New Direct Route to Miami Passes Through Ashland And The Big Sandy Valley

Continued from page one Ohio and slights the Ohio river at Portsmouth, crossing into Kentucky at the new Ashland bridge, which will be completed by the time the road is opened, the way leads on into the foothills of the Cumberland.

From there the scenery becomes more wild and impressive with each mile. The road, following the terraced windings of the Big Sandy, crosses mountain valleys that are rimmed by the steep rounded slopes of mountains. Towering chimneys lead down upon the ribbon of highway that meanders in and out on its steady climb toward the distant summit.

In the region of the Breaks of Kentucky the traveler will see mountain scenery expressed in beauty and grandeur. Here the river has carved its gorge deep until high weathered rock walls rise sheer into the blue and a tunnel being in that region of vast shapes is a pretty comparison.

The river at the Breaks is channelled into a water of white water in its rapid passage over the boulders that from the bed of the stream. With a stage setting of cascading water and white rocks, the scene painter that his brush on the glorious palette of the sky, as the slabs of white rock high ridge and the shades of evening descend, to touch the tips of the jagged summits with misty purples and azures. Sunset.

Through Round Bay and then on into Virginia and into the country made famous by John Fox, Jr. in his Trail of the Lonesome Pine. This is the Blue Ridge chain, a part of that the men of the Eighteenth Division were sent to dig in France. They were sent to the mountains of Virginia and Pennsylvania and on their left shoulder they sported three blue crosses in a shield. The Blue Ridge Division.

On through Asheville and down the southern slope of the watershed, and again into the flat country in Georgia and Florida. U. S. 23 does not extend into Florida. In carrying out the Interstate bill route it was found expedient to run No. 23 to Johnson City, Tenn., where it merges into U. S. 25, which carries on to Augusta, Ga., and loses its identity in U. S. 1, coming down the coast and directly on to Miami.

In passing through the Eastern Kentucky mountains the traveler will find it hard to believe that here, not so long ago, raged the bloody Hatfield-McCoy feud and the equally tragic Eversole-Branch trouble. Scores of lives lost, people covering in their homes while the report of a gun or the drumming of a horse's hoofs down the road at night marked further bloodshed and rapine.

Today, the descendants of the warring factions have forgotten their differences in peaceful pursuits. The lawless element has been crowded back into the remote fastnesses of the hills while modern cities are monuments to the new life and thought that are apace with the nation. Hotels furnish rooms with bath, the same as in any metropolitan center; equipped hospitals at points of concentration; high schools, colleges, substantial indications of a people thoroughly alert and receptive.

The traveler in these mountains will not find the splendor that is associated with mining communities throughout the north, where the labor is predominantly foreign. American labor with American ideals and standards of living prevails along the Mayo trail. Comfortable homes, flower gardens, trees, well kept lawns, resorting buildings, tennis courts, parks and a high degree of sanitation. North had her for Kentucky to display to the world at large.

It is a far cry back to the days when the rafter and the flatwater drifted with the slow current of the Big Sandy while the man on horse back 50 miles the long, rough trail back here, the wooded country where only men and women of pioneering stamp dared to penetrate. That was the first method of travel and the first epoch. Then the fantastic scheme of a man who had to borrow money to buy postage stamps when he wanted to cross Eastern capital.

John C. C. Mayo touched the land with his mormony and from it sprang the abundance that brought the railroad and the second epoch with its new mode of travel.

And now the third phase of this most marvelous, the Mayo Trail, and the attainment of a new plane of association between the people of Ashland and the Big Sandy. It means a new viewpoint, a rearrangement of ideas as drastic as that of the railroad era. Certainly, to the people of the Big Sandy it will mean a new and wider horizon.

PRESTONBURG HIGH SCHOOL FACULTY MEMBERS ARE WED

A simple but charming wedding was that of Mrs. Jane Van Beckern and Edna Thurgomerton in the First Baptist Church on Wednesday afternoon, June 17. The church was artistically decorated with roses, and the altar was a solid mass of greens and red.

