Evidence is inadmissable, case dismissed

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

Charges against Floyd County Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson were dismissed Monday in Floyd District Court.

Judge James R. Allen overruled a motion by Larry Fentress, the prosecuting attorney, to permit the use of evidence regarding Thompson's willful neglect of official duties in relation to tax receipts from 1990 to 1995.

The motion said the evidence of accounting practices from 1990 to 1995 is admissible because it shows that the "defendant has not conformed his accounting for tax receipts to the requirement of the law, to which he has since 1990 had a sworn duty to obey."

Fentress requested the dismissal after being denied his motion to use evidence prior to 12 months from the time of client was the lowest form of misdemeanor, a violation.

"They would have to prove the violation occurred within 12 months of the indictment," Damron said.

"We were ready to dispute what evidence they had," Damron said.

Sheriff Thompson's indictment.

On misdemeanor charges, the statute of limitations for offering evidence in relation to a crime is one year.

Thompson's attorney, Phillip Damron, said Tuesday the charge against his Thompson was charged with willful neglect in the discharge of official duties by failing to properly account for tax receipts.

Damron said the county deals with 20,000 tax receipts each year and about $6.5 million.

"Our bookkeeping was 99.6 percent correct," Damron said. "They say .4 percent is unaccounted for, but our certified accountants say there is no problem. There are so many things that happen during the tax season — you are constantly targeting a moving number."

Damron said several things could have occurred during the tax season to account for the .4 percent discrepancy. "The tax commissioner's office may have added bills, deleted bills, and even the death of taxpayers affects the records," Damron said.

An indictment accusing Floyd County Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson of willful neglect of duty was dismissed by District Judge James Allen on Monday after Allen ruled that a statute of limitations had expired on evidence to be presented in the case.

Hammond to appeal parts of sentence

by Patti M. Clark
Staff Writer

Former Floyd County attorney Jim Hammond has appealed a portion of his sentence.

According to Pat Malloy, assistant U.S. attorney, Hammond has appealed the part of the sentence that requires him to wait seven years before reapplying for his law license and the portion that required him to pay $210,000 in restitution to the state and to Trans Financial Bank.

Hammond pleaded guilty in February to federal indictments which accuse him of defrauding the state child-support program of more than $100,000 and of operating an $8 million check-kiting scheme.

He was given the maximum sentence, two years with an additional five years supervised release, on the charges.

He was also instructed not to reapply for his law license for at least seven years and was ordered to pay a $50,000 fine and $210,000 in restitution to the state and to Trans Financial Bank.

At the time of his sentencing, May 29, Hammond and his attorney, Bernie Pafunda, objected only to Hood's requirement that Hammond not reapply for a law license until the five-year supervised restriction period has ended. Hammond could have applied for a license five years after his conviction, in 2001, but the restriction moves that back to five years after he leaves prison.

"If there's ever an opportunity not to put someone back into the bar association, I hope this is the case," Hood said during the sentencing procedures. "I certainly hope this is the case."

Hammond also lost his license in 1981 after the Kentucky Bar As-

City's mountaintop annexation plan may not go unchallenged

by Patti M. Clark
Staff Writer

The city of Prestonsburg's plan to annex 3,600 acres of mountaintop property has met with some opposition.

One property owner, David Burchett, said he is opposed to the city taking in land he received from his father, Willie Burchett, on Jane Brown Branch near the Plantation Motel.

"This will just mean more taxes," the Mt. Sterling resident said Monday. "I was in this weekend and learned about the annexation. I'm thinking about getting a petition up for landowners to oppose the annexation."

The second reading of the ordinance to annex the property is set for noon June 24.

"The city can say what they want to, but annexation just means more restrictions, more taxes, more b.s.," Burchett said.

He said even though his property is not being used, he still doesn't want it to be annexed. "I might want to move up there some time," he said. "This is ridiculous. There's no purpose in it. It's just more government. I don't want anything to do with more government."

Burchett said the letter he received last weekend addressed to his father was the first he had heard of the annexation. The city has been working on the annexation plan since early this spring. Prestonsburg Mayor Jerry Fannin said the annexation plan, which takes in property from the 800-foot elevation level to the top of the mountain, includes only one occupied home.

Times office hit by burglars

by Patti M. Clark
Staff Writer

More than $3,000 worth of computer and camera equipment was taken from the Floyd County Times office Thursday night.

Burglars apparently entered the building on Central Avenue sometime between 8:30 p.m. and 8 a.m. Friday morning through a window facing the newspaper's new building being constructed beside the current office.

Employees began discovering the missing items when they arrived about 8 a.m.

The intruder apparently moved throughout the building taking selected items during the break-in. Stolen were a Macintosh Powerbook laptop computer, 16-channel scanner, digital camera, and an answering machine that had been stored in a cabinet in the front office.

The antenna for the scanner was discovered inside the block wall for the new building and the antenna wire was cut.

Debt service puts squeeze on checkbook

by Patti M. Clark
Staff Writer

Floyd County is facing a new dragon these days — debt service.

Over the last few years, debt service payments on new capital projects have increased significantly. In 1992, the county was debt free.

While payments for those projects increase, funds available for services to county residents will decrease, at least until new tax dollars are found to generate more money.

This year, the county's bottom line is expected to increase by nearly $715,000, but operating expenses will climb only $211,000.

The remainder of that increase — $503,000 — is debt service. Nearly $2.4 million of the county's $10 million budget goes to debt service payments.

"We've done a lot of cutting, but we've incurred a lot of debt service that was inherited," County Judge-Executive Ben Hale said. "We've had to cut other expenses to meet those payments."

Hale and county magistrates have been wrangling with budget figures over the last few weeks and the judge and some department leaders have butted heads over funding for their operations.

"Last year's budget was just too low," Hale said. "There were some fixed costs that weren't accounted for. We're trying to provide a realistic estimate of what it's going to cost to operate this county."

The largest increases in debt service came in the general fund, $358,528, which was actually a pay back of a state loan used to purchase the city parking lot, according to Eddie Campbell, financial officer for the county.

That fund is set up to advance money to counties while they are waiting on their tax receipts," he said. "We've been able to invest ours in CDs to make interest in the past. It was just a convenience thing last year."

That payment was $300,000, leaving a debt service payment increase of $58,000.

The jail fund had the largest amount of debt service increase with an additional $194,919 going toward the payment on the new jail. The yearly debt service pay-

South Lake flooding to get attention

by Patti M. Clark
Staff Writer

By the end of the year, business owners on South Lake Drive won't be dreading the approach of thunderstorms.

The city of Prestonsburg has just received a $400,000 grant to take care of drainage problems along the route, from Layne Brothers Ford to Gold Slone's garage.

"These businesses get flooded any time there is a hard rain," Prestonsburg Mayor Jerry Fannin said. "The road has been repaved so many times over the past 40 years that there is a dike right through the middle of those businesses."

Fannin said he expects to put in new drainage pipe and to reduce the height of the pavement on the street.

"Usually, when you repave, you mill off the old stuff," Fannin said. "That hasn't been done. That road has just been built up over repeated paving."

He said something's been needed in the area "for a long time."

A boy and his dog...

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

A dog: man's best friend.

At least that has been the label placed on the furry, four-footed beast down through the centuries. But for a dog named "Gizmo," Cory Dotson became his best friend in a life-saving adventure during a torrential rain storm.

Television can be credited for the saving of Gizmo's life as Cory, 13, learned the art of CPR from the program "911" and used it to bring his dog and "four-wheeling buddy" back to life after the dog was under the water, chained, for approximately seven to ten minutes.

The story unfolded Sunday, June 9, at 2:30 in the morning when the Dotson family considered their house in danger of being flooded by a creek behind their home.

As a result of heavy rains in the area, the creek became wild and rampant and began to come out of its banks, threatening to flood the family's basement.

The Dotsons had three canine friends chained in their dog lot located next to the raging creek. Their first thought was for "Hound," who Cory thought to be in more imminent danger because the dog was chained to the lower part of the lot.

"I went and got him out and moved him to a safer place," Cory recalled. "I didn't think the other two were in any immediate danger."

Cory didn't think the waters would raise as quickly as they did but, in a matter of minutes, the dog lot was flooded.

"We went to get the other two dogs out, and our brown dog, all you could see of him was his nose sticking above the water," related Cory. "We got him out and went to look for Gizmo."

A member of the Dotson family, with flashlight in hand, went to the dog lot holding on to whatever he

Best Friends

Cory Dotson and his dog Gizmo enjoyed the outdoors on a four-wheeler. Dotson was instrumental in saving the life of his "best friend" when he applied CPR after the dog was pulled from flood waters two weeks ago. Dotson said the experience was "like kissing a bearded lady." (photo by Ed Taylor)

And the winner is...

Keith Paige, a 17-year-old freshman at South Floyd High School, was the winner of a 1984 Mercury Grand Marquis. Malcolm Layne donated the car to increase the attendance at the school. "I'm glad I won the car," Paige said. "I'll put it to good use." Layne surprised the school by announcing his anticipation to donate another car next year. PCC approves change on new 1428 entrance

by Patti M. Clark
Staff Writer

When members of the congregation of The Episcopal Church of St. James the Apostle learned that a new entrance to Prestonsburg Community College was going to mean the church had to move, they were up in arms.

But by working with the college, both the church and the school got what they wanted. The school gets a new entrance and the church gets to stay where it is.

The college announced a new location for the proposed entrance last week.

The new entrance is designed to cut down on accidents at the intersection of Bert Combs Drive with University Drive and will be part of an improvement plan for the portion of Route 1428 that adjoins the school property.

That entrance has become the front of the school, while the old Route 23 entrance has become the

When completed, the entrance will provide access to the new classroom/health education building to be constructed on the PCC campus and shared by PCC and Morehead State University.

The church is located on a parcel of land that adjoins the southwest corner of the PCC campus, facing University Drive.

The entrance was originally designed in such a way that the church would have to move to make it work. When he learned that PCC's master plan required the church to be relocated, The Rev. Johnnie Ross, the church's vicar, contacted Floyd through Bob McAninch, a political science professor at PCC who attends St. James.

Ross said Floyd provided the church with a copy of the master plan and agreed to meet with church members to listen to their concerns.

"After meeting with us, she told us if we wanted to stay where we were she would work within their plan to allow us to do that," Ross said. "She was very sympathetic to our concerns and has been very cooperative in following through with what she told us she would do."

The revised plan, presented to the college leadership last week, moves the proposed new entrance a short distance to the north along University Drive so that St. James church will be left undisturbed.

The state budget approved in April includes $1 million to begin design for the improvement project on Route 1428 that includes the new entrance.

"We're doing everything we can to minimize inconvenience to the church and its congregation," Floyd said. "When I learned of the concerns of the Episcopal church with regard to the location of our new entrance, I took our master plan to UK and asked that it be redone."

Dog

could find to keep from being swept away.

"When he got there all he could see was a white spot," said Teresa Dotson, Cory's mother. "We had just killed two snakes that Saturday and were afraid of finding some in the water."

The man reached down into the water for the "white spot" and pulled it up. It was Gizmo. The dog was lifted out of the water and the family had little hope of its being alive.

"When he came out of the water, his tongue was hanging out," said Teresa. "He was bloated and we thought he was dead."

In trying to hold onto the dog and keep himself from being swept away, the man worked hard to remove the chain that held Gizmo. His first thought was to let the "dead" dog go down the creek with the wild waters.

"When he was trying to loosen the chain, he sort of pushed in on Gizmo's side and he coughed," said Cory. "I was crying and begged him not to let Gizmo loose. I knew he was still alive."

The man handed the dog to Cory, who first laid him on the ground and then carried him to the porch of the house.

"I opened his mouth and started to blow hard into it and began pushing on his belly," the would-be hero said. "I blew and then pushed, blew and then pushed. I did that about five times and kept pushing on his belly. Pretty soon he started coughing."

Cory then left the dog alone on the porch and let nature take its course.

"We called the vet and he told us to just leave Gizmo there and see what happened," Cory's mom said. "He was so bloated and he started vomiting. Our first thoughts were for him. At first I wouldn't have given a plugged nickel for his life."

Cory, who said the event was like "kissing a bearded lady," had never applied mouth-to-mouth resuscitation before. How did he know what to do?

"911," he quickly explained. "This is one time watching television paid off."

"I had been telling him and Kelli (Cory's sister) they were watching too much television," said his mother. "But this one time it did pay off."

"Kelli started crying and hollering, call 911, call 911," said Teresa, laughing as she recalled her teenage daughter's reaction to the dog's plight. "She said, 'He is going to die; call 911.'"

Cory brought the dog inside from the porch area to make sure he was fully recovered. Soon Gizmo started to stir, got up and moved around but he was still a very sick animal.

"He still was bloated and throwing up," said Cory. "I stayed up the rest of the night with him, watching him."

The next day Gizmo was up and running around the yard but still had not recovered completely.

"He was still throwing up, but at least he was moving around. He was under the water a long time," Cory said.

"Thirty more seconds and he would not have made it at all," Teresa added. "He really was under the water long enough to drown. He was so pitiful looking with his tongue hanging out. Had he not been chained, he would have gotten out of the lot himself."

One of the favorite things Gizmo enjoys is a good swim on a hot summer day. But Cory thought at first that his dog would shy away from water after the experience.

"He still likes to get in the water," Cory said. "I thought he would never want to get back in the creek. He loves to swim."

"Gizmo is my favorite. He rides my four-wheeler with me. I've had him since he was a pup and, when I would ride my four-wheeler, I would set him on it and ride him."

"When he got older and bigger he would chase me around when I would ride. Soon he started jumping on it when I would start it up and sit there and ride."

Today, Gizmo is a happy dog still enjoying a romp around the Dotson yard, a frequent ride on the four-wheeler and an occasional dip in the creek behind the Dotsons' house. And, oh yes, an occasional kiss from his best friend, Cory Dotson.

Mountaintop

"And that person signed a request to be annexed last year," Fannin said. "Any time you try to annex something, you have a few people who will object to what you're doing."

He said the annexation will allow the city to construct "something good for the community."

The annexation will allow the city to build an 18-hole golf course and athletic facility on top of the mountain. The venture is expected to increase tourism dollars in the county.

Fannin said work has already started on the project, land for which has come from the U.S. Corp of Engineers. "They're already leveling the top of the mountain," he added.

He said if the property isn't developed, it is almost worthless to the property owners.

"Until we build roads and get services up there, it isn't worth anything; they can't do anything with it," Fannin said.

He emphasized that when the city annexes property, it still belongs to the property owner. The city does not own the land.

"There will be no big effect anywhere on it, except where we're developing it for the recreation facility," the mayor added.

The city has agreed to waive all property taxes on the annexed land until at least the year 2,000. Insurance rates for property in the area are also expected to decrease as the land comes into the city limits. Property owners will also no longer pay the ten-cent per $100 of assessed value fire tax imposed by the fire tax districts in the area.

But Burchett said that doesn't make the annexation okay in his eyes. "I don't want to own property in the city," he said. "I know at least ten people in some areas who would oppose the annexation."

But no one has appeared at any city council meetings voicing their objections to the annexation.

"They just don't know what it means," Burchett said.

But Fannin said he knows what it means, the possibility of future jobs for the county.

"We have to start looking ahead," he said. "We need to start building for the future. We're not going to have businesses come in here and create 300 to 500 jobs at a time if we don't have the services they desire."

Reconsider retirement incentives

by Scott Perry

Floyd County school board members were rightly concerned about a recent proposal to offer additional incentives to encourage early retirements in the system's teaching corps, but we don't think the proposal should be deep-sixed.

As we understand it, the proposal was to increase the buy-out of accumulated sick leave days from the standard policy of 30 percent to 50 percent this year.

Board members were concerned that the added incentives might set an expensive precedent and would otherwise be unfair to those who will retire later on.

So, why not just up the standard buy-out to 50 percent and leave it there?

Yes, that costs extra money and will every year, but it also allows the board to hire new employees at considerably lower salaries to replace those with higher salary rankings.

If they can do it one year, they ought to be able to do it every year.

And, if retirement vacancies are to be left unfilled, the board will save all of the salary.

No, we're not trying to suggest the board should run off all its experienced teachers, but we know that after 28 years or so burnout is a real problem, just like it is in any other profession.

Offering early retirement incentives is a reasonable alternative to laying off first and second-year teachers and it is relatively pain-free.

We would urge the board to examine the costs and benefits more closely and to determine if upping the ante for early retirement is more cost effective and more appropriate, educationally, than it would appear at first glance.

We suspect they'll find the idea will be one that allows the system to bring in younger, more energetic teachers while affording those nearing retirement the opportunity to move on to other things while they still have the time to enjoy them and without sacrificing well-deserved funds.

After all, early retirement is optional, anyway. Nobody has to take the deal.

Those who do are opening doors to their protegés.

Here is the truth

Editor:

The article written in last week's paper about the arrest of my son is misleading. My son turned himself in.

I would like to tell the truth about my son, John Mark McKenzie. He was not arrested on his birthday. He turned himself in. He called my brother, Gary Wolfe, to come to my house to pick him up. He said he was not guilty so he went in on his own.

Yes, people do call in on my son to harass him. These calls were false. He has been asleep on my couch or in the shower and people have called in and reported him shooting. I have called several people on this matter, including Jack Hyden and Paul Hunt Thompson, and I have talked to the county attorney's office about this.

Present the truth—no more, no less!

Editor:

Judee Hale's June 12th letter, which attacked me personally, offends me in several ways. First, Mrs. Hale implies that I neglected students in order to write the letter which The Floyd County Times published June 7th. I began my summer vacation on May 17, and I am not teaching summer school. The only thing I neglected in writing that letter was my own much-needed vacation.

