ASHES FOR THE FOURTH

The Glorious Fourth still is an anti-climax at Spencer, Iowa, a town of 5,000, which celebrated prematurely and so spectacularly that the popular taste for fireworks display was satisfied.

Four paragraphs of news, as tightly packed as a bunch of fireworks, contain a graphic picture of the biggest Saturday in Spencer's history. A lighted sparkler in the hands of a small boy ignited a fireworks display in a corner drug store, starting a fire which razed 30 buildings...

"Sleep up the block and across the street by the blaze, one among the scattered bunches of fireworks in other stores, razed four blocks of business buildings, causing damage estimated at two million dollars."

"The store in which the fire started was below the telephone office. Several apartments were endangered, but women carried three to safety while others raced through the flames on the highway."

"The water supply gave out as seven fire companies joined with the regulars and volunteers of Spencer. The Shou river water was pumped to the scene. Dynamite was used to blast clear spaces between burning structures and those in the fire's path."

"Two small boys in the United States ever have been treated to an occasion like that in honor by their country's birth. The account, however, lacks one illuminating detail. It would be instructive to learn what proportion of the $2,000,000 destruction has been treated to an occasion like that in honor by their country's birth. The account, however, lacks one illuminating detail. It would be instructive to learn what proportion of the $2,000,000 destruction has been represented by the value of the fireworks stocks which kept exploding and 'renewing the blaze' and how the anticipated retail profits on them compared to the total loss sustained by the merchants of the town."

Without the information, it is safe to conjecture that it will take the profits on a great many years' sales of 'sparklers' to recoup. What a lot of things, handled by trained men in the most approved fashion, are forgotten in districts where small boys can purchase and handle explosives and matches at the same time—Courtesies.

French Law Officials Wanted Long to Strike

"It is a serious thing to fall foul of the law in France," writes a columnist in the Manchester Guardian. "The obvious reason for this, naturally, is sure as nor do most French officers of the law. Most delinquents after men escape from Devil's island or the Fort de Joux than to be hanged on the guillotine in the streets of Marseilles or Bordeaux and told to come along to the police station."

And recently an elderly peasant woman in a village near Boulogne was flogged for an eight-franc fine inflicted on her mischievous ways years ago. It appears that on September 15, 1931, three children were seen gleefully indulging in their mischievous ways years ago. "She was a busy woman with eight other small children continually getting into the sort of mild trouble that is the lot of the busy mother. She had a husband, but he never came along, and presently she forgot about him. Recently, however, she received that summons with a demand to pay child support. Mystified, she went to the office of the local justice of the peace. There he explained what it was all about, and said that they had found the matter outstanding in the books. She paid it to avoid further bother."

Nothing Modern About the Use of Spectacles

Glasses for the aid of our sight are almost as old as the universe. It is not far-fetched to think that the Athenians 2200 years ago knew of the use of the convex lens. An article on the history of glasses, in Hyeza Magazine, tells the story. The ruins of Nineveh yielded the oldest known convex lens of glass, which was dated 2,000 years ago. Pliny has recorded, Doctor Ed. Jones reports, that Nero winked and blinked and brought out close to his eyes. Nero was wont to gaze on gladiatorial fights through a glass cut from a huge emerald. The first of our present-day spectacles was produced by Roger Bacon, who in about the year 1280 A. D. made a reading glass to be used in magnifying the smallest letters. Benjamin Franklin was the inventor of the bifocal spectacles.

Action of Roentgen Rays

A famous physicist, Wilhelm Konrad Roentgen, born at Lenep, in Prussia, in 1845, discovered the X-ray, or Roentgen rays, in 1895. He was a professor of physics at that time. The X-rays are known to be vibrations of the ether, similar to light waves, but their wavelength is so extremely short that every substance, regardless of color, is more or less transparent to them. They are not deflected by magnets when a high tension electric current is sent through a glass tube from which the air has been highly exhausted, the negative pole or cathode sends out an invisible stream of negatively charged particles called cathode rays. These rays can be brought to a focus like light, and when focused on a metallic target within the tube, the metal becomes intensely hot and gives off these Roentgen rays, or X-rays.