Before the appointed hour for the ceremony the guests enjoyed a program of instrumental music by Mrs. Evelyn Longhorn, violin, Miss Esther Van Beckern, cello, sisters of the bride, and Mrs. Stella Kessel, piano. The trio played, "I Love You Truly," "By the Waters of Minnetonka," "Valse Chanson," "Au Soir" and "Valse Amoreto," a violin solo by Mrs. Longhorn.

At the first strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin, played by Miss Ruth Wakefield at the organ, the bridesmaids attended, Miss Esther Van Beckern, marched slowly to the altar. She was fitted in a frock of pink tulle, with which she wore silver stirrups. Her bouquet was of pink rose buds, and snapdragons to match her frock.

Immediately following her came the bride and groom. The bride was dressed in a gown of white lace. Her long veil was caught at the back of her head by a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and snapdragons.

They were met at the altar by the Reverend Thurgomerton, assistant pastor of the United Church, who performed the big ceremony.

After the service an informal reception was held in the church, during which soft organ music was played by Miss Ruth Wakefield.

Miss Knapp and Mrs. Griswold were bridesmaids of ceremony, and Mrs. G. A. Bair presided over the bride's party.

At the Prestonburg high school, Prestonsburg, Ky.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Van Beckern, was graduated from Berea College with the class of 1928, and for the last two years has been teaching in the high school of Prestonsburg, Ky.

Mr. Thurgomerton, of Wynipport, Tenn., took his academic work at Hall, Moody Normal, Martin, Tenn., and received his degree from Union University, Jackson, Tenn. He was a member of the faculty of Prestonsburg high school the past year.—News-Tribune, Dec. 10, 1930.

New Timepieces to Buy Mary, age eight, moved from Irvington to a small town in Indiana. There were factories there, with their accompanying whistles. Occasionally when a whistle blew, Mary heard some such remark as: "It must be just twelve," or "our clock must be slow, for there is the seven o'clock whistle." No one realized Mary was puzzled until one day she said: "You know, I can't tell time by the whistles."—Indianapolis News.

HEALTH NEWS Compiled by Dr. Marvin Randell Director, Floyd County Health Dept.

The federal food and drug act, popularly known as the Pure Food Law, is 25 years old June 30. President Roosevelt signed the measure June 30, 1906, delegating its enforcement to the United States Department of Agriculture. State food and drug laws quickly followed the passage of the federal act. Kentucky's food law was passed in 1910. Mrs. Sarah V. Duncan, director of the Bureau of Foods, Drugs and Hotels, in quoting from a report of the Federal Food and Drug Administration, said: "The years immediately preceding and succeeding the passage of the pure food law were marked by an extreme of public consciousness of the evils and impracticities of the time. It was an age of exposure of unethical and demoralizing practices, and a wave of public indignation against the evils of food and drug manufacturing brought the federal food and drug act into being."

"Before the law was passed, the food and drug industry picture was in the deplorable state. As the result of the crude methods in food manufacturing, the user obtained commercially prepared foods, and with good reason. The medical outlook and the patient medicine chest had piled their weight upon the situation. The result was the poisoning, the swamped, prostrated, worthless in the treatment and cure of disease, who sold everywhere. Commonly a child's death was usually attributed, sometimes with justice, to the food and drug industry. The practices of pure food manufacturers and dealers that the many honest producers had little opportunity of putting before the eyes of quality foods. The pure food law, passed in 1906, marked the beginning of a new chapter for the food and drug industry. The change was neither spontaneous nor instantaneous. It was the result of the bill and industry promptly adopted manufacturing practices, delayed compliance. Regulatory agencies, on the other hand, were slow to enforce the new law, but not without difficulty in finding violators. Adulteration and misbranding were common for many days. It was not possible to secure immediate cooperation, because enforcing officials were handicapped by the lack of technical means of detecting all forms of adulteration, government inspectors devoted attention to the formulation of analytical methods, and other federal officials selected products found to be in violation of the law, prosecuted offenders, or conducted the trade in improved processes. In each state the same work was done by state chemists and state inspectors. The public, losing faith in their district, increased its purchases, and resolutely with improvement in quality of goods. It is a credit to the industry of business. The old cry, "The government is running our business," by some less common and less vociferous. From comparatively small beginnings, the food industry grew to a business of several billion dollars. Presently, there was a growth in the drug manufacturing business, whose annual products are worth nearly 100 million dollars.