Since arriving at PCC, I have devoted 60-70 hours each week to doing the myriad of tasks required of teachers. I have never neglected my duties or my students in any way whatsoever.

I do not consider myself a "troublemaker," as Mrs. Hale asserts, but rather a "troublebreaker," for I believe the truth will set us all free.

I was stunned by Mrs. Hale's insinuation that I am making PCC and Eastern Kentucky "look bad." My accomplishments since arriving at PCC include extensive teaching, co-sponsoring of student organizations, serving on numerous, college-wide committees, initiating a student newspaper and literary magazine, serving as book review editor for an internationally distributed journal, numerous publications, numerous papers presented at regional and national literary conventions, and receipt of a rather prestigious national teaching award. Demonstrating the same leadership in the community that I have demonstrated for five years in my teaching is hardly sufficient cause for Deborah Floyd's maniacist to accuse me of making Eastern Kentucky "look bad."

Finally, Mrs. Hale chastises me (in the paper) for employing that same medium to air faculty grievances. Those who have followed this situation closely know this faculty has been forced into a public forum. Furthermore, as long as Deborah Floyd and her supporters insist upon misinterpreting and/or (deliberately?) distorting the faculty's position in this matter I will continue to expose those distortions to the Eastern Kentucky community members that I have sworn to serve. I am convinced they want nothing else but the truth and that they deserve nothing less than the truth.

YMCA at Pikeville offers many services

Editor:

With the leadership of a dedicated Board of Directors and staff, a generous community and volunteers, bright construction managers, supportive government officials, and the guidance of the Lord Jesus Christ, the new phase one $1.4 million YMCA facility at the Bob Amos Park in Pikeville will be open on Monday, June 17. The 20-year dream for a facility to develop mind, body, and spirit in a Christian environment has come true. Phase one includes two basketball/volleyball courts, two racquetballs courts, a meeting/aerobics room, a free-weight room, a physical fitness room, a tennis court, a walking track, and locker rooms. The entrance lobby, putt-putt golf, driving range, and children's playground will be open in a short time. Phase II, in the planning stage, will include a swimming pool(s) and other additions.

The public may call (606) 433-YMCA or visit the YMCA to obtain membership details, tour the facility, or seek other information. Orman Boggs is the executive director and Greg Boggs is the program director.

The YMCA has a new facility, has a new lighted softball field, manages the swimming pools and gives swimming lessons at Johnson Bottom, Hardy Park, and Virgie, puts on summer day camps at Inez, Betsy Layne, Pikeville, and Paintsville, has child care programs at Phelps, Paintsville, Elkhorn City, Pikeville, and Johns Creek, has swimming lessons in Prestonsburg and Pikeville, and looks to expand even more. It has soccer, softball, volleyball, basketball, T-ball, and many other programs.

As with any non-profit organization, the YMCA needs your support to accomplish its mission to serve. Please support the YMCA by becoming a member, making a contribution, or becoming a volunteer. The YMCA is a tremendous asset to Pikeville and the region of Pike, Floyd, Martin, Johnson, Magoffin, Knott, Letcher, and Mingo counties and the surrounding area.

The "Y" is for men, women, and children of all ages.

Coffee Break

by Scott Perry

We've joined that growing list of Americans who have been victimized by crime.

Some slimeball broke out a window and went on a shopping-spree through our offices last week, making off with some valuable pieces of equipment and leaving us with emotions that range from anger to disgust.

As far as we're concerned there is no more despicable animal than a thief.

It's not so much the things they took that matters, but the feeling you get by knowing someone has violated your space and stolen your sense of security.

That's not as easy to replace as the equipment, and that's the real crime.

Guess the only good news from our recent burglary is that one of the creeps managed to cut themselves on the glass they broke out.

From the evidence we found, the cut was obviously not life-threatening but, with any luck, maybe it will get infected or cause lockjaw or something.

We can only hope.

Louisville Mayor Jerry Abramson had every right to snub presidential contender Bob Dole recently when Dole visited Kentucky's largest city, but he didn't have to be so rude about it. News accounts suggest Abramson sent Dole a note, recommending that the GOP's choice for president "just go back to Washington."

And they say our state's hospitality is second to none.

Dole and Abramson may be from opposite sides of the political fence, but it doesn't strike us as rating real high up there on the smart meter to tell a guy who just may be our next president to take a hike.

Wonder what Louisvillians will think of their mayor's arrogance should Dole win the opportunity to say turn-about is fair play?

Wait a minute.

You ain't heard nothin' yet.

Alice McDonald, who was accused but not charged with abusing her office as the state's Superintendent of Public Instruction and who was accused and sentenced for at least one allegation of shoplifting, has been elected as a Democratic National Committeewoman.

Pretty remarkable comeback,

Richard Nixon should have been so lucky.

So should Bill and Hillary, who are fast discovering that you can't pick your family, but you can your friends...and they've done right poorly in that department.

At least three Friends of Bill, including Clinton's successor in the statehouse, Governor Jim Guy Tucker, have been convicted in Arkansas for committing fraudulent acts, and more trials are underway.

Each case brings suspicions closer to the First Family, who have not yet been charged with any crimes, but who are learning that guilt by association is a real problem in politics.

At any rate, the Whitewater saga is unraveling much to the same tune as Nixon's Waterloo...Watergate.

We'll have to stay tuned to see if the swan song is the same.

The hierarchy of an organization of Southern Baptists has directed its followers to boycott Disney operations in apparent retaliation to the less than wholesome films made by some of the huge company's subsidiaries.

Can't imagine why Mickey Mouse would get the same treatment from the group as, say, Sharon Stone, but we have noticed that Minnie Mouse does exhibit her underwear quite frequently in her films.

Warner Brothers could be next on the blacklist.

Porky Pig runs naked all the time.

Squeeze

ment for that facility is $495,339. Last year's payment of a little more than $300,000 came due before the county could even occupy the facility.

The LGEA fund's debt service increased a little more than $15,000 while the road fund's payments actually decreased by nearly $65,000.

"Because of these increasing payments, we've got to keep looking at ways to cut other expenses," Hale said. "The first place you look is insurance."

The county changed health insurance companies at a special meeting late last month. That change is expected to save about $80,000 a year.

Even with the cuts, Hale said the budget is a good one. "It's tight and it's efficient," he said.

But some magistrates say the county is getting in over its head.

"In 1992, this county was debt free," Magistrate Jackie Owens said during a recent special meeting of the court. "Now, we're in debt up to our ears."

He said last year's budget was cut too much, especially the road department's. "We've stayed inside that budget, but we don't have the money to work on the roads," he said. "We've got to keep those school buses moving."

Magistrate Gerald DeRossett said he thinks the 1997-98 budget, which will get second reading at the June 21 meeting of the court, was cut too much. "We can't do any more cuts and give the people service," he said. "We need to tighten our belts and work a little harder."

But Magistrate Elmer Ray Johnson said the magistrates knew the increases in debt service were coming, and he's looking into the future — to 1998 — when the county might be faced with a balloon payment on the Thunder Ridge project.

"I'm hoping for the best," Johnson said. "We've inherited that. We'll have to deal with it."

Hale said that payment will be $2.7 million and will come due on July 1, 1998. If the racetrack is making money, that payment will come from the company. If not, the county is responsible.

"That would be catastrophic for Floyd County," Hale said. "It's like there's a cloud looming over Floyd County."

There is rumored to be a sealed bid to buy the racetrack if the company can't make that payment, getting the county off the hook.

But Owens said it should never have gotten this far.

"We shouldn't have been left holding the bag," he said.

He said there are other potential problems with similarly financed projects the county could be facing in the future. "Like the R & S project," he said. "That $4 million could have been used toward laying water lines."

The county is helping Bill Smith develop an industrial site for his new building. Funds from the project came from coal severance and CDBG. The industrial site will also have excess land for another company and the county plans to sell that property when development is complete.

While Smith has personally committed himself to the project, the responsibility for repaying the loans falls back to the county.

Owens also said the new justice center should not be built, even though the Administrative Office of the Courts is supposed to be paying for it.

"If we keep going in debt, we're going to have to raise taxes to cover," Owens said. "We need to start taking a hard look at these projects and stop letting people take advantage of this county."

He said the situation in Johnson County, where nearly all county employees have been laid off because of lack of funds is "scary" for Floyd magistrates.

"Johnson County just shows what can happen," Owens said. "It took them just a couple of years to go into the red. I don't want to see this county in that shape."

He said the magistrates, along with Hale, need to look at what's being cut from the budget.

"It's easy to cut the money," he said. "But you're also cutting services. In the future, I think residents will be looking hard at what we're doing and if they don't like it, I don't think we'll be back for another term."

Burglars

Several compact discs containing graphic art were moved from their normal location in the composing room and scattered in one of the darkrooms in the building.

The person breaking in apparently injured themselves when they broke out the window. Bloody rags were found outside the window.

The break-in is under investigation by city police officer Darrell Preston.

Arson charge dismissed

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

An arson charge against a Pikeville man was dismissed last week in Floyd District Court.

John D. Collins, 20, was arrested June 4 for allegedly setting fire to a garbage dump within 50 feet of an oil well and a gas well.

Collins was charged with alcohol intoxication, drinking alcohol in public, and setting fire to land he did not own.

Floyd County Attorney Keith Bartley said in order for Collins to be guilty of the charge, he would have to be burning the timberland or the flammable materials.

After the dismissal of the arson charge, Collins pleaded guilty to alcohol intoxication and drinking alcohol in public.

Collins was required to pay a $100 fine and court cost.

Flooding

Those places routinely get flooded."

Fannin said homeowners in the area can also expect relief when the project is completed.

"The water from that area all drains to the street," he explained. "When it's backed up in the street, it starts backing up into those homes," he said.

The funds came from the Rural Road Aid monies and from other transportation funds, according to Fannin. He said Senator Billy Ray Bailey and Representative Greg Stumbo helped secure the funds for the project, as they did for the drainage projects at Goble Roberts and Mays Branch earlier this year.

Bids for the engineering portion of the project are expected to be let out in the next few weeks with the construction bids following.

"It shouldn't take long," Fannin said. "The money is already there."

He said he was scheduled to meet with Denton Biliater, with the state highway department, Tuesday morning to talk about what could and could not be done along the roadway.

"There should be relief by the end of the year," Fannin said.

McAnich hopes bumper stickers slow teens down

by Patti M. Clark
Staff Writer

The recent deaths of students of Prestonsburg High School has Bob McAninch concerned about the safety of his two teenage stepchildren.

But, instead of sitting back and doing nothing, McAninch is starting a new business to help parents keep a handle on their kids.

McAninch is opening a service that supplies parents with a bumper sticker with information and a phone number to call if the teenager is driving erratically or too fast.

"Other drivers can call to a central location and we will report back to the parent," he said. "The service will cost $5 a month and we hope to get enough customers so that it will pay for itself."

He said he learned of a similar service while he was on a trip recently and concern for his stepdaughter prompted him into putting it in place. The service is designed to cover five or six counties around Floyd.

"We should be up and running by July," he said. "I told my two teenagers about it and they were horrified. I knew right then that it was a good idea."

McAninch said he isn't expecting a lot of calls. Just the idea of someone being able to tell on them should slow kids down, he said.

"If the service saves the life of one teenager, it's worth the effort," he added.

"I feel more comfortable knowing she (his stepdaughter, Ashley, will be 16 in a few months) will be under the watchful eye of someone," he said. "I'm also getting her a cellular phone for her pocket. I'm going to slow her down and upgrade her ability to communicate."

He said it is scary to have teenage children today.

"Good kids get caught up in bad things. Good kids get cornered. Good kids get pressured," he said. "We're scared for them, but we've got to let them leave the house."

Evidence

"We were ready to dispute what evidence they had," Damron said. "We wanted a speedy trial and to get it behind us."

Damron added that the charge of willful neglect would mean the prosecution would have to prove the neglect was intentional.

Charges against Thompson may be revived if they are reintroduced to a grand jury.

"I don't have any current intentions of doing that (taking the case to the grand jury)," Fentress said. "But, it remains a possibility."

Fentress said if the charges were taken before the grand jury again, the Commonwealth would encounter the same question about the admissibility of the evidence.

"It was the position of the Commonwealth that the evidence was admissible," Fentress said. "We really didn't have much evidence left to present. The proper thing to do was to ask the court to dismiss the case without prejudice."

sociation said he falsified doctors' reports in a black-lung case. His license was returned to him in 1988 and he won the county attorney's office the next year.

Hood told Hammond during the sentencing that he had "squandered an opportunity" twice that some people never have once.

"Seldom, if ever, has anybody been afforded the opportunity to practice law in the Commonwealth of Kentucky after the circumstances that Mr. Hammond found himself in previously," Hood said.

Local educators to attend first Kentucky comprehensive school health institute

A team of local school personnel will attend an innovative summer program at Eastern Kentucky University designed to help schools throughout the commonwealth develop comprehensive school health plans.

The first Kentucky Comprehensive School Health Institute, to be held June 24-28 at various campus sites, will include core content programs for teachers in health, fitness, and wellness activities, and special sessions targeted to dietitians, counselors, school nurses and other support staff.

Also, every participating team will return with a mini-grant, ranging from $700 to $1,200, to develop and implement an aspect of their comprehensive school health program.

A team from Allen Central High School includes Kelly Hairston, Linda Nichols and King Fultz. In all, 25 teams from school districts all across the commonwealth will participate.

According to Dr. Don Calitri, chair of ECU's Department of Health Education and program coordinator, a comprehensive school health program is an organized set of policies, procedures, and activities designed to protect and promote the health and well-being of students and staff.

That has traditionally included healthful school environment and health education, Calitri said, but should also include, but not be limited to, guidance and counseling, physical education, food service, social work, psychological services and employee health promotion.

The session topics during the institute reflect that diversity. Special speakers, all but one from Kentucky, will address a wide range of subjects, including: classroom strategies for prevention of sexually transmitted diseases, tobacco prevention education, postponing sexual involvement, school violence, health risk appraisals, food labels, child abuse, death and grief, fitness for children and adolescents, the American Disability Act, school safety, HIV/AIDS, and eating disorders.

Besides the educational programs, participants will enjoy specially-prepared low-fat meals, utilize recreational facilities and participate in a health risk appraisal designed to help them experience a total wellness lifestyle.

Besides ECU's Department of Health Education, event sponsors are the Kentucky Department of Education, the Kentucky Comprehensive School Health Task Force (which Calitri chairs), the Kentucky Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance, the Kentucky Association for School Health, the Kentucky School Boards Association and the Kentucky Public Health Association.

Global trade series to air on WMMT

Floyd Countians can find out how the current restructuring of global politics and economics may impact the United States, and areas such as Appalachia, more dramatically than the coming of the railroads to the Appalachian mountains at the turn of the century, by turning it to WMMT.

This theory will be explored in a new 13-part series "The Secret of Global Trade" which will air on WMMT-FM beginning at 10 a.m. Wednesday morning, June 26. The programs will be broadcast weekly through September 18.

Some call it the "free market revolution." Free trade, economic growth, privatization, all these upbeat words are used to describe the new global economy. The down-side, however, is jobs moving overseas, the dismantling of social services, and a growing uneasiness about the environment.

"The Secret Side of Global Trade" takes the discussion beyond the fallout of North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and concentrates on the less understood affects of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). The hour-long programs in the series describe in detail the many changes that the GATT is bringing about.

4-H campers going for the gold this year

Floyd County 4-H Teen and Adult Council members are hard at work planning a week of fun for this year's 4-H Camp, July 22-26.

This year 4-H campers will have the opportunity to participate in their own Olympic games at the Diederick 4-H Center in Rush (near the Boyd and Lawrence County lines).

Potential campers need to pick up their applications at the Floyd County Extension Office at 670 South Lake Drive, Prestonsburg. The fee for the camp is $75 and scholarship applications are now available by request. Only 150 paid applications will be accepted.

Forms should be filled out and mailed, with the camp fee, to the Floyd County 4-H Council, 670 South Lake Drive, Prestonsburg, KY 41653. Additional information can be obtained by calling the extension office at 886-2668.

The new world-wide rules no longer just apply to trade in goods like automobiles and electronics but to every aspect of personal and public life in this country.

These programs were recorded last winter at the first "Teach-In" on the social, political and ecological cost of economic globalization to be held in this country.

Organizers in New York City were amazed when the conference, which had been planned for an audience of 400, was overwhelmed by the arrival of 2,000 participants, including Ralph Nader, and economists and thinkers from 19 countries.

The International Forum on Globalization, which sponsored the teach-in, is a citizen's alliance that advocates equitable, democratic and environmentally sustainable economics.

The group believes that "the march toward economic globalization is making fat cats of a few and mincemeat of the rest of us."

J.W. Pioneer Festival gospel sing moved to Mountain Arts Center

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

The Jenny Wiley Pioneer Festival will hold its gospel concert in the Mountain Arts Center in October.

Members of the Jenny Wiley Pioneer Festival Committee rescinded a previous vote to hold the gospel sing in the city's municipal parking lot at a meeting at Prestonsburg City Hall Monday night.

The issue came up for vote again after Prestonsburg Mayor Jerry Fannin sent a letter to the committee saying that he would support the move to the Mountain Arts Center if the members wanted to hold the gospel concert in the new facility. The committee also toured the arts center Friday and learned about the facility's amenities.

The center will seat more than a thousand people, comfortably, Greg Crum, center manager told the group during the tour. "There isn't a bad seat in the house," he said.

