MILK ORDINANCE TO BE EFFECTIVE ON NOVEMBER 15

Dairymen Must Meet Requirements,
Says Health Department and Sanitary Inspector

SUPPLY MUCH IMPROVED

On November 15 the "City Milk Ordinance" passed by the city council some time ago will go into effect, according to M. V. Clark, sanitary inspector, and Dr. Marvin Blandin, director of the Floyd county health department.

After this date, all milk sold within the limits of the city of Princeton must have the grade of that milk supply placed upon the cup of each bottle of milk, this grade to be determined by the rules and regulations laid down by the state board of health and supervised by the local health board.

In order to give all local dairymen every possible chance to meet the necessary requirements for the production of the highest grade of milk effective date of the ordinance has been put off from time to time. This time has been well spent. A vast improvement has been made in most all of the milk supplies, which might not otherwise have been accomplished.

When this ordinance goes into effect next month, it is believed that there will be three grades of grade "A" milk produced locally.

This ordinance is one advocated the nation over, and when once established, it is one which every citizen should be proud to have.

After the effective grading date, here are some of the things that every person may be sure of regarding all grade "A" milk produced and sold locally:

1. All cows have been tuberculin and abortion tested.
2. Cows are being milked and being cared for in an approved dairy barn.
3. Milk is being handled in an approved milk house, where nothing else may be kept or stored.
4. All streams are being protected by an approved method.
5. No open tubs on premises.

CLUB PRESIDENT TO ADDRESS MEETING

Mrs. E. B. May, of Maytown, District Governor, to Have Charge of Program

The peak of the club year to every club woman of the district will be at hand October 24, in Pikeville when their beloved state president, Mrs. Paul Wickline, of Greenup, Ky., will bring to them the harvest of the suggestions and aspirations for their fruitful club year. After attending the National Board meeting of the General Federation of Women's Club Meeting of all Kentucky's leading club women, Mrs. Wickline will have a wealth of club material for her club women to take back to their homes.

Without the contact of our state officers we feel that the great vision which characterized the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. E. R. May, of Maytown, will have charge of the entire program of the day. By virtue of her office as District Governor, she will be able to her to act as a source of inspiration, this not being a new experience as she was very active in club work previous to her election as a governor.

Mrs. E. F. King will give the invocation. Mrs. Katherine Lappier, former Congresswoman and present president of the Pikeville club, is to outline the plan for the State Convention which is to be held in Pikeville in May of next year.

Mrs. H. F. King will give the invocation. Mrs. Katherine Lappier, former Congresswoman and present president of the Pikeville club, is to outline the plan for the State Convention which is to be held in Pikeville in May of next year.

VET. CONDUCTOR CLAIMED BY DEATH

Robert White, Long Time Employee of Chesapeake and Ohio, Passes Away in Huntington

Robert F. White, 67, veteran C. and O. conductor and one of Ashland's best known citizens, died at the C. and O. hospital in Huntington last week following an illness of three weeks.

Born in Knoxville, Tenn., April 28, 1869, Mr. White had been employed by the C. and O. Railway Company for the last 37 years and had resided in Ashland for the last 21 years. He was passenger conductor of the Ashland and Big Sandy trains.

News of Mr. White's passing comes at a distinct shock to his relatives and friends. He was well and popularly known by practically every railway employee on both the Ashland and Lexington divisions of the C. and O.

Mr. White suffered a stroke of apoplexy about three weeks ago, and since then his condition had been reported to be hopeless.

He was a member of the Beneficent and Protective Order of Elks, of the Order of Railway Conductors and of the B. of E. T.

Mr. White is survived by his widow, Mrs. Helen White, and four children: R. W. White, of Lexington; G. D. White, Los Angeles, Cal.; Ralph E. White, of Ashland; and Mrs. Edward T. Ends, of Lexington, and one stepdaughter, Mrs. Helen McLaughlin, of White, N. C.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Isaac Stratton, assisted by Wm. Warik, at the home, and burial was made in the Dwell cemetery under the direction of E. P. Arnold.

BRIDGE DESTRUCTION SEEN AS PASSING OF LANDMARK

The whir of a winch, the wheeze of a low-toned and the thundering roar of cranking steel dominated the air around the first street bridge once again, but not the activity that marked the "big day" in the life of the span that once was Princeton's gateway to the "beyond" of the outside world. Less than 12 years ago the masses of hand-tooled slatting board, whining cast rods and vibrating bridgework was the sign of business to merchants of the town in the summer general house news to the "mawey" and of visitors to an almost "lost" township walled in by the inaccessibility of roads.