"The 25 years since the passage of the federal food and drug act, mark an important development that have occurred in the history of food and nutrition. The dietary habits of Americans have changed materially. The use of such foods as milk, sugar, vegetables, and fruits has increased greatly, and the consumption of cereals has declined. The 25-year period has witnessed pioneer work in the technique of processing fruits and vegetables, which has made possible material and beneficial reform in the method of various food industries. The American today, unquestionably, is able to purchase after 25 years' operation of the law, foods and drugs of as high quality as are to be found upon the world market.

"The initial purpose of the food and drug act: first, to safeguard the purity of foods and drugs; second, to protect consumers from economic fraud through the purpose of misbranding or adulterated goods, has not been changed. Food officials are concerned now, as 25 years ago, with removing from interstate commerce products found in violation of the law, and preventing violators. More than 13,000 laws and orders under the federal law, have contributed to the satisfactory reformation of American manufacturing processes and to the great improvement in the quality of our foods and drugs. There are still, however, in every section of the country, a dealer who, in order to make an unfair profit, take advantage of every opportunity to adulterate and misrepresent their products. Vigilance is ever necessary to protect consumers and to prevent a return to previous demoralizing practices.

"The pure food law has come of age. It is no longer a mere law, but a part of our life, being of a surge of public indignation against existing conditions and having been carried forward in the earlier years by a wave of public indignation against the evils of the food and drug industry. The American public in general, I believe, considers that its investment of approximately one cent per capita per year to pay for the enforcement of the federal food and drug act is an excellent bargain.

"The state food and drug law in Kentucky is 24 years old and its enforcement is handled through the Department of Health and Hotels of the State Board of Health. Every local health officer or inspector is a deputy authorized by law to enforce this law.

PELLAGRA The United States Public Health Service states that although pellagra has been known to be more or less prevalent in certain sections of Europe for nearly two hundred years and in this country for almost a quarter of a century, it is only recently that the nature of its cause has been made clear and practical and effective measures for its treatment and prevention have been established. Pellagra is the most prevalent disease with which we have to contend as infectious and epidemic in play no part whatever in its causation, and the sanitary and public health measures commonly employed which are susceptible also of being applied to the control of the disease. It is a disease which is caused by a deficiency of the vitamin known as nicotinic acid, and it is caused by an inadequate supply of an essential food element which belongs to the class of necessary food principles known as vitamins.

"The deficiency of any one of the vitamins will bring about an impairment of health, and unless soon corrected will lead to the production of disease. The diseases which are brought about in this manner are known as "vitamin deficiency diseases" or diseases due to an "essential" deficiency. The nature of the disease produced depends upon the particular vitamin food lacking in the diet. Thus, scurvy follows the prolonged consumption of a diet in which the ascorbic vitamin, or vitamin C, is not supplied in sufficient quantity. It is caused by a diet deficient in the antiscorbutic vitamin, or vitamin D, and pellagra results from a diet which does not furnish a sufficient supply of the antipellagric vitamin, or vitamin B.

"The various foods and foodstuffs have been found to differ widely in the quantity of the antipellagric vitamin which they supply, and this makes variety in diet of the utmost importance in the treatment and prevention of pellagra. Some foods, such as fresh lean meats, liver, milk, codfish, salmon and commercial wheat germ, have been found to be so rich in this vitamin that the addition of a reasonable quantity of any one of them will effectively supplement an otherwise pellagra-producing diet. Other foods, including eggs, salted haddock, dried peas, soy beans, dried milk and tomato, have been found to possess considerable protective value, but must be consumed in relatively large quantities, especially when deficient upon as the only or principal source of vitamin B; while still others, including corn products, wheat flour, rice, oatmeal, salt pork, lard and the commercial lard substitutes, lard, margarine, fatback, suet, butter, margarine, fatback, potatoes, molasses and white rice are such poor sources of this vitamin that they cannot be depended upon, regardless of the quantity or combination consumed.