The entertainment complex is also accessible to the handicapped with ramps that lead through a passageway down to the front of the stage area. Seating is also handicap accessible.

He added that entertainers will be close to their audiences because of the seating and stage arrangement at the center. At Monday night's meeting, committee member Willis Newsome said he "loved the place."

"I didn't know about the arts center. Once I saw it and saw how nice it is, I want to hold the gospel sing there," Orville Cooley said.

"I'm a Christian and I want to hear the gospel sing, but I want to be comfortable, too," he said, chuckling.

Cooley made a motion at a meeting in May to hold the gospel sing in the city's parking lot. He told the committee he wanted to change his vote and made a motion to rescind his previous motion and the vote taken at the May Meeting. He also added to his motion the stipulation that if this year's gospel sing is not successful at the arts center, it should be brought back to the parking lot.

Jim Daniels, who is a great-grandson of Jenny Wiley for whom the festival was named, encouraged the group to consider holding the concert in the arts center.

"Isn't it better to go into a facility where there are no distractions...no interruption of rain?" Daniels asked.

Daniels seconded Cooley's motion and chairperson Donna Blackburn Wells called for a vote.

A majority of members voted to conduct the concert in the arts center. Three members opposed the move.

Entertainment planned during the gospel concert at the center include Charles Johnson and the Revivers; Billy Fields, a Floyd County native who is an up-and-coming name in gospel entertainment; and the Scott Thomas Singers.

In other business during the meeting, committee members:

- Approved a motion by Sue Webb to accept Elizabeth Miller on the festival committee.
- Agreed to buy polo-style shirts with the Jenny Wiley logo for committee members to purchase at cost.

Attending the meeting were Donna Wells, Willis Newsome, Verlin Nichols, Helene Branham, Phyllis Spradlin, David Hereford, Fred James, Orville Cooley, Brenda McKenzie, Sue Webb, Nancy Roberts, Gail McClure, Jim Daniels, Mike Wells, Debbie Wallen, and Elizabeth Miller.

The committee will meet July 9, at 6 p.m. at Prestonsburg City Hall.

Reid is the 18-year-old daughter of Jason Reid of Prestonsburg and Pam Reid of Stanville. She is an active member of the Beta Club, Champions Against Drugs, and was involved in the Cooperative Work Experience Program during her senior year. Reid plans on attending Eastern Kentucky University on a scholarship, where she will major in Communication Disorders (Speech Pathology).

Veteran's clinic celebrates fifth anniversary Friday

The Veteran's Primary Care Clinic in Prestonsburg will celebrate its fifth anniversary on Friday, June 21, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., according to Dr. Ronald Mann, Medical Director for the V.A. facility.

"We are very proud of the service and progress we have had over the past five years at the clinic and felt we should share the anniversary observance with the veterans and the public," said Mann.

The clinic currently averages about 10,000 patient visits a year. There are more than 19,000 veterans in the Eastern Kentucky service area, according to Mann.

The Veteran's Clinic is located on U.S. 23 N. across from the Social Security office. Refreshments will be served.

Applications released for future cadet classes

Floyd Countians interested in beginning a career as a Kentucky State Police trooper will soon have a chance to apply for the job.

Applications are now being released for future cadet classes on a continuous basis.

Tests will be conducted quarterly.

Applications can be obtained at any Kentucky State Police post, the Louisville or Lexington Driver Testing stations, or at the KSP Recruiting Office in Frankfort. Additional information on cadet classes can be obtained by calling (502) 695-6320.

Applications returned before June 28 and meet the basis qualifications, will be eligible for the first quarterly tests to be given at four sites, which are Cave City on July 13, Barbourville on July 20, Hopkinsville on July 27, and Frankfort on August 10. Except for Frankfort, the test sites will change each quarter.

Dates will be announced in the fall for those who return their applications after June 28.

To qualify, you must be a citizen of the United States; possess a valid drivers license, against which no more than six driver de-merit points have been assessed; possess a minimum of 60 college hours of credit or an associate's degree from the accredited college or university, or be a high school graduate with at least two years of active military duty or two years experience as a full-time sworn law enforcement officer; be of good moral character and in good health; and be no less than 21 years of age.

The next cadet class is tentatively scheduled for late spring next year.

Walk for Winners

Employees of two area banks walked May 18th to benefit Kentucky Special Olympics.

1996 Walk for Winners

On Saturday, May 18, the employees of The Bank Josephine and First Commonwealth joined together for a walk to benefit Kentucky Special Olympics. The volunteers from both banks raised a total of $1,608 for the program.

Special Olympics is a program of physical fitness, sports training, recreation and athletic competition for children and adults who are mentally handicapped. The program is unique in that it provides for competition at all ability levels by assigning them to competitive divisions based on both age and actual performance. Even participants in the lowest divisions may advance all the way to the International Games.

The Walk for Winners has become an annual fundraising activity, held jointly by the two banks since 1991. During this time, the Walk has grown into a state-wide event, thanks to the support provided by the Kentucky Bankers Association. Its Young Bankers Division provides volunteers to staff the various awards areas of the state games. Local bankers assisting at the games held on May 31 and June 1 at Eastern Kentucky University' campus in Richmond included Peggy Centers of First Commonwealth Bank and Michelle Hitchcock, Brian Ousley, and Donna Roope of The Bank Josephine. Roope was a member of the Young Bankers Division's Special Olympics Committee this past year and served as the Awards Manager for the swimming event during the state games.

Scholarships available for GED recipients

Floyd County adults who have attained their degrees through the GED study program may be eligible for scholarships.

The Foundation for Adult Education will award twenty-seven $500 scholarships to Kentucky GED recipients this summer.

The scholarships are funded through donations by the Ashland Inc. Foundation, the Humana Foundation and the Business and Professional Women's Organization of Kentucky.

Deadline for applying is July

10. Applicants must be 16 years old, GED recipients and have applied for full-time status to an institute of higher learning for the fall 1996 semester. Applicants for ten scholarships funded by the Humana Foundation must be going into the medical field.

The Foundation for Adult Education and Literacy, part of the Department for Adult Education and Literacy and the Workforce Development Cabinet, develops partnerships with businesses and organizations to support local adult education and literacy programs and student efforts.

In Kentucky, one in three adults does not have a high school diploma. The department administers local literacy, basic skills and GED preparation programs across Kentucky to help people raise their educational levels.

For information on applying for the scholarships, contact Regina Wilson, the foundation's acting executive director at (502) 564-5114.

Registration for "Kid's Health Kamp" underway

Summer '96 marks the fifth anniversary of "Kid's Health Kamp" sponsored by Our Lady of the Way Hospital. "Kid's Health Kamp" will be held July 29-August 2 at Camp Shawnee in Floyd County. Children ages 7-13 who have asthma, diabetes, or weight control problems are eligible to attend. Registrations are now being accepted.

"Kid's Health Kamp" began in 1992 as a day camp for children with asthma and diabetes. In 1993, the camp was changed and continues to be a week-long overnight camp for children who have asthma, diabetes or weight control problems. In 1995, 53 campers from Floyd, Knott, Pike, Johnson, Greenup, Fayette and Jefferson counties participated in the week-long event.

The camp's schedule includes events such as swimming, canoeing, paddleboating, nature walks, evening campfires, scavenger hunts, arts & crafts, bingo, basketball, volleyball and Olympic games. Daily education sessions covering information pertinent to each camper's condition are conducted each morning. Special presentations on drug, alcohol and smoking prevention, first aid and self-esteem are also in an important part of "Kid's Health Kamp."

Openings for the camp are limited and early registration is recommended. Parents may obtain further information by contacting the Community Health Education Department at (606) 285-5181, Ext. 301.

Latta to chair nation's first state task force

Prestonsburg resident and state tourism secretary Ann Latta will chair the nation's first state task force to examine all aspects of traveler safety.

Governor Paul Patton recently announced the formation of the task force and appointed Latta to head the project.

"Kentucky enjoys a worldwide reputation for outstanding hospitality," Patton said. "We want visitors to continue to feel safe and secure in our commonwealth."

The 28-member Kentucky Traveler Safety Task Force will examine a wide range of issues relating to traveler safety, Patton said. Tourism is Kentucky's third-largest industry, accounting for $7.2 billion in economic impact and 147,000 jobs.

Topics expected to be addressed include personal security for visitors, code enforcement for public facilities such as motels, emergency procedures training for front-line employees, motorist assistance, and hunting and boating safety. Patton noted that Kentucky expects thousands of international visitors this summer as the state hosts the Equitana USA international horse show and the PGA Tournament in Louisville and as the Olympics in Atlanta draws visitors passing through Kentucky.

Latta and Patton were joined for the announcement by Jim Host of Lexington, who chairs a national traveler safety task force established as an outgrowth to last year's White House Conference on Travel and Tourism. Host announced the formation of a national traveler safety hotline designed to assist international visitors.

Another Floyd Countian, State Police Commissioner Gary Rose, was also appointed to the task force.

The advisory panel is expected to meet quarterly and will report its recommendations to the Governor in one year.

MAGISTRATE - DIST. 2 TO THE VOTERS OF FLOYD COUNTY!

The people who are backing the Commissioner form of government would like for you to think that the Magistrates make $64,000 a year and that someone in each district is getting $600 a month for rent for parking the county equipment on their property. In the 10 years that I've been Magistrate, "NO ONE" has got "ANY" pay to park county equipment anywhere in District 2. MAYBE "THEY" COULD ANSWER THAT ONE!

People, I said I could show you my W-2's to prove to you what I make as a Magistrate and I'm going to do that! As you can see for the year of 1995, My "total salary" as Magistrate was $29,641 with "ACTUAL TAKE HOME" pay of $19,740 "AFTER TAXES." As you can see, it is below the $30,000, just like I said it was.

Form W-2 Wage and Tax Statement 1995

People, I believe this will resolve the salary issue. There are people out there who want you to look at the "salary issue" and not the "real issue." The "real issue" is—This county will no longer have 4 districts. It will be divided into 3 districts and each commissioner will pick up around 4,000 more people for each district. NO ONE, has decided "HOW" the "NEW BOUNDARIES" will be set.

People, that's why we have Elections EVERY 4 YEARS—so the "people" can decide "who" they want to represent them. LET'S NOT CHANGE the Government of Floyd County because a "few" people are unhappy with it.

Thank You

We would like to say a special thank-you to area churches, our family and our many friends for the prayers, donations and cards that have helped us so much during the recent illness of our grandson, David Fraley. We would also like to thank Wal-Mart for their donation of a four-wheeler. As David says, "I just love this thing." He continues to take chemotherapy treatments for his leukemia and still has a long road to recovery, but by the grace of God, David has been a tough little fighter and continues to recover. We appreciate your continued support and ask that you continue your prayers.

Searchers find vehicles in bottom of Paintsville Lake

by Ralph Davis
Paintsville Herald

A team of divers went into the cold, black waters at the bottom of Paintsville Lake Saturday and brought back evidence to support a long-standing, local rumor.

"We found what seems to be a vehicle about 50 feet down," said diver Keithen McKenzie.

McKenzie and Paul Newman, both volunteers with Paintsville Fire and Rescue, also came across the hood of what is believed to be a second vehicle. Both discoveries were made in the Spice Lick Branch area of the lake.

McKenzie and Newman were asked to take part in the search by the fire department. Fire Chief Bob Dixon said officials with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers requested that the fire department aid in the hunt for rumored vehicles at the bottom of the lake.

The find breathes new life into local rumors that cars and other vehicles reported stolen have been dumped into the lake.

And reports of Federal Bureau of Investigation interest in the discoveries lends credence to rumors that local officials may be involved.

The FBI has been investigating alleged wrongdoing in Johnson County government.

FBI agents were at the lake to monitor the search both on Saturday and during a magnet and sonar sweep of the same area the previous Wednesday. Officials with the fire department used a magnet to locate possible sunken vehicles during the Wednesday sweep. They returned around noon on Saturday to assist divers in locating spots to search.

During a first attempt Saturday, divers reported that the magnet had merely gotten hung in underwater tree branches.

But minutes later, a second "hit" proved to be successful.

"We landed right on top of it," said McKenzie as he emerged from the water.

He added that the vehicle was resting on its top. Divers could only make out the tires and underside of the vehicle, McKenzie said.

Later, McKenzie and Newman located the car hood some distance from the first find.

Dixon said the distance between the two finds leads him to believe at least two vehicles are involved.

"I'm kind of doubting [that the hood could be from the first car], but anything is possible," Dixon said.

Dixon also said a possible third car had been located, but the divers were unable to search the area.

"We got another real, real good indication of a spot where there might be another vehicle... but the divers were wore out," Dixon said. Dixon said another dive may take place later this month to search for more cars.

No attempt was made to bring the vehicles out of the lake Saturday, but Dixon said an attempt may be made to bring one out during the next dive. Saturday's dive was an attempt to find and document the existence of the vehicles, McKenzie said. An underwater camera was on hand to take pictures, but McKenzie said the water was too dark and murky.

"The visibility was zero," Dixon agree. "They [the divers] held their hands in front of their face and couldn't see them."

Stumbo nominated for achievement award

A Prestonsburg woman has been nominated for the first annual Kentucky Bar Association for Women (KBAW) Woman Lawyer of Achievement Award.

Janet L. Stumbo, a Prestonsburg attorney who became the first elected female judge on the Kentucky Supreme Court, was nominated for the award.

Justice Stumbo was the first female judge on the Kentucky Court of Appeals from the Seventh District and only the second woman on the court. She was elected to the court in 1993. She also served for three years as an assistant county attorney in Floyd County.

She received the Justice Award from the Kentucky Women Advocates in recognition for the use of evidence of spousal abuse as grounds for setting aside a settlement in a dissolution case, and her support in creating a shelter for abused women in Floyd County.

Ten lawyers were nominated for the award. The winner will be announced at the Kentucky Bar Association for Women's annual meeting Friday, June 21, at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Lexington.

The statewide nomination process recognizes women attorneys who have achieved professional excellence in their areas of legal practice, and has actively paved the way for other women lawyers. The successful candidate should have excelled in a variety of professional settings and personify excellence on either the state or local level.

The recipient of the award is chosen by the KBAW board of directors. The state award winner will be nominated by the KBAW for the American Bar Association Women of Achievement Award which annually recognizes lawyers who have achieved professional excellence within her field. The candidate should have excelled in a variety of professional settings and contributed both on a state and local level.

The nominees' achievements will be highlighted during a luncheon meeting with featured speaker, the Honorable Jennifer Coffman, United States District Judge for the Eastern District of the state.

The luncheon is open to the public. To make reservations for the luncheon, contact the KBAW at post office box 70212 in Louisville, or call KBAW President Ruth H. Baxter at (502) 732-6688.

John Rosenberg honored

John Rosenberg, executive director of Appalachian Research and Defense Fund of KY, Inc. (Appalred), was recently honored by the Appalred Board and staff at a dinner in Prestonsburg.

He was presented a plaque for 25 years of dedicated and distinguished service to legal services and the people it serves in Eastern and South-Central Kentucky. A commemorative pocket watch was presented to him as a gift from the board and staff.

Rosenberg received his J.D. in law from the University of North Carolina in 1962. In 1970 he became the executive director of Appalred. He is responsible for the oversight and operations of 11 legal services offices in Eastern and South-Central Kentucky.

Throughout the past quarter century, he has served on numerous boards and has been active in community service organizations to enhance the lives of the less fortunate.

Appalred will celebrated its silver anniversary on Saturday. There was be a picnic on the grounds of Clark Elementary School and a dinner in the evening at the Jenny Wiley Convention Center. For more information, or to reserve tickets for the dinner, contact Diane Fish, administrative assistant, at 886-3876 or 1-800-556-3876.

Jenny Wiley Legend expands to Paintsville

The legend of Jenny Wiley is growing. As a part of the continuing effort of Jenny Wiley Theatre's Education Outreach Committee, the Apprentice Troupe will present The Ballad of Jenny Wiley for a second straight year.

This season, however, the show has been expanded to include performances at Johnson County's Mountain Homeplace. The production will remain at the Jenny Wiley campground for two shows each week.

Based on the legend of local historical figure Jenny Wiley, this musical details the capture and captivity of the frontier folk heroine and the courage of her escape. Wiley's bravery earned her the respect of many of her native kidnapers, her white neighbors and friends, and generations of Kentuckians and others who have heard her story.

Paintsville native Janie Short returns from last year's cast, and this summer she stars as Jenny Wiley.

She is joined by several other regional apprentices as well as performers from outside the area.

Short said of her role this year, "I'm really honored and excited to have the opportunity to play such a strong female character."

The Ballad of Jenny Wiley opens June 22 and will be performed every Wednesday and Saturday at the campground. Shows at the Mountain Homeplace will be on June 28, July 26, and August 9. All shows begin at 11 a.m. and admission is free.

Boyd graduates from basic training

Brian Lee Boyd, the son of Anna Boyd Akers of Dana, and the late Manford Lee Boyd, and the stepson of Chester Akers Sr. of Dana, graduated from basic training at Lackland Air Force Base at San Antonio, Texas, May 3. He is presently stationed at Shepherd AFB in Texas, in AIT school specializing in heating, cooling, and ventilation. Boyd is a 1995 graduate of Betsy Layne High School.

The district-wide judging of Young Authors' books to determine county winners was held Saturday, May 11, at the First United Methodist Church in Prestonsburg. The event began with a buffet country-style breakfast for the judges and others who participated.