Bug-Rest Houses

The late Seth Doddridge, wealthy and pious banker of Albion, Central Indiana, left $100,000 to build and endow in perpetuity three rest houses into which insects may withdraw from the work. Four travelers will be allowed to sleep overnight in these bug-rest houses, will be paid a small sum for doing so, as long as they do not eat and kill no bugs. Should a seagull hit a bug, even by accidentally rolling over, he will be ejected from the bug house by attendants and given a small sum of money. No less than 200 insect rest houses of a more or less similar nature are maintained throughout Indiana by plus activities who realize that no bug is too insignificant to contain the reincarnated soul of an ancestor.—Time Magazine.

Try Yawning

If you would fortify your willing nerves before walking into the boss' office to ask for that long-delayed raise or for that luscious higher job, just yawn and indulge in a hearty stretch. The procedure is guaranteed by one authority to give renewed courage and vocal tones that will reflect confidence in the crucial interview. Helen Hathaway, author and contributor to many noted periodicals, says that bodily poise is directly affected with mental balance through yawning and regular breathing. The way of acquiring the elusive quality, she says, is through ostentatious (English for "yawning").

Italy's Flag

The royal standard of Italy consists of a square blue field, on which is centered the national coat of arms. When Napoleon made the northern province of Italy into a kingdom in 1802 he gave it a flag of three colors—green next to the flagstaff, white in the middle and red at the end. This flag disappeared when Napoleon was overthrown, but was revived when Victor Emmanuel, king of Sardinia and a member of the house of Savoy, became king. At the present day Italy's flag consists of the Savoy arms, surmounted by a crown, on the central staff.

Glimpses at Sports

HARD LUCK, ETC.

For the hard luck pitcher of the last week we nominate young Mr. McDonald, of the Philadelphia Athletics. The youngster was facing the slugging Yankees. Through the entire nine innings he permitted only two hits while his opponent, Ruffing, was allowing shot for shot with Burke, then the most likely of those hits garnered off his delivery was homers, one coming after the youngster had walked a man. But Connie Mack, we should think, doesn't feel so and about this McDonald's twelfth pitching performance the wily Mack believes that he has another competitor to put up with. Mack is providing a bit of advice for those from men, Grover and Evershaw. With a lead at this stage of the race of five and a half games, and with his pitching staff showing no signs of breaking under the strain, Mr. Mack is providing a bit of advice for those from men, Grover and Evershaw. MAGIC PUTTER WINS

Analysis of the play of Billie Burke. United States Open Golf Championship. Von Elm, who matched shot for shot with Burke, never staged the most brilliant marathon ever staged in this country, shows that the magic of his putter won the title for Burke. Von Elm could move Burke from the clubhouse and therein lay the story of Burke's victory. This game of golf with real golfers has become largely a matter of pitch and putt. All of the leaders in the sport hit the ball far and straight down the fairway; then for a par four hole, it's a matter of who pitches best and uses the putter most accurately.

Louis Schneider Wins 500 Mile Race

Louis Schneider, Indianapolis youth, with his mechanic, Jigger Johnson just before and just after he rode a fame and $20,000 pot of gold in the 500 mile Speedway Classic May 30. No man has ever won two years consecutively, but Schneider is the twelfth consecutive winner on Firestone Tires, and to express his gratitude for his safety and victory he sent Harvey S. Firestone the following telegram from the track: "I have just won the five hundred mile Indianapolis race on Six Hundred Twenty Firestone Gum Dipped Tires. It was a most difficult and grueling test for tires due to a wet slippery track, frequent showers. Safety is a top priority of greatest importance and my Firestone Tires enabled me to make an average speed of 90.2 miles per hour. I have always used Firestone Tires in all my racing for I have great confidence in their safety and dependability and I want to thank you for the part Firestone Tires played in my victory today for I believe my tires and equipment had been thoroughly prepared for the race and I am sure that the safety of my tires was the main reason for my success."