"Unfortunately in most sections of the country the diet is composed of a sufficiently large variety of foods to insure a fairly adequate supply of the pellagra-preventive vitamin at all seasons. Under such conditions, pellagra appears only sporadically, if at all, and usually results from dietary idiosyncrasies and conditions, or other factors peculiar to the individual.

DELATED FUNERALS

Nowhere is there more reverence for the dead and their resting places than in the mountains of Kentucky. This respect is a distinctive trait that has characterized the mountaineer from the time the highland country was first settled by pioneers from the colonies. The mountaineer burial plot may be high up on a slope and hardly accessible, but usually the graves show evidence of some attention, and the decorations, though they may be simple, bespeak emotions that may find crude expression. Often the mountain grave is covered with flowers, and even the use of colored glass are employed in the decorative scheme, which is quite apt to impress the stranger in those parts, who in a visit to a highland burying ground gets a sharp on folk customs that go back to a bygone day.

GREENVILLE BOY WINS MARBLE CHAMPIONSHIP

Johnnie Jeffries, 12 years old, Greenville, Ky., won the national marble championship at Ocean City, N. J., after he defeated J. P. Gorman, 12, Danville, Va., in the final round of the National Marble Tournament. When the boy stepped into the ring, 1500 people lined the grandstand. Jeffries is the son of Mrs. Lydia Jeffries, Greenville, and is a seventh grade pupil in the graded school here. He is the youngest of six children. Curran is the son of John Curran, 2218 Arthur street, and is a fourth grade pupil in the J. S. Stoddard High School.

COME AND SEE FOR YOURSELVES!

It is our special pleasure to re-print in The Times this week Mr. E. W. Donaldson's splendid article which originally appeared in The Ashland Daily Independent.

Without considering its general excellence of style, the readers of The Times will find the article richly deserving of a careful reading. We trust that it will reach many others outside of Kentucky.

For such publicity is of the sort most needed by Eastern Kentucky. It is important that those beyond our borders learn that we mountaineers are a progressive people, that the Hills are not merely the abodes of moonshiners and feudists, that the Kentucky Mountains, besides being a region of great natural beauty and wealth, is a place where hospitality and industry abide.

It is a temptation difficult to avoid that of writing of clumps of rhododendron concealing the feudist with his long rifle, of the bearded moonshiner and of the rude, log cabin. We all have something of the fictionalist and the romanticist in us. And people like to think of Eastern Kentucky as a battle ground across which gale blood enemies hunt on vengeance. That is why the Hills have the reputation they have.

Instead of emphasizing the cruder side of life in this section, let others who write of the Hills emulate Mr. Donaldson's example. Let them point out our scenic beauties, paint this section as a land of opportunity, tell of the stalwart traits of its true Anglo-Saxons—and invite the world to come in over our modern highways and see for themselves!

"GET BEHIND YOUR PAPER," SAYS BABSON

"I know of no other business," wrote Roger Babson, noted business statistician, last week, "that does so much good and is still so little appreciated as the newspaper business."

It was Mr. Babson's voice that cried in the wilderness of our speculative debauch, warning of impending panic and crash in the seemingly everlasting bull market of 1929. He is probably the most famous of the purveyors of business advice in this country and his opinions are regarded highly by thousands of conservative business men.

So, it is as gratifying, as we believe it to be deserved, by newspapers generally, to read the following:

"Not only the large city dailies, but the small country papers as well, are performing an economic function absolutely indispensable to the growth of the country. Hence, in these times of hard business, when many concerns are shortsightedly curtailing advertising, I want to make a personal appeal for everyone to get behind his own town paper and boost it.

"By so doing you will not only insure the continued life and service of an old and valued friend, but you will contribute strongly toward the recovery of business in your own town."