Patricia Watson, coordinator of Writing/Language Arts Programs, made opening remarks. Following the breakfast fellowship, the judging began. Judges for the competition included:

- P.C.C. faculty — Phyllis Honshell, Gay Herrin, Sandra Robertson, Robert Looney, and Melissa Forsythe;
- Floyd County Central Office staff — Angela Mullins, Drenda Cornett, and Patricia Watson;
- Retired teacher — Thelma Spears, who is also a former coordinator of the Young Authors program;
- Floyd County Times staff — Janice Shepherd, Tammy Goble and Polly Ward;
- Jenny Wiley State Resort Park faculty — Dr. Jim Kennedy and Kevin Branham;
- Region 8 Service Center staff — Willie Elliott and Nancy Price;
- Active teachers — Paula Collins, Charlotte Smith and Thelma Crider;
- Community representatives — Cinda Justice, Christine Meade, Josephine Branham, Audrey King, Betty Hargis, Alice Skeans, Chessie Cornett, Crate Meade Jr.,

Earnestine Meade, Imogene Caldwell, Judy Allen, Lillian Conley, Verbal Meek and Mildred Brooks.

These judges evaluated 552 books and selected a total of 75 county winners from the categories of poetry, illustrated, non-illustrated, informative, picture books and computer graphics.

From Prestonsburg to Rostov-na-Donu

In July, Prestonsburg resident Tina McFarland will move to Russia to work among some of the 150-plus schools for the deaf in the former Soviet Union.

Working with The CoMission, a historic partnering of more than 80 evangelical organizations seeking to reach that vast land with the message of Christ, McFarland will be part of a team of 8-10 in Rostov-na-Donu along Russia's southern coast between the Black Sea and the Caspian Sea. Three schools for the deaf are located in that city which has a total population of 1.2 million.

The mission is in response to Russia's request for help in "filling the gaps" within its education system since the fall of communism which began in 1989.

Alexander G. Asmilov, the Russian Federation's Deputy Minister of Education, signed the protocol requesting assistance for instructing that country's teachers in the teaching of Christian Ethics and Morality with the goal of raising up national leaders with a heart for leading their own country to God.

A private foundation in the United States made a commitment to provide major funding support to Christian professionals working in the deaf community at large who would be willing to volunteer at least one year of related service in Russia. At the request of a representative from that foundation and a member of CoMission's Russian Deaf Task Force, McFarland began working through the process of application a year ago. The past months have been spent in preparation for going.

"It's an intense process," she says. "Physicals, exams, interviews, orientations, and reading lots of materials and books are all a part of the process. Then there's my attempt to learn some spoken Russian, but since we'll have several interpreters at our disposal for a good while there, I'm really focusing on learning Russian Sign Language."

Russian Sign is significantly different from American Sign, she says, but much easier to learn in that both are conceptual languages.

Traveling as an educator under the diplomatic umbrella of "humanitarian aid," McFarland's assignment will be to work with teachers in those schools, providing learning resources and techniques for the teaching of Bible-based ethics. With a deaf population of almost 10 percent in a country with 11 time zones, meeting this specialized challenge is not logistically an easy one. McFarland says she very much agrees with the philosophy of equipping the teachers to teach. "I could spend several lifetimes attempting to reach all the deaf children in that vast country provided the opportunity was always there," she notes. "However, I believe we utilize God's resources more effectively by equipping the teachers who will then spread the Word which will influence many more lives in an accelerated way."

She adds that she is "hopeful for more deaf people to respond to the needs in Russia," and trusts that her example will encourage deaf Christians to consider how they can make a difference in the lives of deaf persons living in Russia.

A private donor has invested the necessary funding to produce specially-designed materials for deaf students. "These contain lots of vividly-colored pictures and are written in a basic Russian more easily understood to deaf nationals." Some videotapes, including the Jesus film produced by Campus Crusade for Christ, have been interpreted into Russian Sign Language.

McFarland expressed her gratitude to the deaf people of Eastern Kentucky. "In many ways, my experience here has equipped me for the work in Russia. The deaf community here in the mountains tends to be a culturally closed one while Russia's deaf community has been a politically closed one for 75 years. Consequently, there seem to exist several similarities, among them the concept of 'home signs' indigenous to specific areas and high rate of congenital deafness."

In a February issue of The Moscow Times, Andrew Smith, head of the World Health Organization's deafness prevention program, was quoted as saying, "Russian figures are at the top end of the range." The Times went on to state that official statistics put the number of deaf people in that country at around 12 million, out of a total population of 150 million. And according to Vladimir Bazoyev, who heads the Moscow Association for the Deaf, that is probably an underestimate.

Additionally, certain antibiotics continue to be administered in Russia which, at certain concentrations in the bloodstream, damage the auditory nerve and cause deafness. In America, great strides have been made in the prevention of the onset of childhood deafness due to the development of sophisticated medical equipment. Russian doctors, without that equipment, must continue to determine as best they can the most effective method of treatment for life-threatening illnesses such as meningitis.

During a two-week information-gathering mission to Russia in 1994, McFarland was able to make several contacts which she hopes will be helpful when she returns this summer. On the other hand, she says that "[I]f one watches the news, it is easy to see how things change on a daily basis there. Everything is in a constant state of flux and what is true today may not be true tomorrow. Flexibility will be of utmost importance in relating to the people and their culture."

McFarland goes on to say that consideration must also be made for the historical perspective in Russia which is so very different than what is found here in the United States. "America is only 220 years old. Russia has more than 1,000 years in its heritage," she notes.

McFarland will meet her team in Chicago on July 6. At that time, they will engage in a two-week crash course in Russian history and culture along with the training to teach the curriculum developed by Bruce Wilkinson, president of Walk Through the Bible. The team will embark for Russia on July 23 from O'Hare International Airport in Chicago. Should changes develop within the Russian Federation which make going in-country not feasible, visas have already been completed which will allow the teams to be deployed quickly to another needy nation such as the Ukraine, Latvia, or another surrounding country not under Russia's government.

In Prestonsburg until June 28, McFarland says she's going miss the people here. "I moved to Eastern Kentucky four years ago prepared to spend the rest of my life," she says. "God has made His calling clear, provided the financial resources, and made the way open for me to move to Russia at this juncture in my life...I'll go there prepared to spend the rest of my life if that's what it takes. The best place to be is in the center of God's will...and right now thousands of deaf Russians are depending on me to make that choice."

The public is cordially invited to attend McFarland's commissioning service, which will be hosted by First Baptist Church of Allen on Saturday, June 15 at 6 p.m. A reception will follow.

After June 28, McFarland may be reached at her sister's home: c/o Nicki Johnson; Route 2, Box 151-A; Liberty, Kentucky 42539. Mail will be forwarded via a courier to her in Russia from there. Those wishing to make tax-deductible contributions to this particular endeavor may do so by making checks payable to: Allen First Baptist Church, P.O. Box 541, Allen, KY 41601, with McFarland's name on the memo line. Those wishing to receive McFarland's newsletters while in-country may also request to be placed on her mailing list.

A Look At Sports Football practice to open a week earlier

The high school football season will get an earlier starting time this season since the KHSAA has approved starting football practice a week earlier.

South Floyd football coach Donnie Daniels is anxiously awaiting the date and is excited about the depth his ball club will have this season.

"We are going to have a lot of depth," he said recently. "This will be the first time ever that we have been able to do this."

The depth will allow the Raiders to not have so many players going both ways. Coach Daniels says he is hopeful that all-star defensive end Scotty Johnson will be in shape to play on both sides of the football.

"We are looking at Scotty as one of our receivers this year," said the South Floyd coach. "We tried him there in the passing camp that we were at this summer. He looked good. But I'm afraid that Scotty will be a one-way player unless he can get in shape. He was our defensive end last year and a good one. We need him to go both ways for us but he will have to get in better shape."

Finding replacements for standouts Terrence Mullins and Aaron Hall is a concern for Coach Daniels.

"That is a big concern we have," he said. "We are looking at five players there now — Scotty, along with Mark Smallwood, Colby Little, Justin Holbrook and John Stumbo."

"John was Terrence's back up last year and I expect him to be there this year. This is Colby's and Justin's first year to come out."

Hall signed to play football at Cumberland College this fall. Both Hall and Mullins were two of the top receivers in the county last season.

Coach Daniels said the increase in numbers has been a pleasant surprise this year.

"We've had 20-25 work every day and we're pleased with that. There are other kids who haven't come out yet that we know will. We've had some come out this year who haven't been here in the past," he said.

One player is Jarrod Johnson of Osborne Elementary who is expected to make a mark in high school football.

Dodgers hold off Cubs in 4-3 win

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Casey Brown tossed a two-hitter for the Harold Dodgers, but had to hold off a sixth-inning rally to preserve a 4-3 win over the Mud Creek Cubs in the Harold-Allen-Prater Little League at the Allen Park last week.

Brown allowed only the two hits, both coming in the three-run sixth for the Cubs. Brown fanned 11 batters.

Matt Slone took the loss for the Cubs, going the distance. He allowed four runs while giving up four hits. He had six strikeouts.

The Dodgers led 2-0 after the first inning on a one-out walk to Preston and Tom Firestine's RBI double. Firestine scored on an error.

The Dodgers added two runs in the fifth inning in what turned out to be the winning frame. Kyle Potter walked and scored on Brown's two-out triple. Brown came home on a passed ball to give the Dodgers a 4-0 lead.

The lead was threatened in the Cubs' half of the sixth inning when they plated three runs, but had the tying run tagged out at third base to end the game.

Roberts opened the inning with a single, moved to second on an error on the play and stole third. He was nailed at the plate on a throw from shortstop Jeremy Click to catcher Brett Preston. Nathan Hamilton then walked and Tackett drew a walk from Brown to put runners at first and second. Matt Slone reached on a fielder's choice

Yates powers Cards past Martin Reds

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The Martin Cards advanced to the second round of the Beaver Creek Little League tournament Monday night with a 20-10 mercy win over the Martin Reds in first round play at the Martin Park.

Josh Yates provided the offense from the plate for the Cards with four hits in four at bats, picking up five RBIs. Yates tripled in the first and second innings. He also had a second-inning single and a safety in the third inning.

Steve Goble was the winning pitcher in going the four innings for the Cardinals. He walked 11 batters, but struck out nine while allowing four Red hits.

Jared Harlow suffered the setback for the Reds, going just one inning and allowing eight runs on three hits. He walked three batters and hit two. Jason Holbrook worked an inning and two-thirds

Shepherd hits sixth homer of year in 7-1 win over Marlins

Tom Howell, coach of the Prestonsburg Mets Little League team, said it was a team effort all the way after his team finished the season 13-1 and were crowned champions of the Prestonsburg Little League division.

The Mets posted a 7-1 win over a good Prestonsburg Marlins team this past Friday night to cap a successful season. Kyle Calhoun went the distance in picking up the win, striking out eight batters and walking two.

"We've had good pitching all season," said Howell, "especially from Kyle and Don (Shepherd). With four 12-year-old players, we've got excellent hitting from them."

Shepherd is one of those 12 year olds and he completed the regular season in a big way with two hits, including his league leading sixth home run of the season, a solo shot over the left centerfield fence in the fourth inning.

But the defense for the Mets also played a big part in this year's success story.

"Chris (Bentley) is only nine years old but he plays very good defense for us at second base," said Coach Howell. "Greg May at first base has done an excellent job."

The Mets scored an unearned run in the first inning to take a 1-0 lead after Calhoun reached on an error with one out. He moved to third on a catcher's error and scored on a passed ball.

Calhoun had little trouble through the first two innings, giving up on a walk to Ryan Martin in the first inning. The Mets then plated two runs in the bottom of the second to go up 3-1. Josh Woods and Josh Bentley drew lead-off walks to start the second. Ryan Martin got Chris Bentley to ground to second and fanned May before Michael Fannin hit a flare to center field, scoring Woods. Bentley scored on Calhoun's safety to make it a 3-1 game.

Martin pitched out of a bases loaded jam in the Mets' third inning, leaving the bases loaded. He

Tackett's slam helps A's to mercy win over McDowell, 13-3

by Ed Taylor

Adam Tackett blasted a grand slam home run as the Mud Creek A's scored six times in the fifth inning to record a 13-3 mercy win over McDowell in Babe Ruth baseball action last week.

Kenneth Johnson picked up the win for the A's, but he also contributed from the plate with three hits.

The win improved the A's overall record to 3-2.

A Look At Sports

"He says he is coming out," said the Raiders' mentor.

Like most coaches, Daniels would like to see a return of spring football practice to the high school ranks.

"It would help us," he said. "I would like to see them give us the weeks between the regional baseball tournament up to the first of June. We could get a lot done in those two weeks."

"In our passing league we found out a lot of things we need to work on and spring football practice would afford us the same," he said.

Daniels said the county football coaches have finalized their gridorama set for mid-August. Prestonsburg will not play in the grid, but Allen Central will face Jenkins, South Floyd will play Powell County and Betsy Layne will take on Elkhorn City.

The Raiders will host their own gridorama on August 23 when they face Magoffin County and Allen Central plays Shelby Valley.

"Our grid should be a good one to watch," said Daniels. "We're going to have a good bunch of kids back. Magoffin County is going to be decent. Shelby Valley will return a good team and Glenn (Reeves) will have a strong team at Allen Central."

South Floyd will open their regular season on August 30 in the Shelby Valley Bowl. Their first home game will be against county rival Betsy Layne. Louisville Beth Haven (October 26) is new on the Raiders' schedule this season.

South Floyd made their first playoff appearance last year and is picked to return this season.

Like everyone else, Coach Daniels is awaiting the announcement in relation to the coaching position at Prestonsburg High School.

The football Raiders will be attending the Kentucky-Tennessee All-Star football game in Lexington this weekend. Daniels said the team, along with last year's eighth grade players, are to meet at the high school before 2:30 this Friday.

ALL-STAR TOURNAMENTS

The Little League season has concluded and the different county leagues have chosen their all-star teams. The Little League, senior league and minor league all-star teams will be in tournament action starting July 1 at Paintsville.

Don Willis, Prestonsburg Youth League Director, tried to bring the Little League All-Star tournament to Prestonsburg's Archer Park but to no avail.

"We could have hosted it if we would have hosted the senior league as well," said Willis. "But with the carnival that comes in at that time we could not have access to the senior league field. So they wanted to host both senior league and Little League at the same place."

Paintsville will once again be the site for both tournaments.

The Beaver Creek Little League, despite losing five teams from last year and going to one division, will field two All-Star teams again this year. With the shortage of players in the league, it would have been better to have had one all-star team and a stronger team.

Everett Ray Moore told me that he was coming out of retirement and going to field a team at Drift next year.

New lights are going up at the Minnie Field with the poles already in place. With the installation of lights, it would benefit the Beaver Creek Little League to play all their games at the park.

I would like to see the league grow to 10 teams and have two five team divisions instead of the present playoff system they now have. Also develop a National and American League format. Each team would play within their own division during the regular season, with a short division playoff following the regular season.

The two winners (each division) are pennant winners and meet in a five-game series to determine the League World Series champion.

Each game would bring more interest from the fans and make each game special.

After the season, bring in a truckload of watermelons and have a day to present trophies to ALL players in the league and enjoy a night of eating watermelon.

Combine your all-star teams and let them take on the "dads" in the league in a fun game. Have all this after the Little League season is over. It creates more interest in the Little League game.

I've been involved in this format before and have seen it work over and over.

PHONE CALLS...

This past weekend I received two phone calls from former Little League players who played for me when I lived in Warsaw, Indiana. Donnie Kinsey and Charlie Gripenborg were two who played for me. Charlie lives in Friendship, Wisconsin, and Donnie still resides in Warsaw.

In the late 1960s and early 1970s, the Pirates of the Warsaw Little League won 81 consecutive games (I thought it was 78) before we were beaten by the then-Cardinals.

Well, Donnie is getting together a "Pirate Reunion" of all the players from the past teams I had coached. This is why Charlie phoned me Sunday. He is now 38 years old, living in a log cabin in the wilds of Wisconsin. It was good to hear his voice after 27 years. I look forward to gathering with them once again and meeting their families.

Until Friday, good sports everyone and be good sports!

Adkins had walked, but Brent Hamilton and Eric McKinney struck out. Jacob Carroll walked to fill the bases Fred Gray was issued a base on balls, forcing home Williams. Johnson then walked with Adkins coming on to score. Tackett then unloaded the bases with his long home run, picking up four RBIs and making it a 13-2 game in the top of the fifth. Ryan Hall singled in the inning following Tackett's blast but was left stranded when Williams, batting for the second time in the inning, fanned.

McDowell scored a single run in the bottom of the fifth but could not avoid the mercy rule after five innings.

McDowell had taken a 2-0 lead in the second inning on a base hit by Nick Moore and Mullins' two-out double. Mullins scored on Jimmy Stumbo's RBI single.

The A's went in front 5-2 in a five-run third inning in which they sent nine batters to the plate. McKinney started the inning by being hit by a pitch. Carroll walked and Gray doubled home McKinney and Carroll with a ground ball into left field. Gray scored on Johnson's base hit for a 4-2 game. Ryan Hall walked with one out and he scored behind Gray on Adkins' long triple to right field.

Byron Hall singled in the third for McDowell, but was left stranded after stealing second base.

After McDowell went out in order in the fourth, the A's pushed across two more runs in the bottom of the inning. A lead-off walk to McKinney and Gray's triple accounted for one run. Gray scored on Johnson's RBI single.

Johnson finished with three hits for the A's and Gray collected two, as did Adkins.

with Justin Hall pitching an inning and a third.