Consider your Adam's Apple!!*
Don't Rasp Your Throat

With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

LUCKIES are always kind to your throat

Everyone has an Adam's Apple—Every man—every woman has one. Touch your Adam's Apple with your finger. You are actually touching your larynx—this is your voice box—it contains your vocal chords. When you consider your Adam's Apple, you are considering your throat—your vocal chords.

"TOASTING" expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. These expelled irritants are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE—the modern cigarette. We sell these expelled irritants to manufacturers of chemical compounds. Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why the "TOASTING" Process includes the use of Ultra Violet Rays. LUCKY STRIKE—made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED"—an electric and exclusive heating process. It is this process that expels these harsh irritants. No wonder 20,679 American physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating. No wonder LUCKIES are always kind to your throat. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple." Be careful in your choice of cigarettes.

BOYS AT CAMP KNOW FIND STAY ENJOYABLE

Charles Keith Rice, (SP-4), who has been down here in the Camp Knox, Ky., C. M. T. C. camp, enjoyed a day's diversion of entertainment in photographing at any time of the day. This entertainment is furnished them at so small a charge that no man need miss a single part of it. Many of the features will be educational and will introduce a large number of the tribes to places and historic sites which they have read about and now are to see for the first time at the expense of the government almost entirely. Every week-end brings something new and something different but never a depreciation in interest value.

These recreational features have been arranged for the candidates by First Lieut. James E. Rees, athletic officer, who has had much experience in this line of work. He knows what these boys really enjoy and is giving it to them in large doses. The first feature of this program was the boat ride from Louisville to Ross Lake, Saturday, July 11, but that isn't the biggest item; when the boys boarded the boat they were met by a boy of Louisville's "burning" young boys. The following day, July 12, those who wished and were not too tired from the boat ride, took a trip to Hot Springs, Kentucky, to visit the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln. The trip was made in large open trucks, and only those who had not made previous trips were allowed to go. Two days later were arranged for the candidates here at camp. They will be held on the evenings of July 15th and 22nd. The camp hostess has arranged for girls to come from Louisville to attend the dances.

There is one other trip also one of the most important that is made, Fort Worth, Texas. Here for the first time many boys are given the privilege of seeing and exploring one of the wonders of the world. This trip also is made by motor, the food for each being furnished by the various organizations. This trip will be made before 1931. What more could any boy ask in the entertainment line in the brief space of four weeks. There will certainly be no dull moments here, with every boy remaining over the week-end moments of some way just rest, and looking eagerly forward to the next week's trip with the same confidence that they get the high grade of entertainment the "show" will give.

TO THE VOTERS OF FLOYD COUNTY:

For the first time I come asking your support for political office. I was born in Floyd county at Jackson, Ky. My father died when I was 10 years old, and I, being the oldest son, soon had to become the head of the family.

I do not tell this seeking the shedding of crossed tears. I am not seeking sympathy. I am just trying to show you voters that I learned early in life to scarp for what I get, and I sent to Frankfort I can and will scarp for the interests of the folks back home. I became accustomed in early life to matching wits with the other fellows, which qualifies me the more to make you a better Representative.

I was a teacher for four years in the Floyd county schools and know what the schools need. Hoping to receive your support in my candidacy for Representative at the Democratic primary August 1st.

Sincerely yours, OSCAR W. HAYS (Detailed adv.)

COL. REID FIRST MAN IN U. S. TO BE TWICE... The general said to me: "You little devil, what are you doing here? I'll see you sent back to your mother."

...buried with my people. But I... "I wish the burial of my body to be from this chapel. I do not want any pallbearers selected, nor singers. Any of you that are now my associates can gently place them under the sleeping of the sanctuary. Each one of you place a sweet violet, a rosebud, a carnation or lily of the valley, and arrange them all around the sunflower that is presently selected, which is the only flower that bows to the sun. It dies in the east, stands erect at high noon and then as the sun sinks into the horizon, the sunflower pays its last allegiance to it."

"I came to just in time, before the lid of the coffin was fastened. I must have scared those about when I believed to be dead, 'resurrected' myself."