Mr. Babson believes that the newspaper is the best equipped agent to solve the problem of distribution, which he characterizes as the greatest problem facing business. He thinks that Will Rogers' oft-repeated saying: "All I know is what I read in the papers," is more than a joke, that this is the state of mind of most of us and that what the customer knows of the business man's product is what he reads in the papers.

It is difficult, especially for the country newspaper publisher, to persuade business men that newspaper advertising is the most productive form of advertising and that it is a shortsighted policy to curtail advertising in times of hard business; or to bring them to a realization of the fact that a country paper performs a function indispensable to the growth of the community. Perhaps the opinion of Roger Babson may prove more convincing.—Carlisle Mercury.

side from all parts of the state. This event annually is the most inspiring feature of the convention, whether state or national, and will be composed not only of the drum corps and bands in uniform and colorful uniforms, but also the Legion Posts and Auxiliary Units from every county in the commonwealth, near 1,000 Boy Scouts and representatives will take part in the parade, representatives of other patriotic organizations. Probably 5,000 men and women will take part in the parade through the main streets of Lexington.

Another long-to-be-remembered feature will be the drum corps contest, and fireworks spectacle that same night in the stadium at the University of Kentucky. The many drum corps at the convention will compete for some in cash prizes beneath the luxuriant lights in the stadium, which are used during the fall for night football games, which will bathe the entire field in daylight illumination. The warlike tunes which thrilled Americans in the eventful days of 1917-19, stirring marches and patriotic tunes, will be heard from hundreds of bands with their accompanying rattle from the snare drums. Following the drum corps contest, the flood lights will be dimmed, and from the adjacent football field, in which a long trench has been dug for the emplacement of the mortars, will be directed the most dazzling display of fireworks ever seen in Kentucky, accompanied by artificial music, the huge bonfire will burst high in air to paint a pyrotechnic picture of General Pershing and other war figures, ending with a fireworks tribute to the American heroes who laid down their lives in France.

As the smoke of the fireworks display is falling, the first convention dance will begin at the nearby men's gymnasium of the University. Judge Jay A. Vinson, of Wayland, was taken last week to the Veterans hospital, Johnson City, Tenn., for treatment. Mr. Vinson has been ill for some time, and arrangements for his removal to the hospital were made by Congressman A. J. May. He was accompanied with the American forces in the Spanish-American war.

Consider your Adam's Apple!!* Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants "Reach for a LUCKY instead" The great Lord Tennyson in a beautiful poem refers to a woman's Adam's Apple as "The warm white apple of her throat." Consider your Adam's Apple. Touch it - your Adam's Apple - That is your larynx - your voice box - it contains your vocal chords. When you consider your Adam's Apple you are considering your throat - your vocal chords. Protect the delicate tissues within your throat. Be careful in your choice of cigarettes. Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants! Reach for a LUCKY instead. Here in America LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette which brings you the added benefit of the exclusive "TOASTING" Process, which includes the use of modern Ultra Violet Rays. It is this exclusive process that expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. These expelled irritants are sold to manufacturers of chemical compounds. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple."

"Take It Easy" On Hot Days With These Cool Cornstarch Desserts
 May show and easy if you want to get along with you and the world in an old song that are particularly applicable to dessert-making in the summery days now with us.

There are always times when the cook wants to "take it easy" and need homemade sweets to have them remembered. Certainly one of the times is when summer rolls around with its hot and sultry weather. No one wants to stay inside and labor over elaborate desserts. And nobody needs to spend so many dollars on desserts unless to make a gift of one of those cold, hold friend over-starch. Cool to make and cooling to eat, and as economical as daylight saving days are long.

Of course, busy as we are, we can't in the case of such palatable, easy to make, easy to eat, and very good, thank you!

In all cases, one never has to be in a hurry to make these, and they are as easy to make as they are to eat.

Modern Music Made No Hit With Lord Balfour
 In music Lord Balfour took a great delight and was an enthusiastic lover of the old masters, especially of Handel. Modern music had little charm for him.