The Cardinals broke loose for 11 runs in the second inning to build a 13-0 lead. The Reds plated four runs in the top of the third to keep the mercy rule from being effective.

The Cards pushed home five runs in the third for an 18-4 lead.

Goble experienced some wildness in the top of the fourth when the Reds scored six times.

Goble gave up a one-out base hit to Wes Burke and walked the next five batters to force home two runs. Dustin Justice then roped a base hit to center field, scoring two more to make it a 18-9 game. Justice later scored on a bases loaded walk to Jeni Spurlock.

The mercy rule did come into effect when the Cards pushed home a controversial run in the bottom of the fourth inning.

Yates tripled to lead off the game for the Cardinals and he scored on an error off the bat of Brian Chaffins. Chaffins came home with the second run on a walk to Chuckie Swope with the bases loaded.

Yates bounced a single up the middle in the second inning, picking up an RBI. He came to bat the second time in the inning and tripled with the bases loaded.

Chris Owens and Chaffins had doubles for the Cardinals.

Jason Holbrook had four RBIs for the Cardinals, including a bases loaded triple in the third inning. He walked with the bases loaded in the fourth, picking up an RBI.

gave up a lead off hit to Steve Vanover, walked Andrew Howell and gave up a single to Shepherd to load the bags. But he fanned Woods and Bentley before getting Chris Bentley to ground into a force play.

Martin was so fortunate in the fourth inning when he gave up four runs. Fannin singled with one out and Calhoun doubled him home. He scored on Vanover's RBI triple and Howell's ground ball to short scored Vanover. Shepherd capped the rally with his sixth home run of the season.

The Marlins pulled off the game's only double play in the fifth inning.

Fannin, Calhoun, Vanover and Shepherd collected two hits each for the Mets.

Pikeville stays unbeaten with trio of victories

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The Pikeville Big Sandy team remained in first place with a perfect 6-0 record after posting three wins last week in the 16-18-year-old league.

Cade Cinnamon pitched six complete innings in recording a 12-5 win over the Allen Central Reds in a game played last Tuesday at the Allen Park. Cinnamon walked three batters while striking out seven. He also had two hits in the game, both doubles, and one RBI. Kyle Bow collected three hits for the winners with a double and triple, two RBIs.

Kaleb Yates took the loss for the Allen Central team.

Pikeville scored four runs in the first on a lead-off double by Clark Batten and a single by Shannon Potter. Both runners came home on Bow's two-run double. Cinnamon later walked and scored on an error.

Allen Central scored once in the bottom of the inning on a double by Donnie Owens and R. Hunter's RBI single.

Two walks and an error led to two runs for Pikeville in the second inning. Two runs came home on Brian Casto's two-run double.

Pikeville made it an 8-1 game in the third with two runs. Cinnamon, who doubled, and Todd McCoy scored on Eric Stepp's two-run single.

The Reds made it an 8-3 game with a two-run third. A walk, a double by Duff and Hunter scored one run. Owens then collected his second double of the game scoring Hunter.

Pikeville added a pair of runs in each of the fifth and sixth innings. Both runs in the fifth were unearned. Cinnamon doubled home a run in the sixth.

Pikeville posted a doubleheader sweep of Elkhorn City last Friday at the Pikeville field. They took game one 11-1 and won the nightcap 10-0.

Noah Batton was the winning pitcher for Pikeville in game one, going just the first two innings of the mercy game. Bow hurled the final two innings for Pikeville.

Shannon Potter collected two hits for the winners and had two RBIs. Pikeville scored six times in the third inning as 10 batters paraded to the plate.

Potter singled home two runs for Pikeville in the second inning. He had a single in the first when Pikeville scored three times. Cinnamon hit a two-run home run for Pikeville in the first.

Elkhorn scored their only run, an unearned run, in the fourth inning.

In the second game, Clark Batten won over Elkhorn with a 10-0 shutout after tossing a three-hitter. Eric Stepp collected three hits for Pikeville and had four RBIs. Stepp single home two runs in the first inning, had a single RBI in the third and fifth innings. He doubled home a run in the fifth.

Potter collected two hits in the nightcap game and had one RBI. Brian Casto had a two-run single in the fifth when Pikeville scored five times.

Cards edge Orioles, 12-11

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The Martin Cardinals scored a run in the bottom of the sixth inning and edged the front running Duff Orioles 12-11 in the final regular season game in the Beaver Creek Little League last Friday at the Martin Park.

Mike Murray drew a bases loaded walk from Robert Fitzpatrick to send Steve Goble home with the winning run. It marked the third time this season the Cardinals have handed D.I Henson's ballclub a defeat.

"We seem to be able to beat everyone but the Cardinals," said the Orioles' coach. "I don't know what we'll do when we play them in the playoffs."

to load the bases for Shawn Rose. Rose tripled, scoring all three runners in front of him to make it a 4-3 game. After Nathan Hall struck out, Rose was tagged out at the plate for the final out of the game.

Justin Kidd took the mound to face the Allen Astros last Tuesday at the Allen Park and came away with a 9-2 victory to improve the Dodgers to 10-3 on the season.

Kidd went the distance for Harold, allowing two runs on three hits. He walked six batters and struck out six.

Lafferty was the losing pitcher for Allen, working the first three innings. Lafferty struck out four batters and allowed five runs. Stevens relieved Lafferty in the fourth and he gave up four runs. Stevens struck out five.

The two teams were tied at 1 after two innings. Harold led 1-0 on consecutive hits by Brown and Kidd. The Astros tied the game in the bottom of the second on a walk to Burchett and Aaron Swiger's RBI single.

Harold pushed home four runs in the third inning on a lead-off double from Nat Blackburn, a hit batsman and Jeremy Clark's two-run double. Clark scored on Firestone's double to make it a 5-1 game.

Seven batters went to the plate in the fifth for Harold with four runners scoring. Chase Hamilton singled to start the inning and Potter drew a walk. Clark scored Hamilton with an RBI safety. With one out, Brown unloaded a long home run to score Potter and Clark ahead of him.

Allen added their second run in the sixth on a one out double off the bat of Nelson and three consecutive walks. The Dodgers will face the Prater

Creek Indians tonight at the Allen Park for first place in the league.

Conley, Kinzer winners at Thunder Ridge

by Ed Taylor
Staff Writer

J.R. Conley took home the checkered flag at Thunder Ridge Saturday night and he also took home the $7,500 prize money in winning the Late Model event in the Manufactured Home 100 that began last Friday.

Conley finished in front of Charlie Swartz, a $3,000 winner, and third-place finisher Jackie Boggs, who took home $2,000.

Allen's Brandon Kinzer drove his number 18 car to the winner's circle in the Modified event. Kinzer's win was worth $700. Second place went to Jackie Everidge ($325) and Martin's Jim Branham placed third ($200).

Jim Lemaster drove his number 3 racer to victory lane in the Super Bomber division and received the winner's share of $600. Brandon Mason and Allen Turner finished second and third respectively.

In the Bomber division, Tim Mason collected $500 for taking the top spot, ahead of Mikey Hall and Kenny Lewis. Hall received $150 for his efforts, while Lewis received $100.

Billy Johnson won the Road Hog race and a check for $200.

This Saturday night at Thunder Ridge, it will be a run for the money in the Late Model event with the winner taking home $5,000. The Modified event will pay $500 with the Bomber division winner receiving $500.

July 6 Thunder Ridge will feature the Bluegrass Blowout beginning at 1 p.m. Live harness racing returns to the complex on July 10.

Jeff Gordon wins at Pocono; first to go over million mark in '96

by Gerald Hodges
Racing Reporter

Jeff Gordon dominated the Winston Cup UAW-GM Teamwork 500 at Pocono, Sunday by leading 75 of the 200 laps.

In contrast with the 1995 race, when he missed a gear shift on a restart and had to settle for 16th, this year he crossed the finish line 3.710 seconds ahead of second-place finisher, Ricky Rudd.

"It was a heck of a car," Gordon said. "Rusty (Wallace) was the only other car that had anything for us. But, I think we would have had something for him, also."

Gordon becomes the first driver in 1996 to go over $1 million in winnings. This year's winning's total $1,069,482. His career total now stands at $7,967,967.

Rusty Wallace pitted under green for fresh tires on lap 131. Then one of two things happened. Either, the jack man dropped the left side of the car too quickly, or Wallace in a hurry to leave the pits, snatched his Miller Ford Thunderbird into gear too suddenly. The result was a broken transmission. Wallace pulled out of the pits, but then coasted back on a service road, out for the balance of the race.

Ricky Rudd, who finished second in the Tide Ford Thunderbird, said, "It's a brand new car. We didn't quite have a winning car, but a good car. Next week, we hope we can have it running a little better."

Dale Jarrett, who crashed during qualifying Friday, drove with a fractured leg and rib. He finished 38th.

Dale Earnhardt had to call it quits after 129 laps due to motor problems. His Chevrolet Monte Carlo dropped a valve into a cylinder, causing the engine to lock up.

Earnhardt, who has dominated the points race lost 118 points. He now has 1,968. Second place, Terry Labonte has 1,916, followed by Gordon, 1,904, Dale Jarrett, 1,735 and Ricky Rudd, 1,724.

TOP TWENTY FINISHERS:
1) Jeff Gordon, 2) Ricky Rudd, 3) Geoff Bodine, 4) Mark Martin, 5) Bobby Hamilton, 6) Morgan Shepherd, 7) Terry LaBonte, 8) Jimmy Spencer, 9) Jeff Burton, 10) Todd Bodine, 11) Sterling Marlin, 12) Wally Dallenbach, 13) Bobby Hillin, 14) Michael Waltrip, 15) Jeremy Mayfield, 16) John Andretti, 17) Ricky Craven, 18) Ken Schrader, 19) Ted Musgrave, 20) Kyle Petty.

NASCAR BUSCH GRAND Cards

The Cardinals spotted the Orioles a 9-0 lead after three innings and came roaring back with seven runs in the fourth to make it a 9-7 game. Chris Owens started the rally with a solo home run. Jonathan Hall singled in front of walks to Goble and P.D. Francis before Chuckie Swope struck out for the first out. Fitzpatrick then walked Murray and Jeremy Ross was safe on an error with two runs scoring. Josh Yates ripped a single, making it a 9-5 game. Two runs came home on an error in right field off the bat of Brian Chaffins.

The Orioles went out in order in their half of the fifth inning, but the Cards took a 11-9 lead with four runs in the fifth. A hit batsman and four consecutive walks accounted for three runs. Rossi Samons doubled home the fourth for the Cards.

Duff tied the game with a two-run sixth. Nathan Sturgill was hit by a pitch leading off and with one out, Beth Combs walked and Chad Samons ripped a two-run double to tie the game at 11.

The Cards scored in the bottom of the sixth to take the 12-11 win. The winning run scored with two out. Fitzpatrick retired Owens on strikes and got Hall to fly out to centerfield. But he lost his control by walking Goble, Francis, Swope and Murray to send home the winning run.

Duff plated two runs in the first inning for a 2-0 game. Six runs crossed home plate in the second for the Orioles as they led 8-0.

Shannon Sizemore tripled home the two runs in the first for Duff. Two walks and an RBI single by Shannon Moore made it a 3-0 game. Josh Bently had a two-run double and Combs followed with a run-scoring double and she came home on Samons' base hit.

Duff made it a 9-0 game with a single run in the fourth.

NATIONAL LEADERS

1) David Green, 1,768, 2) Randy Lajoie, 1,733, 3) Todd Bodine, 1,297, 4) Phil Parsons, 1,483, 5) Curtis Markham, 1,450, 6) Larry Pearson, 1,371, 7) Jeff Purvis, 1,309, 8) Jeff Green, 1,309, 9) Glenn Allen, 1,307, 10) Chad Little, 1,290.

Record-setting event for Fields and local powerlifter team

The Pro-Fitness Powerlifting Team of Prestonsburg competed in the Natural Athlete Strength Association (NASA) Kentucky State Bench Press and Powerlifting meet in Lexington on May 25 and several records were set by Don Fields, owner of Pro-Fitness.

Fields captured first place in the 181 Sub Masters. In the first two lifts of the event Fields posted an American record squat of 650 pounds and an American record bench of 380 pounds, finishing the day with a 551 deadlift for a total of 1,581 pounds, which was also an American record.

In the bench press division, Charles Brown, formerly of Pikeville, placed first in the 165 Pure Novice bench with an impressive 292 pounds.

Local deputy Shawn Roop took first place in the 198 Natural, Intermediate and Beginners classes. Roop had a 545 squat, and a 540 deadlift for 1,477 total.

Local bodybuilder Randy Burruss fared quite well in his first powerlifting meet. Burruss collected three first place awards (Pure, Pure Novice and Sub Masters Beginners), and two second place awards (Beginners Open and Sub Masters) in the 220 class. Burruss had a 451 squat, 336 bench and a 518 deadlift to finish with 1,305.

Pernell Little of Pikeville placed second in the 198 Beginner's Open and Sub masters I with a 551 squat, 386 bench and 540 deadlift for 1,477 total.

In the 308s it was Jim Tom Allen having his best day ever as he posted a 705 squat, 462 bench press and 650 deadlift to finish with a personal best

Pro-Fitness Powerlifting team

NASCAR Connection By Ben Trout

It's a trival thing...

I recently stumbled upon a nifty little book of NASCAR trivia and if you are like me, practically any type of trivia will keep you occupied for hours on end. I have been known to get pretty fired up in a heated game of Trivial Pursuit. But man, this is NASCAR trivia! Right up the alley of this 'old die-hard.

The book is entitled "The Great American Stock Car Racing Trivia Book" and it sells for around six bucks. It is paperback and is available at most bookstores. I thought it would be nice to share some of these questions with you. The answers are at the end of the column, but don't you dare look until you have explored every resource for the right responses.

Let me start you out win an easy one:

- 1) Who was the first driver to break the 200 mph speed barrier on a closed course?
- 2) Who was the first rookie to win a super-speedway race in his debut season?
- 3) Junior Johnson used to have a chicken for a passenger while he was driving. True or false?
- 4) Name the only two tracks that were on the first NASCAR circuit in 1949 that still host Winston Cup events?
- 5) Who is the only driver to start and finish every race in a single season?
- 6) Name the year that R.J. Reynolds joined forces with NASCAR to become the Winston Cup Series?
- 7) Name the man that won the NASCAR Heroism Award in 1964 for his efforts to rescue Fireball Roberts from his burning car?
- 8) Who is the oldest individual to ever win the NASCAR Rookie of the Year title?
- 9) Who was the youngest driver to ever win a Winston Cup race?

Hint - it ain't Jeff Gordon.

10) From the oddities department — Who was the driver that used to wear a life jacket at Daytona for fear of crashing his car into Lake Lloyd?

11) Who won the last race at the old Riverside (CA) road course?

12) What and when was the first NASCAR race shown on television?

ANSWERS: 1) Buddy Baker in a Dodge at Talladega (200.447 mph). 2) Ron Bouchard in 1981 at Talladega. 3) True. 4) North Wilkesboro and Martinsville. 5) Cale Yarborough, in 1977. 6) 1970. 7) Ned Jarrett. 8) Dick Trickle. 9) Bobby Hillin was age 22 when he won the 1985 Talladega 500. 10) "Tiger" Tom Pistone. 11) Rusty Wallace. 12) The Firecracker 250 as part of ABC's Wide World of Sports.

So how did you do? Granted, some of these were pretty tough. I must say, that I found myself thumbing through the pages to find the answers to a majority of the questions. If you're into this kind of thing, pick up the book. It'll give you plenty of "trivial" enjoyment.

This weekend, the NASCAR Winston Cup Series will be in "car-maker country" for the running of the GM Goodwrench Dealer 400 at Michigan. CBS will televise the race and coverage gets underway at 1 p.m.. Bobby Labone is the defending champion.

201 Speedway

by Chris Belcher
Contributing Writer

Stock car racing resumed at the 201 speedway this past Saturday after a week delay because of rain. The track enjoyed the largest number of drivers as the biggest crowd of the racing season was on hand to take part in "Get Acquainted Night."

The special night was to allow younger racing fans an opportunity to tour the quarter-mile track from their favorite place, inside the car of their favorite driver on the passenger side.

After running the field of over 70 drivers through 10 heat races, the starting grids were set for all four divisions.

In the 15 lap claim feature, Larry Blanton held off challenger Keith Potter to claim the $250 prize money, but the win didn't come easy.

Menifee Napier was the early leader breaking ahead of Blanton and Potter in the early going. But a caution flag on lap two showed when Potter bumped Blanton's car and was sent to the rear of the pack.

With Potter in the rear, Blanton then set his sights on Napier with the two veteran drivers often pulling side-by-side for most of the race. On lap six, Napier got out of shape coming out of the fourth turn allowing Blanton to take over the front spot.

Carlos Barton became the latest challenger for Blanton and came close to claiming the lead in the eighth lap when Blanton went high on turn four. However, Blanton was able to right himself as the two passed the flag stand.

By the ninth lap, the first four positions were close enough to throw a tarp over with Blanton leading followed by Barton, Doug Saylor, and Potter, who had moved quickly from the back to make his bid for the lead.

Potter moved past Saylor on the 11th lap and cleared Barton's car on the 12th. Blanton and Potter battled for the checkered flag with Blanton crossing first for first place. Potter took second, Barton placed third and Saylor fourth.

Van Lear's Gary Combs saw his big lead and racing night come to a close as he had to exit in the 20 lap Super Bomber feature. Combs opened up a sizable lead over Salyersville's Danny Patrick only to experience mechanical problems on the 11th lap and was forced to the pit area after the midway point.

