The program is designed to detect the mother's initial entrance into Kentucky. Since the early 1900's, the gypsy mother, which caused serious defoliation to hardwoods and conifers in the northeastern United States, has been moving southwest. Last year the division set 109 traps in 14 counties.

Unfortunately, some new diseases have recently reached Kentucky. In May 1972, we detected the first cases of Comandra blister rust on Loblolly pine in Crittenden county. This spring 17 counties will be surveyed to detect any additional infected stands.

At our Morgan county nursery in 1971 and at the Pennyrile Nursery in 1972, we found a potentially dangerous root rot fungus on black walnut roots. Now we're working with the U. S. Forestry Service on a soil fumigation project at the Morgan county nursery to control the fungus and weeds.

Ont the positive side, I'm happy to report the incidence of oak wilt in Kentucky has been steadily decreasing during the last five years. In 1972, we found no infected oaks but we were not able to complete the survey of Eastern Kentucky and may resurvey that area.

Also in cooperation with the U. S. Forestry Service, we are re-inventorying our forest resources. The inventory crews will gather data to determine the impact of insects and disease on Kentucky's forests.