"Dies" Again... "The second time I 'died,' also at Memphis, was at the Confederate reunion three or four years ago. In the parade my horse reared, my saddle flung and I tumbled with the saddle and fell with great force. I was carried to St. Joseph's hospital. The Little Sisters of Charity laid me out in the cooling barrel where my body was to wait until the coffin came. I was dead again. Then I came to and said:

"Sister, give I a hole in my sock, and give me just about 25¢."

"She said: 'Yes, you are the dearest old man that I ever did wash.'"

"The other sister, neither seemed so frightened of it supposed orpudicrous, whom I remarked: 'The soul must be out of it, because...'"

"I said to them: 'No, I am not out of my body. My mother had six sons, all of whom were in the Southern army. She told me: 'Always never leave home with out a hole in your sock. If you should die among strangers they would bury you in the soldier's field among the unknown.' They they all laughed."

"Col. Reid was very near death for many days, however, in his second experience. He was not so young and resilient as he had been so long before when, as a boy, he fought the angel of death in a standstill."

"Col. Reid has been a candidate for office many times, and sometimes he has been elected. He edited a paper for a time and more recently wrote a book in which he chronicled his certain old families in a way that caused

"the Truth for which our ancestors fought and suffered..."

"SIRENS still sing the song of the easy way for the moment of difficulty, but the common sense of the common man, the inherited tradition of an independent and self-reliant race, the historical memory of Americans who glorify in Valley Forge even as they glorify in Yorktown—all these tell us that: For which our ancestors fought and suffered, the truth which echoes upward from this soil of blood and tears, that the way to the nation's greatness is the path of self-reliance, independence and steadfastness in times of trial and stress."

The following excerpts are from the address of President Hoover delivered on Memorial Day, 1931 at Valley Forge, Pennsylvania in the specious claim that everybody collectively owes each of us individually an opportunity to earn a living, and the equally specious claim that hired representatives of a hundred million people can do better than the people themselves in thinking and planning their own future.

"Numerous are the temptations under the distress of the day to turn aside from our true national purposes and from wise national policies and fundamental ideals of the men who built our republic. Never was the lure of the rosy path to every panacea and of easy ways so imagined security more tempting."

but perhaps the most glorious moment, was longed for alone for national independence, but to retain our freedom to continue unhampered, the most promising social experiment in all human history.

considerable suffering. Years ago he had a friendship with Major Arthur Belmont, of New York, then a member of the New York State Legislature and brother of Col. Reid. The general desired to implant the idea of a hospital in the minds of the people in the vicinity and Major Belmont gave him ground and a building of the same time donating a sum of money. None prayed more sincerely for Major Belmont's soul than Col. Reid when Belmont was summoned.

Tireless Worker... Col. Reid is in charge of various religious activities at the Kentucky House of Reform for boys and he travels night and day, when necessary, to carry out his duties.

The writer asked him about the preparations for his third "death" and Col. Reid dictated to a stenographer his desires of a plan for his requiesce, the chapel referred to being that given him by Major Belmont so many years ago.

"When I fall asleep my soul shall sleep in the bosom of mother earth to await the coming of Jesus to sound the trumpet of God, and I will awake long ago with Him and you that are awake when the trumpet sounds will be sought up in the clouds with us."

"I wish the burial of my body to be from this chapel. I do not want any pallbearers selected, nor singers. Any of you that are now my associates can gently place them under the sleeping of the sanctuary. Each one of you place a sweet violet, a rosebud, a carnation or lily of the valley, and arrange them all around the sunflower that is presently selected, which is the only flower that bows to the sun. It dies in the east, stands erect at high noon and then as the sun sinks into the horizon, the sunflower pays its last allegiance to it."

Like Parades... Col. Reid participates in every parade in which there is room for him. He has preached hundreds of sermons, especially to boys, to whom he is an especial ministrant. He is the only man in Kentucky who can give the famous old "rebel yell," and he loses it with or without occasion. Persons who see him never forget Col. Reid, and passers through Lexington have written back to inquire the identity of the strange yet dignified, figure riding through the streets on his horse which, by the way, accompanies him to every Confederate reunion which the doughty colonel is able to attend.