Patrick took charge and held off Jim Lemaster from lap 12 to the 17th lap when Lemaster made his move for the lead. After challenging Patrick side-by-side for several laps, Lemaster held off Patrick the final three laps and crossed the finish line and went on to the winner's circle.

Veteran driver Jim Ison, after posting the fourth fastest qualifying time of 15.94, and winning his heat race, established the pace for the 25 lap Late Model feature, taking the point of the race early over Belle, West Virginia's Roy Hobbs. Hobbs brought out the first caution of the feature on the 14th lap.

Ison collected his third Late Model checker in his first season of Late Model racing by nosing out Mike Sampson who finished ahead of Tommy Keeton. Ison's victory was worth $1,000.

Calvin Napier let Super Bomber points leader Jim Lemaster take the wheel of his Road Hog and watch as Lemaster led all 10 laps for first place in the obstacle course created by wounded hogs. Jason Dempsey placed second and Donnie Matney third.

Eddie Blair carried the checkers for the first time this season, winning the Claim Bomber consolation race.

If you have a tax-ing problem, take it to RAWLAND M. WRIGHT, CPA.

Now that tax season is over and the tax jitters are gone, do you still have a feeling in the pit of your stomach that your returns may have been prepared incorrectly? Did you pay additional dollars to Uncle Sam or receive less of a refund than expected?

WELL—LET'S TAKE A LOOK AT THE FACTS!!!

FACT #1 50-60% of all tax returns are prepared incorrectly.
FACT #2 Incorrect preparation and errors cost the average taxpayer approximately $900.00. Some returns $300 to $400 and others $1400 to $1500.
FACT #3 Most taxpayers don't know and may never know their actual out-of-pocket costs in having an incompetent business service or individual perform bookkeeping, accounting and tax services for them or their business.

Get Rawland M. Wright, CPA, to review two or three years of your tax returns. If errors aren't found then you will not incur any obligation for my services. Of course, if errors are found then you would be asked to pay a reasonable fee for services rendered.

So, you really have nothing to lose and could possibly gain substantially—maybe even enough to pay for a vacation!

If interested in possibly retrieving some of your misplaced tax dollars, just call me at 606-886-0727 (also Fax #) or stop in to see me at 1250 N. Lake Dr., next door to Subway Restaurant.
My office hours are 7:30 until 5:00 p.m. Other hours by appointment.

Call-up to The Show becomes memory maker for Kentuckian Shumpert

Consider this memory maker: Chicago Cubs and San Diego Padres are tied 3-3 in the bottom of the 14th inning at Wrigley Field, two outs, runners at second and third bases and Kentuckian Terry Shumpert stands at the plate facing veteran Willie Blair.

A Paducah native, Shumpert is just up from Triple-A Iowa. And down in the count, 0-2, Blair's next pitch, Shumpert hits a line drive into Wrigley's left field basket. Cubs win 6-3, and move within a game of first place Houston in the NL Central.

A Triple-A utility infielder on a Tuesday in June, presto, on Thursday Shumpert is mobbed at home plate by men called Mark Grace, Sammy Sosa, and Ryan Sandberg.

Postscript. Last Sunday Shumpert hit another home run to help the Cubs beat the Padres again.

Memory maker. Baseball. I love this game.

HALLS OF FAME

Mina Todd and Travis Ford will be inducted into the Lions Club sponsored Kentucky All-Stars Hall of Fame this weekend in Lexington.

✓ Todd, recently named girls head coach at duPont Manual High in Louisville after seven seasons at Ohio County High, is the first female athlete to have played and coached in the Kentucky all-star series.

During her high school years, Todd scored 1,558 points at Calloway County, 96th on the all-time scorers list. She went on to All-OVC honors at Murray State.

✓ Ford had two sterling seasons at the University of Kentucky, after transferring from Missouri; was MVP of the SEC Tournament in 1994. During his high school days he scored 2,676 points at Madisonville North-Hopkins, 31st on the all-time scorers list.

KHSAA Hall of Fame will induct 17 new members to places of honor next spring. Among them Jack Morris, who coached Mayfield into being a state football power. Morris is sixth on Kentucky's all-time coaches win list.

Other inductees will be: Virginia Combs of Whitesburg, who helped pioneer girls high school basketball in Kentucky; Lillie Mason of Olmstead, who was Miss Basketball in 1981; and Jean Wright, a track, cross-country and tennis coach at Franklin County High.

John Rendek coached at Louisville Male and Christian County; Ray Baer starred in several sports at duPont Manual in the 1920s; Robert 'Jake' Bell, who was a sports star at Sturgis High and successful football coach at Lexington Henry Clay, and is now a college basketball referee; Donald 'Quack' Butler of Owensboro, who has been on the Kentucky high school sports scene since the 1950s.

Jimmy Dan Connor was an all-state basketball star at Anderson County in 1971, then captained the UK Wildcats to an NCAA title game appearance against UCLA in 1975; Linville Puckett played in four Sweet 16s for Clark Co. High, then played at UK and starred at Kentucky Wesleyan College.

Mike Redd was a high school All-American basketball player and led Louisville Seneca to the state title in 1963; and Holbert Hodges, a coaching legend at Hazel Green High and London High in Laurel County, taking three teams to the Sweet 16.

Mike Minix was a standout football player at Paintsville High and earned 20 varsity letters during his high school days; Phil 'Duke' Owen was a standout athlete at Lebanon High, was an assistant coach at UK, then coached Woodford County and Elizabethtown to the state championship runner-up in 1978 and 1981 respectively.

Dwight and Greg Smith of Princeton, who were basketball stars at Princeton Dodson and Caldwell County in the early 1960s, and then at Western Kentucky University.

And Bob White, veteran sports writer at the Louisville Courier-Journal, apparently finally gave in and will accept entry into the KHSAA Hall of Fame next spring. A dear friend of mine, Bob deserves it even if he said two years ago, he did not believe members of the media should accept such accolades.

The KHSAA Hall of Fame

enshrinement will be March 11, 1997 in Lexington.

MORE UK PROFITEERING

University of Kentucky basketball has stooped to a new low in its pursuit of profits. Our state's flagship university is about 'United We Stand ... and whatever the market will bear.'

Athletics department bag man, uh, assistant director of athletics Larry Ivy has completed a deal to purchase the basketball court at Meadowlands Coliseum where UK won the school's sixth NCAA championship. Price tag: $70,000.

The floor will be brought to Lexington, cut into small squares and sold. Sizes and prices to be announced soon, I'm sure. So, UK basketball fans can get those check-books ready again.

COMMENT: If this project flops, instead of UK announcing an increase in student tickets at home basketball games, or a price hike on tickets and/or game programs, maybe Ivy will offer to make up the difference from his pocket.

COMMENT II: Piece of the Meadowlands floor, don't buy it.

PITINO COOKBOOK

Another UK item in Kentucky bookstores this week is the Joanne & Rick Pitino Wildcat Cookbook.

The brain-child of Owensboro publisher Jerry Birge, the Pitino Cookbook is a clever 125-page concoction of varied recipes volunteered by the Pitinos, their friends, former UK players, and a handful of guest contributors, including This Space. Most contributors took opportunity to genuflect at the alter of Da Coach.

Profits from the cookbook go to the Daniel Pitino Shelter in Owensboro, a project endorsed by Rev. J. Edward Bradley. The $17.95 price tag seems steep, but a cookbook should have more lasting value than a hunk of a basketball floor as a paper weight/door stop.

Postscript: The cookbook does have one VIP/celebrity entry. Page 101, Alma's Russian Spice Tea ... try it. My mother will be proud.

DAJA'VU ALL OVER AGAIN FOR UOFL

Daja'vu all over again. The University of Louisville got a restraining order last week to avoid being voted out of Conference-USA. UoFL officials say they are not against expansion, but oppose admission for Army and East Carolina as football only members.

This issue is intriguing because UoFL is threatened with expulsion from C-USA for the same reason Howard Schnellenberger opposed the school joining in the first place. Football schedule restrictions.

Schnellenberger wanted to keep Cardinal football 'flexible' for intersectional competition which would translate into more television exposure and revenue while at the same time enjoying the umbrella of a conference to which bowl bid invitations are extended to champions more readily than to independents.

Naturally, UoFL wants to have it both ways. Director of athletics Bill Olsen and coach Denny Crum want Cardinal basketball to have access to automatic NCAA Tournament bids while Ron Cooper's football program enjoys what we might call the Schnellenberger rule — knowing ABC-TV et al are more likely drawn to a match with say, Ohio State instead of Louisville-East Carolina.

The rub comes because other C-USA affiliates resent UoFL not only for its basketball tradition, but the special treatment Louisville demands because of it. While in the Metro Conference, UoFL kept all its own non-conference generated television revenues.

Bottom line: The ever growing arrogance and greed that infests college sports continues.

WORTH REPEATING

✓ Oops. David Kindred. My Jamaal Magloire faux pas a few weeks ago came to mind last week when I noticed columnist Dave Kindred of The Sporting News being crucified by TSN readers.

Kindred wrote a column hailing Shaquille O'Neal as the NBA's best center since the Bill Russell-Wilt Chamberlain era.

Readers wanted to know where Kareem Abdul-Jabbar fit in? Oops, Kindred responded, then launched into a comedy of other bobbles he has made going back to his days at the Louisville Courier-Journal when, he once picked Indiana to beat Kentucky and missed.

Abdul-Jabbar? "I forgot him," Dave wrote. "I confess the error."

Enough said.

✓ Oops II. Illuminating on the merits of taking his skill-position player to the University of Kentucky's Passing Jamboree last weekend, Caldwell Co. High coach Pat Gates mentioned the unmentionable. "...it gives (UK) a chance to look at some of the kids." Gates told the Princeton Times-Leader. "...(it) will let them (UK coaches) get a good look at the players, so they're using it as a kind of a recruiting tool."

COMMENT: The NCAA might call that getting an unfair recruiting advantage, except that so many Div.I football factories have their own, uh, summer passing camps these days.

✓ Say what? Seattle Superonics coach George Karl on a second technical foul on Michael Jordan in Game 4 that was not called: "If he's Fishing is good, if you know where to look

The warmer temperatures of June are drawing more folks out to fish. Some spots, of course, are hotter than others and if you know what to look for, you might get better results.

The species foremost on the minds of many anglers is bass. Here are some notes: White bass have just finished spawning and ideal sights are near deep rock walls or steep rocky points. Night fishing for white bass is a good bet, but they can also be taken in jumps in early morning or late afternoon when they're feasting on shad. Fishing for white bass should be excellent this year at Nolin, Green River, Rough River, and Barkley lakes as well as in Barkley tailwaters and from lock 2 to the mouth of the Green River.

One of the most abundant and popular species of fish in Kentucky is black bass. This group includes largemouth, smallmouth and Kentucky, or spotted, bass. After spawning is completed, bass retreat to cooler depths and will seek well-oxygenated water in the mid-70s. They are more active at night, especially in areas that receive heavy use during the day.

Fishing for largemouth bass should be excellent this year in wide range across Kentucky. Use artificial nightcrawlers and deep-running lures near rocky points and deep drop offs where the fish have good cover. The forecast is excellent for Barkley, Kentucky, Beshear, Bullock Pen and Kincaid lakes as well as the Kentucky Lake tailwaters.

Smallmouth bass have a more limited range than largemouth bass, but they are an important and wide-spread stream fish. They can be found in riffle sections where they feed on crayfish. In lakes, smallmouth bass can be found near areas with large gravel, rubble or submerged logs, but usually not near vegetation. Fishing should be excellent in Dale Hollow Lake, Kentucky Lake and Elkhorn Creek.

Kentucky bass are more abundant in streams that have rocky bottoms and well-defined riffles. In lakes, they can usually be found near steep, rocky banks and suspended over deep, open waters. The forecast is excellent for spotted bass at Nolin River Lake. The fishing should also be good at Paintsville, Laurel River, Barren River, Rough River and Kentucky lakes, Kentucky Lake tailwaters and the Ohio River.

There is no size limit on Kentucky bass. The size limit was lifted to improve size growth rates of largemouth and smallmouth bass. Because of this, it is important to be able to tell them apart. This determination can be made by performing the tooth-patch test. Almost all Kentucky bass, smallmouth bass and some largemouth bass have a rough area in the center of their tongues. This is actually a patch of teeth, which can easily be felt by rubbing a finger over it.

The regulation states that any black bass, except smallmouth, with a patch of teeth on its tongue is considered a Kentucky bass for size limit purposes. This means anglers must be able to identify smallmouth bass without relying on the tooth-patch test. After determining that the fish is not a smallmouth bass, the angler may keep the bass, regardless of size, if a tooth patch is present.

Determining a smallmouth from a largemouth bass can be done by not Michael Jordan, I think he would have gotten thrown out. But I have no problem giving that hypocrisy respect because I think Michael's earned it."

▼ Marge Schott. The media herd was at its righteous worst the last six weeks, hounding the Cincinnati Reds' owner out of baseball. The media's collective cry to crucify has made Schott a martyr. I agree with the fellow in California who told Sports Illustrated: "As long as we have owners like George Steinbrenner and promoters like Don King, we should go a little easier on Marge Schott."

PARTING SHOTS

• CBS's college basketball prophet, Billy Packer, was inducted into the North Carolina Sports Hall of Fame June 4. "(Basketball) has really provided for my life to be kind of like a hobby," Packer told the audience. "It's never really been like a job."

• In a news release from the Kentucky Lions Eye Foundation announcing Travis Ford's induction into the All-Star Hall of Fame, and singing the praises of the Madisonville native, the last line was especially, uh, attention-getting.

"Travis is now a movie star being created by Hollywood." And so it goes.

Bassin' With The Pros

Topwaters, spinnerbaits good lure choices now

When professional bass tournament angler Larry Nixon goes fishing this month, he usually travels light.

"That's because topwater lures and spinnerbaits will catch a lot of bass this time of year," laughs the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff angler. "If I take a third rod, it will probably have a Carolina rig on it, but overall, the key is fishing shallow water close to deep water."

"The reason," Nixon explains, "is because in most lakes the bass have completed spawning by late May and early June, but the fish have not necessarily completed their movement back out to summer structure."

"The bass move shallow during the night to feed, so I'll start each day by fishing a topwater popper or chugger over points, submerged islands close to the surface, or along the edges of treelines," he continues.

"The topwater action may not last very long, and it usually ends very abruptly, too, especially if the weather has been warm and the day is clear. Once the sun has been up about an hour, the bass stop feeding and begin moving toward deeper water, but if the day is cloudy, the topwater bite may last much longer."

When the topwater action does end, Nixon changes to one of his favorite spinnerbaits, a 3/4 ounce shad-colored model with a Colorado/willow leaf blade combination.

"This weight and blade combination is the only one I've found that allows me to fish the spinnerbait either fast and shallow or slow and deep and still have good vibration," says the Evinrude pro. "I try different retrieves, but on each cast I try to bump the cover I'm fishing."

"Once the bass leave the shallow water, they'll still strike lures, but I normally have the best results when I run the spinnerbait right into stumps and bushes."

If he's fishing deeper water in the 15 to 20 foot range, Nixon changes to a Carolina rig with a six to seven inch plastic worm because it allows him to cover the water more quickly. He works the outside edges of cover.

"Again, the key is concentrating in areas where you find a combination of shallow and deep water," he says. "This can be something as simple as an underwater hump that falls off sharply on the sides, a long point, or perhaps even a creek channel. It all depends on what's available for the bass."

One of the techniques Nixon uses to locate these types of depth changes is by working his way outward from the shallow spawning flats to the deeper water. The first significant channels that have deeper water, or the outermost cover away from the flats are primary areas of fish.

looking at the color and mouth of the bass. Largemouth bass have a dark horizontal stripe and their upper jaw extends well beyond the back of the eye. Kentucky bass have a dark horizontal stripe and rows of dark spots on their sides, but their upper jaw does not extend beyond the back of the eye. Smallmouth bass have no horizontal stripe, their sides are plain or have vertical bars, and their upper jaw does not extend beyond the back of the eye. Read the 1996 Kentucky Sport Fishing Guide for size and creel limits. Also, know if there are special regulations before you fish an area.

Dad would be disappointed

The closest I've ever been to a real president was when I shook hands with Lyndon B. Johnson in 1961. Of course, he was only the vice-president then and was the speaker at our graduation ceremonies at Eastern.

I was within spitting distance of him a few years later when as president he came to Eastern Kentucky to declare war on our poverty.

As excited as I was when I shook his hand, though, I still recall that it was sweaty. The point being, he was human just like the rest of us.

Never the less, when I was growing up, our leaders had seemed a bit larger than life and, at least around our house, we were taught to respect them. (For those not old enough to recognize the word respect, it means "to consider worthy of high regard.")

As a matter of fact, I even got swatted a couple of times for making unkind remarks about UMWA President John L. Lewis' looks. Of course, with Dad being a coal miner, Lewis was probably even more important than the president himself.

Even though FDR was a cripple, Dad would have been furious with anybody who even suggested the president had human frailties of a moral nature. The idea that the president may have kept a mistress in the White House during his presidency—even if it had been reported on the radio by Gabriel Heatter—would likely never have been believed by my father.

Now though, thanks mostly to the electronic media, national leaders have become a fair game. There is no more mystery about their being. Their humanness has been totally exposed. We know what time they get up every morning, what they eat for breakfast and even if they prefer their peanut butter plain or crunchy.

So, since we know all about them, does that mean we shouldn't respect them?