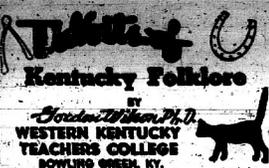

Meeting the train was a great event in the everyday life of Princeton. After a puffing, snowing engine had managed to round its way by crag and bend with a magnificent (at least, so seemed to such) line of 11 or 12 coaches to halt momentarily at the town's center, it was usually greeted by a host of the town's population on horseback. Four trains ran daily—two "up" trains and two "down" trains. The "down" trains kept the mechanics and laymen busy and the "up" trains kept the steady and the people of the town busy.

The train that ran daily was not only popular, as a social function, but also with it, in carrying a crowd and many a good, lifeless, abused, abused from supper tables to be among the "big day" that was usually seen out.

A merchant in business here during the "big day" that in the two hours between the morning train and the day long business train he had no time to do anything but get all his day long now.

The bridge that linked us to our neighbors was built in 1807 by two sons of this county, A. J. and W. H. May, of Princeton, and Lem and F. A. Bowers, then of Pikeville. Later, J. M. Weddington bought an interest in this enterprise known as the Princeton Bridge Company. It was operated as a public utility and added to the county in 1912. Andy Stephens was told before the bridge was built it was operated as a toll bridge. In contrast to the steam hoists used to erect the bridge, the H. L. May Engine & Co. Company are using heavy electric hoists. It speaks the difference between the "old" and the "new" bridge. The "old" bridge was built in 1807 by two sons of this county, A. J. and W. H. THE SMOKEHOUSE. No hold of a sea going vessel ever held a more motley or useful array of things as that of the smokehouse. And everything had its use. The rank, acid odor of soap grease, the alkaline smell of soap, the thick odor of sauerkraut, and the desecrating smell of ham and bacon and smoked sausage. And, best of all, the smell that had been used to cure the meat, everything that is, in addition, that true, smoky, smokehouse odor that every farm boy knows.

How often the smokehouse figured in the life of the people! We were carefully locked up every night to keep its treacherous fumes from being blown. It was a sort of sign that the day's work was over when Mycher began to wash the supper dishes, and called the youngest boy to see whether the smokehouse was locked. When Mycher saw that the door was closed, he would go to the door and knock, and when the boy answered, he would say, "The smokehouse is locked."

Sarah Ann's Cooking Class

Apples are grown practically everywhere and are one of the most inexpensive fruits and have a high nutritive value. They are a valuable health asset, before anyone thought of vitamins. They add variety and flavor to the diet, served raw, cooked as an individual dish or as a garnish for a plate. These recipes will aid you in serving apples often and in keeping the family appetite satisfied. (1934)

BREAKFAST APPLES. Wash and wipe 4 large tart apples, remove the cores and slice, with 2 tablespoons of butter in a frying pan when hot, turn in the apples and cover immediately. Cook briskly for a few minutes, when delicately broasted, turn over and brown on other side. Sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar. Serve hot with ham and eggs or sausage and griddle cakes. C-4

APPLE GLAZE. 1 1/2 cups sugar. 1/4 cup water. Juice and grated rind of 12 lemons. Cinnamon drops. Baked pie shell. Pare core and quarter apples. Cook slowly in syrup (made of sugar, water and lemon) until tender. Do not mangle. Remove from syrup, drain apples, and cook the syrup until it becomes a thin jelly. For cinnamon flavor and red color add 1 tablespoon cinnamon drops. Remove from heat and cool slightly. Arrange on cold quartered apple, garnish with apple and cook the syrup until it becomes a thin jelly. For cinnamon flavor and red color add 1 tablespoon cinnamon drops. Remove from heat and cool slightly. Arrange on cold quartered apple, garnish with apple and cook the syrup until it becomes a thin jelly.