Sometimes certain financial arrangements have to be made, but the colonel and his horse are inseparable and they get there and back, somehow, "through the grace of the Lord," Col. Reid would aver.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Brown have moved here from Beelsden, where they have resided for the past few years. They have taken a residence in the property on First avenue which they recently purchased from W. B. Hixon.

Children Enrolled in Old English Colleges

A curious possibility of the turning of the wheel is suggested by the files which is being made for an earlier entry into the universities, partly in order that distressed modern parents may be relieved a little earlier of the cost of maintenance of sons and, presumably, daughters. It is true that at present boys enter the university at an age when, over a long period, they would have been ready to leave. John Milton had only just passed his fifteenth birthday when he went up from St. Paul's school to Cambridge, and he was nineteen when he took his bachelor degree. Sir John Denham was sent to Oxford at sixteen, though he seems to have belonged himself there very much after the fashion of some young fellows who have matriculated at a later age, for the future poet is described as a "discontented young man, given more to dice and cards than study." But even fifteen or sixteen, which seems very early to us, would have seemed very late to the authorities of an earlier age, when "thousands of boys, bundled in bare, lolling houses, clattering round town, were as poor as themselves, in church porch and house porch" took the place of "the brightly colored train of dukes and lords." It was in those days that scholars like Edmund Rich, archbishop of Canterbury and saint in later days, came to Oxford, in boy of twelve years. The most ardent advocates of change would scarcely advise a return to those days—Manchester (Glasgow) Guardian.

Demand for Ambergris Greater Than Supply

Treasure trove was recently thrown up on a Pacific coast beach in the form of a piece of ambergris at least that was what its discoverer called it. Ambergris, always scarce and now even scarcer, has been a coveted possession for centuries in view of the high price it commands. It has figured in history and in fiction, and from time to time it has brought a measure of wealth to those who have been fortunate enough to find a piece of it. This strange substance comes either from the stomach or the intestines of the sperm whale and frequently contains the beaks of cuttlefish, on which the whale feeds. It is a gray, waxy substance, often spotted with darker streaks. Whalers after a kill sometimes found large pieces of it floating in the water. Long ago chemists discovered that ambergris could be melted in boiling alcohol and used in the manufacture of perfume. Hence it became a valuable commodity. It is now rarer than it used to be, because of the scarcity of sperm whales. In the early days of American whaling the sperm whale was plentiful, ranging into the North Atlantic for its food.

Remains of Old Roman City

Timgad is a ruined city, 23 miles southeast of Batis, in the department of Constantine, Algeria. Timgad, the Thamugas of the Romans, was built on the lower slopes of the northern side of the Aurès mountains, and was situated at the intersection of six roads. The auditorium of the theater, which held nearly 4,000 persons, is complete. A little west of the theater are baths, containing paved and mosaic floors in perfect preservation. Ruins of other and larger temples are found in all four quarters of the city, those on the north being very extensive. There are the remains of seven churches. Numerous inscriptions have been found on the ruins and from them many events in the history of Thamugas have been known. The name was passed from history after the defeat of Giscorius, governor of Africa, by the Arabs in 647.

Road Versus Rail

It is now many years since the express of the railway companies running England to Scotland services used to race against each other, and there is today very little "sporting interest" in connection with trains. On the continent, a new form of railway racing was growing up some time ago, touring cars being run against express. This road versus rail racing is now discouraged in Europe. However it is catching on so much in New Zealand that a recent race between a car and the Wellington-to-Auckland train was broadcast throughout the country. The race took place at night and, despite the handicap of bad and very hilly roads, the car won by half an hour.

Had Daughter's Sympathy

Iris had been sitting with an absorbed look on her face, gazing at her father.

"Why did you marry mother, dad?" she suddenly said.

"Because I was a fool, I suppose," he replied.

"Poor Mamma," said Iris softly.

"What do you mean, miss?" asked father sharply.

"I mean that it was sad for mother to marry a fool, dad," explained Iris seriously.

Ray Baths for Horses

Since horses and dogs are being treated with artificial sunlight long before they go on the track, in England, some stalls are fitted with four powerful lights and in the rear from these the animals stand quietly while taking their "baths." It is these in the horse the sunlight is considered a factor when deciding