Apparently so. President Clinton's alleged girlfriends and this Whitewater thing have received more media coverage than everything Roosevelt did in his entire reign.

And remember when LBJ got into hot water because he lifted his beagle hounds by the ears? And poor President Ford was the butt of every joke of every comedian in the country because he kept falling down the steps of airplanes and kept hitting people with golf balls.

"Read my lips" because associated in a demeaning manner with President Bush to the extent that hardly anybody can tell you a positive thing he accomplished.

Now, even Bob Dole is on the receiving end of certain punsters because he chooses to wear a tie at one event and go tieless at another, like that has anything to do with anything. I'm sure, too, that some late-night funnyman will poke fun at Dole's war injury with the same candor as they did Bill Clinton's appetite for Big Macs.

With respect becoming a thing of the past, I'm afraid my dad would be very disappointed with today's world.

by Cheryl Lafferty
 Prestonsburg High School sophomore

Editor's Note: Cheryl Lafferty wrote the following article for her English II class at Prestonsburg High School. In this story, Lafferty shares with her readers the way she coped with the death of her father, Kenneth Donald Lafferty.

"Death is not something Cheryl has had to deal with much, so it's new to her. She is doing better now and I think this story helped me too," Cheryl's mother, Deloris Lafferty, said last week.

Hello, my name is LeShea Burke. I live in a small rural town called Harrisburg. It is a quaint little town where most people are either kin to one another or are very close, as in dating, married or just friends, per say, "the neighbors."

I thought I was just another one of those friendly neighbors until one lonely December 6. Here I was walking home from school thinking how happy I was and what a terrific relationship I had. You see, I fell in love for the first time in my life, and I knew it was real. The only problem was that I didn't think my father — or the whole town — would approve of my relationship.

However, this was the least of my defected problems. Little did I know that what was awaiting me at home was not at all what I expected or, at the least, real to my sense, mind, body, and soul.

I walked in my kitchen, after a long hard, exhausting day at school, to see my mom sitting at the table sobbing about something. I was in shock. The first thing mother said was "Dad's sick." Nothing else, no other words, just a worried and a confused face looking at me as if I could change the fact that my dad was bedridden and had probably had a mild heart attack.

Of course, my dad was so stubborn-headed that he refused to be transported to the nearest hospital. For the rest of the week he was in bed complaining of chest pain and a weakness in his muscles, saying he felt like he had been working for days. My mother and I were certain he had a heart attack. It was apparent that it was so mild that he didn't even think he'd had one.

That night I sat on the couch with my mom, "dad in the bed," watching TV and wondering if he was going to be okay, or if sometime in the middle of the night he would get worse. I couldn't even bear the thought of sleep. I knew I couldn't, but I was tired.

Finally, I fell asleep deep enough to where the next door neighbor's dogs couldn't wake me up every two minutes. About 3 1/2 hours into my well-deserved slumber, my mother came in and turned on my bedroom light which, of course, awakened me.

I rose from my bed thinking it was time for me to go to school. But, in reality, my fears had come true. My dad had gotten worse and mother was scared. She wanted me to call an ambulance, so I lifted my tired body out of bed and ran to the phone.

I called an ambulance and within a half an hour, they had arrived. The drivers strapped my dad to the bed and rolled him out to the ambulance.

As I watched him being rolled away, he waved as if he was fine. I blew him a kiss and went in to lock all the doors to my house. My mom went with him so I had to stay at home by myself. It was evident that I had too much to ponder upon to go back to bed. So, I sat and watched TV. I wanted to call my best friend. Consequently, it was really late, about 1:30 a.m., and I didn't want to wake her so I sat there anxiously awaiting a phone call from mom to tell me what was happening.

As I watched the idiotic "Late Night TV," I also watched the clock. It came around 2:45 a.m., and the phone rang.

"Yes," ran through my mind when I found out it was my mom. Although I expected good news, all I got from her was that Mark, my brother-in-law, was coming to stay with me until mom got home. I never really thought about it, but it was kind of suspicious that Mark, of all my family members, was coming to stay with me, seeing we didn't get along all that well. Anyway, why did I need him to stay with me? I was 17 years old. I didn't need a baby-sitter.

Again, I was surprised. You might as well say that my brother-in-law was coming as the bearer of bad news. In other words, they sent him to do the dirty work.

When Mark arrived, I let him in and we hugged. We went to sit down on the couch and ever since he had gotten there, I noticed he had been acting a little weird. He was weird but, Lord, not this weird, as if he was beating around the bush.

Finally, he broke down and looked at me with unsure eyes and tears rolling down. "What," I said, loudly. "Tell me now why you're acting like someone died."

Then it came to me. "Dad" flashed through my mind. "Tell me."

He took me by the hand and slowly said, with non-enthusiastic eyes. "Baby, your dad passed away at 3:10 a.m." It hit me like a ton of bricks. Everything was going through my confused mind.

"Why?" I screamed and fell to my knees. "Why? How? Why my dad?"

It took about 40 minutes to calm me down so he could tell me what happened to him.

"His heart just couldn't take it, Sweetie. It was too weak. After all, he had about two heart attacks in one week, and he was way too weak to handle all that pressure."

I guess you could say that I understood how he died, but it was still very unclear why it had to be my dad. I mean, I know he wasn't the best person in the world but, to me, he had all my respect. After all, he was my dad. I loved him.

After I calmed myself down, I broke down and called my best friend, Liz. Her mother answered and asked me what was wrong. I told her about what had happened and she went and woke Liz up.

"Here, it's LeShea. Her dad died and she needs you to talk to her."

"LeShea?" she said, then hearing my softly spoken "Yes."

"Are you all right?" she asked.

"No, my dad just died and I... I don't think I can handle this."

"Yes, sweetheart you can," Liz said. "I am here for you whenever you need me. I will help you through."

After we talked for about an hour, we hung up. About that time my mother and the rest of my family came in.

Of course, they were all crying. So was I. I decided to get out of the house and go sit on the back porch to get away from everyone. I gathered my thoughts and came to a few conclusions. First of all, no matter how much I cried and my family hurt and grieved, I knew life would go on and, no matter how much it hurt the rest of my family to see me be the only one to go on with my life, I had to. I had to live on and continue with my own life.

No, this didn't mean that I didn't care about it. It just meant that I was able to grieve, cry and feel sorrow when I felt like it, but also, go on with my life as my dad would have wanted me to.

Later on that week, at my dad's funeral, I was amazed to see all my friends come to be with me and to support me. When the sermon started, Liz sat on the left of me and my other friends sat on the right of me.

Liz held my hand tightly as if to protect me from pain. Of course, I broke down in the middle of the church. Here I was crying because the reality hit me again. My friends were there to guide me through and help me cope with my pain.

Finally, the funeral was over and it was time to go to the burial site. My mom didn't want me to go because she thought it would be too painful. So, Liz and I went on to my house so we could set up for the family to come after the burial so we could sit and talk and try to keep our minds off of my dad's death.

The whole family was there — even people I didn't know. We sat and talked for about five

by Beverly Carroll

Senior citizens, today we will continue our discussion about the baby sitting/child care possibilities that might be out there. As I indicated in last week's column, this just might be something you would want to consider doing to supplement your income.

My awareness of this need materialized a couple weeks ago when I began looking for a summer caretaker for our eight-year-old grandson. It was then, too, that I learned why more young mothers who need to work don't work. They can't afford to work and pay the prices people are asking for child care.

Since we are working grandparents, we were in a position of having to secure a person to care for our grandchild during school break. We had some prospects in mind. Was I ever shocked to learn from the first one I talked with that she wanted $125.00 a week. Some woman, she claimed, and she provided the names of these women, were getting this for one child. I told her that I wasn't agreeable to paying that. I told her what I would pay and I told her that I would provide snacks and beverages a few times a week for my grandson, her son, and her nephews, who lived next door, and played with her son. She offered, reluctantly, to come down a little but not enough to satisfy me. "That's $500.00 a month. Even working people have to live," I thought.

That evening I went to talk with another woman. This woman was not my second choice, but taking him by her home and picking him up would not be as convenient as it would have been with the first prospect I talked with.

This woman agreed to do it for the $75.00 a week I offered plus the snacks, which she said, "wasn't necessary." Her attitude was that it would give her son somebody around his own age to play with this summer, and "the money would sure come in handy for us," she stated.

The next morning I was still surprised at what people were getting in this area for baby sitting and child care. I asked co-workers what they were paying or if they knew what the "going rate" is in the area. Again I was surprised. Some said they know of women who baby sit for $30.00 a day ($150.00 a week). Mothers working outside of their homes for minimum wage don't even get that much so how can these young women afford to work? One lady I talked with said that she paid $60.00 a week, and another said that she pays $75.00 a week for the care of her two children. Now this seems far more reasonable to me.

I am not a bit unhappy having to pay the lady who has agreed to keep our grandson for $75.00 a week. I know he will be in good hands.

But the fact remains that there are women out there who would probably work if they could secure someone to care for their child/children at a reasonable fee. There are those out there who do work and would probably find raising their children and working to put food on the table for their families far less stressful if they could find caretakers willing to care for their children for less than 75 percent or more of their weekly earnings.

Senior citizens, if I were you, and if you are in relatively good health and like children, I would sure look into earning some extra money by letting it be known that you are interested in caring for working people's children. But please be reasonable in what you charge. Yet, be firm in getting paid what was agreed upon, getting paid on the date you agreed upon—every payday, every 1st and 15th or whatever, and be firm on time limitations as to the time the child can be dropped off in the mornings and the latest the child can be picked up in the evenings. There are people who will take advantage of you.

You might also consider earning extra money by doing commercial sitting instead of full-time child care or elder-care. Give that some thought.

My grandmother did occasional sitting after she retired. Every year, for several years, she went into the homes of CEO's for two breweries in St. Louis. She stayed in each of these homes six weeks at a time—caring for the children and running the households during their absences. The maids and servants, these homes had on staff, still did their work as usual.

Grandmother looked forward to these days in the big city—probably because it afforded her an opportunity to get away from Granddad for a while, more than for any other reason, yet, the fact remains, that when she returned home, she was always able to afford another project from the money she had earned while in St. Louis. Maybe she got $125-$150 a week, I don't know. If she did and if you consumed their products you probably helped to pay her salary. But not many working people in Eastern Kentucky make the big bucks these CEO's made. Yet, it appears that some child care keepers request and get this kind of pay. You might want to consider seeing that some of the money paid out for child care or elder care flows into your pockets.

Before you do though, please check with your physician for his or her advice in regard to your health. Child care has its stressful moments as you may very well remember. It is quite probable that you will be on your feet more, and there will probably be some lifting that you may not be accustomed to at the present. Little ones still have a way of getting skinned knees and broken elbows while playing.

I would also suggest that you talk with someone at the courthouse in your county to see what the stipulations are in regard to keeping children in your home. Also, you might want to consider your insurance, and any liability you might be faced to deal with. It would be wise to talk with an accountant too—especially if your new earnings would put you/your spouse in another wage bracket. And, quite honestly I would talk with an attorney for legal advice before getting involved in what might be considered a business, or any endeavor—where your home and everything you own might be in jeopardy in the event of a lawsuit.

I didn't make those suggestions to scare you, or to keep you from making the needed extra money, but we all know the old adage, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." And how about this wise one, "It's better to be safe than sorry."

hours or more. Then, my mom and I were left there alone. I could tell my mom was trying not to show her affection. You could still see the pain in her eyes.

We went to bed early that night. After all, we had been up for a long time.

I guess you could say that it may take my mother and me time to get back on our feet. We would do it. No matter what or how much it took, we were ready to go on because that's the way dad would have wanted it.

Four-and-half months have passed and we couldn't be better. Money is still tight, but I guess we will make it. No matter.

We both have learned to go on with our life and live for now and tomorrow, not yesterday.

I have admitted when I first heard of my father's death, I thought I would never make it. I thought my mother and I would never be able to get back on our feet and get over the pain.

However, we've proved that it is possible to have a life and it is also possible to live for now and go on to live for tomorrow.

Although we still think about how much we miss him, and there's no doubt we do miss him, we are able to continue with a new life along with a new look at how we should seize the day and live for now and tomorrow — not yesterday.

A QUOTE FROM MARCH '96 MADE FROM THE DISTRICT CHAMPIONSHIP GAME BY JOE BACK OF Q-95 SPORTS:

"Coach Jack Pack has done an outstanding job here in Floyd County with his successful program he built at Wheelwright and now underway at Prestonsburg, and in my opinion he has accomplished this with the boys giving him hard work, his motivational skills to the team, and his demanding use of good fundamentals in the full court game."

The Hanging of Floyd Williams

The small Kentucky town of Campton bulging with visitors on July 2, 1885 as Floyd Williams was to be hanged the following day for the murder of Pate Stricklin. Campton is in Wolfe County.

Floyd ate a large meal on the eve of his hanging and then was given a cigar. He was asked how he felt.

"I feel as good as I ever did," he replied. "Death comes to every man. Tomorrow might be my time to go, but your day could be the next day or the next. Some are lucky enough to live many years before dying while some babies die in their crib.

"So it's not unexpected that I'm to die. It's because I must die tomorrow. Some men die in bed. Some die from sickness and others die violently. I must die on the gal-lows."

The proceeding night Floyd Williams met with Rev. J. R. Deering of Mt. Sterling. While on his knees the doomed man accepted Jesus Christ and asked God to pardon him for his sins. A change then came over Williams and he arose the following day with a happy countenance. He made a verbal confession of his crime, feeling that he must confess his sins.

"I confess to the terrible crime I committed knowing that if I don't God will make me account for it," his confession began. "God will not look upon sin with the least degree of allowance. The shadow of death is falling upon me and eternity awaits."

Floyd continued by saying that he was 21 years old and that his opportunities had been limited because he had attended school only three months.

"My folks did all they could to get me to go to school and to church," his confession continued. "I wouldn't listen to them. The sad condition I'm in is 'cause I didn't listen to them. If I had listened to their advice I would no doubt be as free as heaven's pure air instead of being in jail."

Floyd went on to say that his family had troubles when he was nine years old causing him to "go out into this cold-hearted world to do for myself."

"I can see now that it was wrong for me to take up with boys with bad habits. As time went on I started drinking strong liquor and it continued until I became a drunkard.

"In 1882 my mother and I, along with two brothers and a sister moved to Wolfe County and lived a year on the Joseph Graham farm. My drinking habits made me perfectly useless and I was unable to help out on the farm. In addition to disobeying my parents and my drunkenness, all I could think about was lewd and vile women and it ended up getting me in the condition that I'm in.

"The following year my mother moved to Lacy Creek and that is where I met Mrs. Stricklin. She seemed very interested in me and we became close and it continued for about eight months."

During the eight months Williams and Mrs. Stricklin made plans to get rid of her husband whose name was Pate.

"Her first plan was to put rats bane in his coffee but she either used the wrong thing or she didn't put enough of it in," Floyd wrote. "She then proposed to get him drunk and knock him in the head with an ax and report that I killed him in self-defense. I told her I wouldn't have anything to do with it.

"Then he came home drunk one night unexpectedly and found me lying in his bed. He rushed upon me with his revolver saying he would kill me. He snapped it twice while pointed at my breast but it didn't fire. I had left my gun at my mother's. If I had had it with me I'm sure I would have killed him."

Center for Rural Health

Katie Newsome

KATIE NEWSOME IS COMMUNITY ENCOURAGER

The University of Kentucky Center for Rural Health has named Katie Newsome as Community Encourager for Floyd/Knott and Pike County.

This position was created to identify the health care needs and concerns of the area's citizens.

As the Community Encourager, Newsome will be instrumental in the Community Initiated Decision Making (CIDM) project. This process is geared toward creating awareness of health care issues in the area.

"My job as Community Encourager is to talk with people and let as many folks as possible know what the CIDM process is. I'll be doing interviews with health care providers and many citizens throughout the area.

"We're interested in their health care concerns—what they like about the system and what they don't like and most of all, how we as a community, can help implement change to make the health care system better."

A Health Care Survey will be mailed to 1000 local residents later this year. This survey is to gather information and ideas on what people want, expect, and use in their health care needs.

Volunteer Health Council Members will be appointed in several locations throughout the respective counties.

This council and other citizens will gather at a town/community to decide the major health care concerns that need to be addressed.

"We hope that this awareness will encourage us all to help determine the future of our local health care system. The purpose of this project is to access public satisfaction with the current system; to identify unmet needs and to improve public confidence and encourage use of local health care providers," Newsome said.

The CIDM process was developed by the UK Center for Rural Health and is co-sponsored in the area by McDowell ARH, McDowell, and Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin.

Newsome is a native of Floyd County and a graduate of Wheelwright High School. She attended Prestonsburg Community College and is a former employee of the Christian Appalachian Project and their Community Health Advocate Program. She and her son Eric, reside at Garrett.

For more information, contact Newsome at her office at McDowell ARH, 377-3447 or at her home 358-9763.

Newsome will share information about rural health care in upcoming editions of the Times.