APPLE CRUNCH. Fill a baking dish with peeled sliced apples. Sprinkle with tablespoon of cinnamon and the rest of the ingredients. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 30 minutes. Serve with vanilla ice cream. C-5

APPLE BUTTY. Put in a buttered casserole a layer of apple sauce, then a layer composed of toasted bread, stale cake, jelly or Graham cracker. Repeat with apple sauce and crumbs. Top with a generous sprinkling of brown sugar, bits of butter and cinnamon. Bake until hot through. This may be turned into a refrigerator dish by using whipped cream instead of butter. Let stand over night. C-6

APPLE DUFF PUDDING. 2 cups flour. 1 cup milk. 3 eggs. 3 cups sliced apples. 2 teaspoons baking powder. 2 tablespoons melted shortening. Mix into a batter and add sliced apples. Put over a greased pudding dish and steam 2 hours. Serve hot with hard sauce. C-7

APPLE PUDDING. Stew and sweeten 3 large apples. Mix with cinnamon and nutmeg. Make a heated custard using 2 cups of milk, 2 eggs, 1/4 cup sugar and 1/2 cup sugar. Pare over stewed apples. Beat 2 eggs white stiff, add 1/2 cup sugar. Put on top of custard. Bake in slow oven 30 minutes. Serve hot or cold. C-8

APPLE RING AND CARROT SALAD. Cut large tart apples into 1/4 slices. Core but do not pare. Place on lettuce. Fill the centers with grated raw carrots. Top with a green pepper stir. Serve with French dressing. C-9

JELLED APPLE SAUCE. 2 cups tarted apple sauce. 1/4 cup sugar. 2 tablespoons red cinnamon candy. 1 teaspoon nutmeg. 1 teaspoon vanilla. 2 tablespoons water. 1 teaspoon lemon juice. Heat apple sauce to boiling point and add sugar, cinnamon candy, nutmeg and gelatin which has been softened in cold water. Stir until gelatin and cinnamon candies have been dissolved. Cool and add lemon

Electricity Reduced

UNDER our continuous billing plan you secure the advantage of the new reduced residential rates even though a large portion of the consumption of electricity billed in October was used in September. Many customers have already received their October bill and have had the opportunity of comparing the new reduced rates with the old. The whole town is talking of these new low rates. Our customers are particularly delighted with the rapidity with which the rate declines to the low 2 1/2 cent block. Remember that after you have used 70 kilowatt-hours the rate per kilowatt-hour drops to 2 1/2 cents for the next 250 kilowatt-hours and above 300 kilowatt-hours a month you may buy all you need at the bargain price of 1 1/2 cents a kilowatt-hour.

STEP UP your use of electricity — STEP DOWN the cost

Below the illustration, it says 'Buy it wholesale - use it freely'.

OCTOBER 27 DESIGNATED AS UNITED STATES NAVY DAY

Each year, this day is designated as Navy Day, in order that the people of the United States may pay a deserved tribute to past deeds of the U. S. Navy. This year, October 27, Navy Day, and the Navy is holding an open house for all our citizens throughout the world. In China, the Philippines, Honolulu, Panama, the West Indies, and all the important and other sections in the United States, offices are being shown in great detail of the Navy's complex organization. October 27 was selected as Navy Day because it is the birthday of the United States Navy. It was on this day in 1775 that the first presidential authorizing naval vessels was introduced into Congress. This date is also the birthday of one of our greatest presidents, the one who has spent much of his life establishing a sound naval policy for the United States. Those who are blind as you are and to force that the nation be a navy. This is natural, it is the little opportunity to you to be in a contact with anything pertaining to the Navy. If you do happen to think about it, you probably feel that the Navy is something which adds merely a use in case of war, and as the possibility of war is remote, you probably feel it is a waste of time to think about the naval forces of the United States.

Although the Navy is extremely important during war, its value is primarily to keep us out of war. Nations are a great deal like people. A man who is able and willing to protect himself is seldom called upon to do so, but the man or boy who will not do so, but who is called upon for help, is continually pushed and do so. It is with nations, as the actions of Japan, Italy and Germany with regard to some weaker nations, will testify. The record which our navy has made during the wars this country has been engaged in, is one of which any citizen may justly be proud. The record it has made and the good it has accomplished during

Safety On the Highways

Seldom does a citizen take a long automobile journey without coming home with some story of danger as he tells how he narrowly escaped injury when another vehicle forced him off the road or barely averted crashing into his car.

The fact is that something must be done about highway accidents but nobody knows what should be done. Should high speed automobiles be outlawed? Few people agree that this would be the right remedy, although most of them acknowledge that speeding is the cause of most accidents.

Of course one way highways would cut down the accidents but cost of roads of this nature is prohibitive in many areas. Rigid enforcement of all traffic regulations would also help but too often the highway patrolman is not available because of the simple truth that he cannot be everywhere.