"I remember how patiently he would sit through dinner at his favorite restaurant in Paris until most of the clients had left and the noise of jazz and jugle had ceased," recalls Sir Ian Blaxter in his personal memoir of Balfour, "and would then ask the chef d'orchestre (a very gifted young Polish violinist) to play him some Eighteenth-century French music."

Then during the nine months Lord Balfour remained in Paris for the peace conference his house was the scene of many brilliant musical evenings.

"I remember one evening," says Sir Ian, "when Charles Hendl was going to sing, he inquired delicately whether anybody present objected to German songs." The chief (Balfour) promptly replied: "I don't. I will take them as part of the repertories that they owe us."

Ingenious Methods of Making Use of Suction
 Some of our readers probably are old enough to remember the first vacuum cleaners and the interest aroused when it was found that a carpet could be cleaned of dirt without a broom being used. Coal is now unloaded by suction. The pipe used is made of steel and is 12 inches in diameter, the nozzle is a box three feet long and something more than a foot wide and the most ingenious part of the invention is an arrangement to prevent the whole thing getting choked by coal dust. The latest invention in this direction is a marvellous fish trap. In this case a pipe of great size is lowered from the fishing vessel deep into the sea, the air is exhausted and the water rushes in, carrying with it the fish. The fish are kept, the water flows back. This more use for this kind of device is in the war against locusts. In Palestine, where there was a plague of these ravenous creatures, gigantic vacuum cleaners fixed on motor vehicles were used and the locusts drawn up by the million.

Royal Friend of Dogs
 Queen Victoria's love of animals (a characteristic inherited by her descendants) is shown in several passages of her recently published letters. In August, 1885, when everybody in London was infected with an unreasonable fear of mad dogs, she wrote a long memorandum on cruelty to animals which might almost be described as the Magna Charta of man's four-footed pensioners. "As regards her poor dear friends," runs the first clause, "she would repeat that no dogs should ever be killed by police unless the veterinary surgeon declared they were mad. That dogs, who were close to the masters or their house door, poor quiet dogs should be left alone and not molested."

Callant
 Mrs. Mabel Williams contributes a charming little episode in the life of three-year-old Patty who was visiting her grandparents near Riverside. She watched her grandmother plucking a turkey and finally asked: "Granny, what are you pulling those hen leaves off the turkey for?" A little later in the day, Patty was shown the big flock of turkeys and in passing among them, accidentally stepped on a big gobblers' foot. Little Patty looked the big gobbler in the eye and said contently: "Pardon me."—Los Angeles Times.

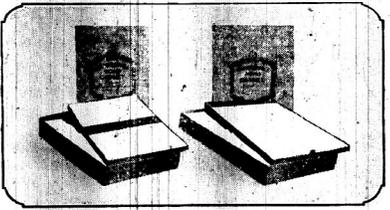

Roughness on Oceans
 The zone of greatest storm frequency lies between latitudes 45 degrees and 55 degrees. The most severe are the hurricanes that begin in the tropical portion of the Atlantic. The North Atlantic lies in the path of the great procession of cyclones and anti-cyclones of the middle latitudes, and also in the path of the West Indian hurricane over its lower latitudes, and counterparts of those atmospheric disturbances in the South Atlantic. The Pacific is subject to sudden and violent storms, especially typhoons, but the frequency of storms is not so great as in the Atlantic.

Log of the Great Western
 The original log of the Great Western steamship, which crossed the Atlantic in 1838, is being raised by a few hours being the first steamer to do so, came to light in Bristol. The log was found by an old sailor employed in the Bristol Corporation's offices among a lot of rubbish. An expert recognized the name of Lieut. J. Hoadin as that of the captain of the Great Western, and other experts have pronounced the log as genuine. The first steamship to cross was the Sirius.

Prehistoric Art Gallery
 The London-Italian scientific expedition in South Africa found in a rock shelter not far from the Congo border a large number of ancient rock engravings which appear to depict human figures in a procession. Professor Dart, of Transvaal university, the discoverer of the Taungs skull, a member of the expedition, declares that the discovery is a most important one, the period of the engravings being between four and six thousand years B. C.