Sixty Years Ago (June 19, 1936)

With $162,260.60 the lowest bid received on the construction of an addition to the Floyd County courthouse and the repair of damage done to the structure by fire this year, the fiscal court, finding itself without funds necessary to finance the building program, moved Monday to negotiate for a Public Works Administration loan... If efforts being made locally are successful, not only a library building but also a grade school will be constructed in Prestonsburg within the next few months... Robert Pinson, 45, president of Betsy Layne local, U.M.W.A., was shot Saturday afternoon during a regular session of the local at the U.M.W.A. hall in Betsy Layne hollow... Earl Allen, 30 years old, died Wednesday afternoon at his home at Garrett, of back injuries sustained two years ago in a slatefall in the Elk Horn Coal Corporation mine at Garrett... Escaping with only slight cuts and bruises when the light plane in which they were riding crashed in the streets at Wayland were Mrs. Elmer Bowe and Jim Noble, both of Wayland, and the pilot, a man named Honaker... John Walls, of Wayland, is in the Paintsville Hospital, critically injured as the result of a head-on collision of his auto with another on the Lackey-Hindman highway Sunday morning... Ed Bradley, former Floyd County deputy constable, is in the Martin Hospital suffering from a knife wound... Sam Smith, 20, was taken to the Beaver Valley Hospital, Monday night after having been shot twice through the leg at Garrett... Married: Miss Helen Harris, of Emma, and Mr. Glenn Jones, June 4 at Rodney, Ohio... There died: Mrs. Flora Carver Hunter, 74, at her home at Woods, Thursday; Mrs. Sallie Clifton, 56, of Prestonsburg, at the Golden Rule Hospital, Paintsville, Saturday; P. D. Lafferty, 15, at home here, Saturday night.

Birthdays

Chelsea is one!

Chelsea Nicole Ord celebrated her first birthday May 24 with her family. Chelsea and her guests enjoyed a Barbie birthday cake baked by her mother. Chelsea is the daughter of Walter and Shearry Ward Ord of McDowell. Chelsea is the granddaughter of the late Ray Ward and Alicetene Ward and the late Daniel Ord and Maudie Ord.

the Birth Place

Family Centered Obstetrics

E-YOOOW! I just got here and I'm so excited!

This place is really neat-o, they've got everything! Labor, delivery and recovery rooms, an obstetrical suite (that's where I arrived), anesthesiologist directed epidurals (mom really liked that), childbirth classes (dad said those helped a lot), and they've got much more!

Hey, there goes my doctor, must be another new arrival on the way.

Oh, by the way did I tell you about my room in the nursery, it was great and the nurses—well, I've been bathed, rocked and cuddled but I still can't figure out what "getchie getchie goo" means.

I'm awfully tired now so I think I'll take a little nap, but don't forget, if you want to arrive first class, the Birth Place at Highlands, it's the only place to be! They Deliver!

"People you Know and Trust for the Most Important Moments of Your Life"

County Kettle

EASY ROAST

Number of servings: 6
3 lb. roast
1/2 pkg. dehydrated onion soup mix
1 can (10 3/4 oz.) cream of mushroom soup
Line a shallow roasting pan with a generous sheet of aluminum foil. Empty 1/2 package of onion soup mix into pan. Lay roast flat side up. Pour over roast 1 can cream of mushroom soup. Bring foil up and around and seal roast. Bake at 300° for 1 hour for each pound of roast.

ITALIAN BEEF

Large chuck roast, cut into 4 pieces
Dutch oven, 1/2 full of water
1 Tbsp. Italian seasoning

1 Tbsp. garlic salt
3/4 Tbsp. Lawry's seasoned salt
1 beef cube
Put all ingredients into Dutch oven and simmer for 4 hours, or until meat pulls apart. (If desired, add slices of green pepper the last 1/2 hour of cooking.) Shred meat with fork and serve on toasted rolls.

ANN LANDERS' MEAT LOAF

2 lb. ground chuck
2 eggs
1 1/2 c. cracker crumbs
1/2 to 3/4 c. ketchup
1 pkg. onion soup mix, dry
Mix and place in loaf pan; add sauce and bake.
Sauce:
2 Tbsp. vinegar
1/3 c. water

2/3 c. ketchup
2 Tbsp. sugar
2 Tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
Bake at 325° for 1 hour.

OVEN NO-PEEK STEW

Number of servings: 5
2 lb. lean stew meat, bite-size
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 pkg. dry onion soup mix
1 c. water
Mix all ingredients in a casserole with a tight lid. Bake 3 hours at 300°. No peeking.
Serve with buttered noodles or can be served with cooked rice.

COUNTRY RIBS AND SAUERKRAUT

Number of servings: 4
Baking time and temperature: until done, 2 hours
4 or 5 country ribs
1 large can sauerkraut
1/2 apple
Salt and pepper
Run water on kraut to remove sour taste. Put in pan. Salt and pepper ribs. Put ribs in oil to brown well on both sides. Remove from oil and put with sauerkraut. Cut 1/2 apple in small pieces and cook this together till kraut and ribs are done.

POTATOES SUPREME

6 to 8 potatoes
1/3 c. onions, chopped

1 (8 oz.) pkg. cream cheese
1 egg, beaten
Boil and fix potatoes like you do mashed potatoes or use leftover mashed potatoes. Add 1/3 cup finely chopped onions. Add 1 package cream cheese. Add 1 beaten egg and mix all together. Put in baking dish and sprinkle Cheddar cheese over top. Bake slow in 325° oven for 1 hour.
Can be fixed day before serving and also can be frozen afterwards.

DUTCH CABBAGE

2 c. cooked green cabbage
2 Tbsp. flour
1 tsp. salt
2 Tbsp. oleo
1 tsp. sugar
1 c. whole milk
2 slices day-old bread, cubed
Melt oleo in top of double boiler and slowly stir in flour. Add salt, sugar, milk and stir constantly over boiling water, till thickened. Arrange cabbage in a 1 1/2-quart casserole and pour cream sauce over.
Top with bread cubes and place in a 350° oven till heated through and bread cubes are browned, about 20 minutes if cabbage is warm to start.
Serves 4. It's the sugar that gives the recipe its flavor. Do not omit.

BUTTERSCOTCH PIE

1/3 c. cornstarch
1 c. dark brown sugar, packed
1/4 tsp. salt
3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
4 Tbsp. butter
1/2 tsp. vanilla
2 c. milk, scalded
1 baked 8-inch pie shell
Combine first 6 ingredients in saucepan. Stir in milk gradually. Cook until thick, stirring constantly. Pour into baked pie shell.

RHUBARB CREAM PIE

Number of servings: 8
4 c. finely chopped rhubarb
2 eggs
1 1/4 c. sugar
4 Tbsp. thick cream
3 Tbsp. flour
Mix together and let stand for 1/2 hour. Pour into unbaked pie shell. Can be done with or without top crust. Bake at 400° for approximately 50 minutes.

OZARK PIE

(Cranberry or Apple)
3/4 c. sugar
1 egg, beaten
1/2 c. flour
1 tsp. vanilla extract
1/4 tsp. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt
1/2 c. finely chopped walnuts
1 c. cranberries, or 1 c. diced cooking apples

Mix in order 3/4 cup sugar (more if using cranberries), flour, baking powder, salt, nuts and apples. Add one beaten egg and vanilla. Mix well. Put mixture in greased 9-inch pie plate. Bake at 350° for 25 to 30 minutes. Serve with ice cream or whipped cream.

CINNAMON PUDDING

Number of servings: 12 or more
1 c. white sugar
2 Tbsp. butter
1 c. milk
1 3/4 c. flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. cinnamon
Pinch of salt
1/2 c. nuts
Sauce:
2 1/2 c. brown sugar
2 1/2 c. water
2 Tbsp. butter
1/2 c. nuts
Cream 1 cup sugar and 2 tablespoons butter. Add 1 cup milk. Sift 1 3/4 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, pinch of salt and 1/2 cup nuts.
Sauce: Boil 2 minutes 2 1/2 cups brown sugar, 2 1/2 cups water, 2 tablespoons butter. Put 1/2 cup nuts in 9 x 13-inch baking dish. Pour sauce in and add butter.
Bake at 350° for 30 minutes, or little longer.

Low-fat adult diets may not work for kids

While many people today are changing their eating habits by limiting saturated fats and cholesterol, parents should be careful not to go overboard with their children.

At a time when the body is building tissues, going to dietary extremes can be harmful, said Hazel Forsythe, an associate professor in the Department of Nutrition and Food Science at the University of Kentucky.

Pediatricians have been divided on the issue of whole milk, one of the major sources of fat in a youngster's diet.

"Some argue that you should put children on skim milk as early as 9 months, when they are weaned from formula. Others say you can wait until the age of 5," said Forsythe. "We know that children have small stomachs and eat only limited amounts, yet their energy needs are high. They get a lot of their energy from a concentrated food like whole milk."

Forsythe thinks each child should be evaluated on an individual basis. But she advocates waiting until the child is 5 years old before switching to skim or low-fat milk unless there is family history of cancer, diabetes, hypertension or heart disease. She also cautions parents about putting very young children on a purely vegetarian diet.

"Such a diet very early can be dangerous because the child may not be getting all the nutrients he or she needs, especially vitamin B-12," said Forsythe. "Also, children don't have the capacity to eat the volume of food in a vegetarian diet that will meet their needs. They need nutrients from all food groups."

Meatless meals prepared with foods that complement each other—rice and beans, whole grain cereals and milk, for instance—can be healthy choices for kids. But vegetarian diets that restrict dairy products and eggs can be harmful, said Forsythe.

The American Heart Association recommends a diet for children over the age of 2 years that contains no more than 30 percent of total calories from fat and less than 300 milligrams of dietary cholesterol per day.

These restrictions are not recommended for children under 2 whose fast growth requires a higher percentage of calories from fat.

While working on limiting saturated fats and cholesterol can pay off in the long run, it is crucial that parents take care at mealtimes to provide a variety of foods, said Forsythe. "Good nutrition for children means building healthy habits in the early stages," she said.

Since Americans take more than half their meals outside the home, knowing how to make heart-healthy choices at restaurants and cafeterias is also important. Again, parents should set an example.

"It doesn't help if Dad has the double cheeseburger with fries and makes the kids eat a baked potato and salad," Forsythe noted.

Tea time:

A relaxing tradition

from the American Institute for Cancer Research

Tea time is making a comeback throughout this country as many people find it a wonderful way to take a break from hectic schedules.

Tea is not an exceptional source of well-known nutrients, but it does contain polyphenols—substances under close study for potential cancer-fighting properties.

Green tea, the light, flavorful tea from the Far East, is attracting the most research attention, but the black tea consumed in this country also may have some cancer-fighting advantages.

Beyond tea and conversation, no tea time would be complete without a tray of delectable treats. Consider some of these healthy choices:

Toast cornmeal muffins and serve them with apple butter, or create tea cakes using your favorite low-fat, whole-grain muffin or quick-bread recipe in mini-muffin or mini-loaf pans. All-fruit jam or a sprinkling of powdered sugar make perfect frosting.

Sponge cake or fat-free pound cake are delicious topped with berries or sliced fruit. Try cutting cake slices with a cookie cutter, heating the shapes in the oven until golden, and dusting with powdered sugar.

If tea sandwiches strike your fancy, be sure to use fat-free cream cheese on your watercress, cucumber or tomato sandwiches, or serve tuna, salmon or chicken salad made with low-fat mayonnaise. Trim the crusts from whole wheat bread, spread with filling and cut into four triangles.

TEA TIME:

A RELAXING TRADITION

Fresh strawberries are fabulous with a dip made by blending eight ounces of vanilla nonfat yogurt with a little honey and a few chopped, toasted almonds.

Scones are a tea time tradition, so savor low-fat Buttermilk Oatmeal Raisin Scones spread with your favorite jam.

BUTTERMILK OATMEAL RAISIN SCONES

1/4 cup granulated sugar
1 1/2 cups whole wheat flour
1 1/2 cups rolled oats
1 Tbsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. baking soda
1/2 tsp. salt
3 Tbsp. soft margarine
1 cup raisins
1 1/4 cups buttermilk
Preheat the oven to 425 degrees. Set aside 1 1/2 tsp. of sugar for the topping. In a bowl, combine the whole wheat flour, rolled oats, remaining sugar, baking powder, soda and salt. Blend in the margarine until the mixture is crumbly. Stir in the raisins, then the buttermilk.

On a lightly floured surface, knead the dough about 10 times. Divide it into 3 pieces. Pat each piece into a round about 3/4-inch thick.

Transfer to a baking sheet then cut with a knife to divide each round into four quarters. Sprinkle with reserved sugar. Bake for 15 to 20 minutes or until lightly browned. Serve hot. Each scone has 4 grams of fat and 184 calories.

U.S. patent issued to Minix, local optician

On June 4, U.S. Patent No. 5,523,836 was issued to Marcus S. Minix entitled "Method and Apparatus for Measuring and Orienting A Lens' Refractive Characteristics and Lay-out Properties."

Minix said, "Basically, this patent combines two machines that are required to make eyeglasses into one machine.

One of the machines is a lensmeter which is used to determine the prescription power of a lens.

The other is a lay-out blocker which is used to position the prescription power and any multifocal of a lens relative to the eyeglass frame.

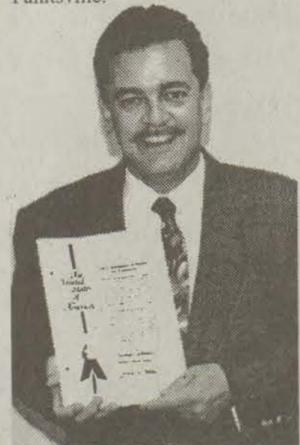

The patent permits doing these two things at the same time.

"The patent claims to increase the accuracy of orienting a lens relative to the eyeglass frame, save the time required of using two machines, and save counter-space."

Minix is a licensed optician in Kentucky, North Carolina, and Florida, a fellow of the National Academy of Opticianry, and a member of the American Board of Opticianry and the Contact Lens Society of American.

Minix was previously a college instructor in optics at Durham Technical Institute, Durham, North Carolina.

He is president of Minix One Hour Optical, Inc. and Minix Eye Clinic, Inc. in Prestonsburg and Paintsville.

NOTICE OF BOND RELEASE

In accordance with the provisions of KRS 350.055, notice is hereby given that Northern Elkhorn Coal Company, Catlettsburg, KY 41129 has applied for Phase II bond release on permit 436-5191 which was last issued on 8/08/84. The application covers a surface area of approximately 5.00 acres and underlies an additional 11.00 acres located 0.2 miles east of Northern in Floyd County. The permit area is approximately 0.2 miles east from SR 80 junction with Goose Creek Road and located 0.05 miles east of Goose Creek. The latitude is 37° 30' 27". The longitude is 82° 48' 42". The original bond that was in effect for permit 436-5191 was a surety bond of $20,000. Approximately 25% of the original bond amount of $20,000 is included in the application for release.

Reclamation work performed includes: backfilling and grading, redistribution of the available topsoil, revegetation and planting of trees in accordance with approved plan completed. Results achieved include stabilization of backfilling, seeding of permanent vegetative species and planting of tree species.

This is the final advertisement of this application. Written comments, objections and requests for a public hearing or informal conference must be filed with the Director, Division of Field Services, Department for Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement, #2 Hudson Hollow Complex, Frankfort, KY 40601, by July 19, 1996. A public hearing on the application has been scheduled for 9 a.m. on July 23, 1996 at the Department for Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement's Prestonsburg Regional Office, 2705 South Lake Drive, Prestonsburg, Kentucky 41653-1410. The hearing will be canceled if no request for a hearing or informal conference is received by July 19, 1996.

All items are sold "as is where is." Seller reserves the right to bid and to reject any or all bids. Items are to be paid following the sale, or satisfactory arrangements are made with seller. Announcement at sale takes priority over ad. Purchaser to pay all taxes and transfer fees. COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY DEPARTMENT OF FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that the Department of Financial Institutions has received an application from Kentucky Finance Company, Inc. for the establishment of a consumer loan license at 6 East Court Street, Prestonsburg, Floyd County, Kentucky. KRS Chapter 288 directs the Commissioner of the Department to investigate the application and base his decision to approve or deny the application upon the following criteria:

1. The financial responsibility, experience, character and general fitness of the applicant, its officers and directors must command the confidence of the community and warrant the belief that the consumer loan business will be operated honestly, fairly and efficiently;

2. The convenience and advantage of the community will be promoted by approval of the application; and

3. The statutory requirements pertaining to the application and license fees have been met.

Anyone desiring to comment on these criteria shall submit written comments within twenty (20) days of the publication of this notice to the Commissioner of the Department of Financial Institutions, 477 Versailles Road, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that David Crisp, 1038 Bucks Branch Road, Martin, Kentucky 41649, has filed an application with the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet to place a culvert in the creek at 1038 Bucks Branch, one mile off Ky. Rt. 80. Any comments or objections concerning this application shall be directed to: Kentucky Division of Water, Water Resources Branch, 18 Reilly Road, Frankfort Office Park, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601. Phone: 502-564-3410.

Between January 1 and March 31, 1,129,997 pounds of newspapers were recycled. The recycled newspaper is being used to make wallboard. It is designed to outperform conventional gypsum panels when used in interior walls and ceilings, according to Louisiana Pacific, which manufactures FiberBond wallboard.

Directory of manufacturers is now available

The 1996 edition of the Kentucky Directory of Manufacturers has been published by the Cabinet for Economic Development's Division of Research.

This year's directory is the 39th edition. It lists information about some 3,500 Kentucky manufacturers, including company name, address, phone number, key officials, parent company/home office, employment and major products.

The listings are arranged into three different categories—alphabetically by firm name, geographically by city, and by type of product manufactured (Standard Industrial Classification).

The cost of the directory is $40 plus 6 percent sales tax. Special rates are available for chambers of commerce, local economic development groups, local governments and libraries.

Orders should be sent to the Maps and Publications Office, Cabinet for Economic Development, 133 Holmes Street, Frankfort, KY 40601.

Checks should be made payable to the Kentucky State Treasurer. Visa and MasterCard are accepted.