One contribution to safety on the highways, however, can be made made by every motorist. You can obey traffic regulations, observe warning signs and drive courteously at all times. This is what everyone of us can do to aid in meeting a dangerous situation although the objection immediately comes up that all the care possible will not save a considerate driver from a fool on the roads.

The campaign of 1938 is now in its final stages with both candidates and their supporters confident and most of its history completed. President Roosevelt and Governor Landon have travelled extensively through a number of states, where party strategy dictated major appeals, and in less than two weeks the voters of the nation must decide who is to be the winner.

Naturally, there is much partisan feeling and men and women under the stress of political battling have become overwrought. They have made foolish charges and predictions. There has been some ill feeling engendered but most of it will blow away with the count of the ballots. Luckily for the nation most of the dire prophecies will not come true, regardless of who is elected.

HOW TO AVOID FIRES

Now that Fire Prevention Week has passed and the people of this county have settled back with the conviction that after all, it was just another one of those kind of weeks, it might not be amiss to make a few reflections, in the hope of saving some lives in this county during the coming winter.

Two-thirds of the fires that occur in this county blaze up in dwellings and are responsible for the loss of 7,000 lives, half of them children. Statistics show that there are eight major causes of fires in the homes: rubbish, defective chimneys—combustible refuse, defective heating apparatus, matches and careless heating of man and nature, a task that facts and hot ashes.

Householders might keep the list in mind and by taking care in regard to these dangers avoid a fire which might cause death. They should remember that individual carelessness is the worst menace to safety, whether from fire or other hazards and should not ignore safeguards to prevent fatal mistakes.

Let's Start Them Right

There was a day when every young American was assured that he had a chance to become President of the United States and if he failed, that, at the worst, he would probably make a million dollars.

The result of this teaching has, probably been evil. The generations that have grown up on such notions have been inclined to grab for themselves and get all that the law allows and some of the fruit that the law prohibits.

It is about time that education include the idea that an individual attains satisfaction not by getting everything or the highest honors, but by serving society in his or her place with distinction. The development of men and women into intelligent creatures, with an understanding of man and nature, is a task that almost of us complete late in life. If at all, maybe by starting early with the young, we could help them attain a greater goal earlier in life, and that we admit is what life is intended to accomplish.

THE TELEPHONE RATE REDUCTION

A comparison of the fundamental features of the Company's rate proposal which has been approved by the Kentucky Public Service Commission

LOCAL RATE REDUCTION

From 80% to 90% of the Company's customers in Kentucky will find substantial decrease in their rates for local telephone service, beginning with November 1st. The annual amount of the subscribers' local rate reduction is $116,000 annually. Telephone service will be made available to many families who are not now telephone subscribers. As a result of the reduction approved by the Kentucky Public Service Commission on October 1st, the general level of exchange rates will be lower than at any time during the past ten years and, in most exchanges, the level will be lower than at any time since 1919. The number of new telephone subscribers is increasing rapidly due to improved purchasing power, and this, together with reduced monthly rates and lower connection charges, should result in greater telephone value than ever before. Existing subscribers will find many opportunities for increasing their facilities through the lower hand set charges and the elimination of monthly charges on jacks or wall outlets. This reduction which the Company has proposed, and which the Commission has approved, reduces the Company's earnings on its investment in the State to an amount far below that which is necessary to produce a fair rate of return. Only the strictest economies in investment and maintenance, made possible by the elimination of free service, together with the small amount of additional toll revenue which is expected, will enable the Company to build its rate of return nearer to the amount allowed by law.

ELIMINATION OF "FREE SERVICE"

The Company's toll rates, in effect since the establishment of the telephone business in most of the Company's exchanges in Kentucky, will be uniformly applied between all exchanges more than five miles apart, beginning November 1st. The expense of furnishing long distance service, and the fact that its predominant use comes from a small proportion of telephone users, have required that a specific charge be made for each message. To impose the cost upon all users for the benefit of the few has been universally recognized as an inequitable practice. The Wisconsin Commission held, in 1926 that the company giving that rates has a right, as a matter of law, to establish a toll rate in lieu of free service between its exchanges in two cities a considerable distance apart. The Kansas Commission held, in 1923 that the collection of a toll charge for calls from a suburban exchange to a neighboring city is the most satisfactory, as well as the cheapest for the subscriber and is fair to all. Free service, in line with the foregoing, has been uniformly held to constitute unfair discrimination. The Kentucky Public Service Commission Act, creating the Commission, requires the elimination of such discrimination. This Commission accordingly has held that free service in Kentucky is a discrimination against many cities and cities in the State and against a majority of the subscribers; that it is illegal, in violation of §3912-32 of the Kentucky statutes, and that it should be abolished.

A clear understanding of the facts set forth in this comparison is, in the Company's opinion, essential to a proper recognition of the benefits resulting from the telephone using public under the order of the Kentucky Public Service Commission.

The Company is gratified that the way is now open for a more widespread enjoyment of telephone service and that this has been accomplished without litigation and the delay and great expense which would have been incurred.

STEPHENS OWERS LEADER AT UNIVERSITY OF KY.

By James Goble

Leading cheer and 15,000 student and spectators, posing for a picture with a young Willard, or leading students in a victory march at the University of Kentucky to greet graduation at Lexington, see only the address activities of 22-year-old James Stephens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stephens, Jr., of Frankfort.

As clear leader for the second straight year at the University, Mr. Stephens, flanked by three assistants, carried on the gridiron of Stoll field on Friday, Sept. 28, leading, cheering and yelling to inspire the University of Kentucky Wildcat football team.

At other times the versatile Mr. Stephens is highly engaged in being one of the prominent men, graduates of the University can put ranking near the top among an enrollment of more than 3,000, as far as social activities are concerned, he fills many offices other than that of cheer leader.

In the field of drama, Stephens is a member of the Student Society dramatic society, and is associated with the Galsworthy club. He is secretary of Sigma Chi fraternity, a member of Lambda Chi Alpha, and is associated with Delta Kappa Alpha. He is listed in the college's select list of fraternities, and is a member of the Student Government, as an active member.

In the military department he is manager of the R. O. T. C. and was elected "captain" and a second lieutenant in the Infantry Reserve, U. S. A. As a newspaper writer, he is associated with the staff of the Kentucky Herald, campus weekly publication.

Before entering the University of Kentucky in 1934, Mr. Stephens graduated from the Kentucky Military Institute at Lebanon, Ky., after winning among 1,700 the distinction of being the best drilled cadet. Prior to his admission at the Institute, he was graduated from the Danville boarding school in 1929. He will be graduated from the University with an A.B. degree in Journalism in 1935.

It's the Talk of the Quilting Bee

Pattern 5501

It's most certainly the talk of the quilting bee—this quaint Apple pattern! And why wouldn't it be? With nearly all the patch pieces the same width, you can cut your fabric into strips and snip off pieces as needed. Easily made, you start from the center and sew round and round till the block is done.

In pattern 5501 you will find the Block Star, an illustration for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

To obtain this pattern, send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle, Household Arts Dept., 239 W. Fourteenth St., New York, N. Y. Write plainly, pattern number, your name and address.

Sawdy pulled a moustache from his mustache. "No hurry," he said reflectively. "It's early yet for him. If he's a man, he's got a pocket full of money to blow." He thought a minute farther. "Look here, Scotch! Tell our boys over there at the bar to string out and meet back the barn. Watch your chance. Speak around to the hitch rack and get the sorrel down to the barn on an old feed-bill claim. I'll tackle Barney in the saloon and see what chance there is gettin' him down there. Got a rope ready?"

"Yess." McAlpin joined the men at the bar. Sawdy slipped out the back door and, half a mile down the alley, walked out into River street and down to the Red Ford saloon.

But from the moment the big adventurer stepped out of the back door of one saloon and in at the front door of the other, a curious change took place. Sawdy was in a rather place of moderate man. He strode into the Red Ford feeling.

"Red bar was well filled," Sawdy said at a glance that among the men lined up there were a number of town loafers who never drank except at someone's expense. When Sawdy caught sight of Redstock with the leathers around him, interference was swift and correct.

The saloonkeeper, Harry Boland, fox-eyed and alert at the head of the bar, saw Sawdy stagger in through the door. He looked at the big fellow slowly. Sawdy slung back to the leathers around him, whom Barney was holding forth.

"What's the size expected," he inquired, since Henry Sawdy was no drinker. Boland had never before seen a man so drunk. But Sawdy was an artist and did not make the mistake of the actor who plays the sobriety man trying to appear drunk. Sawdy was the drunken man trying to appear sober.

He greeted Barney gruffly, then offered drinks for everybody in Barney Redstock's honor. Having lingered over the round, Sawdy cast his eye approvingly upon the thirty crowd, passed the forefinger of his right hand thoughtfully under each wing of his moustache in turn, drew from a vest pocket a gold double eagle, and made a general proposal.

"I'll match any man here for twenty-dollar gold pieces. It was a fair bet to offer because he well knew all the leathers put together could not raise twenty dollars. But he had an object in view."

Barney, after some shilly-shallying, accepted the challenge. He asked Boland to lend him a gold piece. When Boland produced a twenty-dollar coin and tossed it out to Barney, it did not take Sawdy long to figure out that Barney had produced a twenty-dollar coin in the keeping of the saloonkeeper. Sawdy, notoriously lucky at matching, tossed out after several trials; he quit for five dollars at the end. But he had Barney greatly inflated by his triumph, with the whole room crowding eagerly around the contest.

After a round of drinks at Barney's charge, Sawdy brought the talk around to a feed-hock sorrel outside at the hitch rack. Barney claimed it. Sawdy wanted to buy it. Barney demurred—it wasn't for sale.

Boland heard the talk. He drew Barney to the rear and the bar. "Sell it to him, you fool," whispered Boland. "Don't you see he's drunk as a fiddler? You can get twice what the horse is worth."

This encouraged, Barney stepped out of doors with Sawdy, followed by a little crowd of curious on-lookers. The horse was gone. This fact caused no great excitement. Sawdy suggested he had got loose and strayed up or down the street and that they take a look around to find him. The curiosity of the crowd waned, and they returned the saloon, hoping for another chance to get a drink. Sawdy and Barney walked down the street together, wrangling as they went over the saloon and the merits of the missing horse. "As the pair passed McAlpin's barn it occurred to Sawdy they had better look-in and ask for information."

CHAPTER X

A hanging lantern lighted the barn gangway dimly. Sawdy's horse for a hoover was answered by McAlpin blurted out a word and the horse, published in his peculiar gallop, bristled forward.

"Hello, Mac," exclaimed Sawdy, waving like a tall tree in a number four breeze. "We're looking for Barney's horse," he continued gruffly—"got loose up the street just now—seen anything of it?"

McAlpin, raising his lantern looked at Redstock. "Why, yes, I seen a stray," he admitted sulkily. "Was it a sorrel?" asked Sawdy with some hope.

"It was a sorrel, Sawdy; saddled and bridled. He jumped the hitch rack by the arm, and slammed him halfway across the stall. Barney landed on his hands and knees, sprang to his feet, and faced his old-time remembrance with wicked eyes. In the dim light of the lantern, high in the gangway, Sawdy caught the flash of a knife in Barney's right hand.

"Barney, I want to be friends with you. What's the facts about that first?" With a volley of on-Redstock took from Sawdy's grasp, became hurriedly away, and tried to spring over the side wall. Sawdy was too quick. He jumped to the ground, caught him by the arm, and slammed him halfway across the stall. Barney landed on his hands and knees, sprang to his feet, and faced his old-time remembrance with wicked eyes. gangway, Redstock and Sawdy after he stood at the stall door, lunging his fingers on a high gangway hook, unatched the stall door, and pointed within. "These four horses, Barney. Maybe I better give him a bit of oats before you go. . . . Not Water then?"

Redstock and Sawdy had stepped into the stall with McAlpin. The saloonkeeper led the horse out. Redstock started to follow; Sawdy laid a hand on his shoulder. "Just a minute. want to talk to you, Barney. We'll join you in a minute. Mac. Get out the black bottle. But leave the lantern."

"What's up?" asked Redstock, eying Sawdy closely, and always suspicious. Sawdy was standing backed against one side of the box stall. "Barney," he said in confidential fashion, "I'd like to have just a little horse-to-horse talk with you."

"What if you mean horse-to-horse talk?" snapped Barney. "Just this: Do you feel just exactly right, leaving your money with Harry Boland?"

"Do you feel safe? I ask you, as a man to man, Barney, and an old friend, do you feel safe, leaving a roll with Boland?"

Barney fumbled mentally. "Why shouldn't I?" he countered bluntly. "I'd hate to see you, after all the trouble you've had, lose your money with Harry Boland," persisted the cowman. "I'll tell you honest—and you can tell the critter himself if you like—I wouldn't never leave five hundred of my money with Harry Boland."

"How much money are you leaving with him?"

"None of your damned business, chaps how much, I'm headin' up the street. Get out of the way. I mean the best for you. Just wait a minute. I'll walk up the street with you—gettin' kiped of thimself myself. Did you hear, Barney, about Bill Denison's place gettin' burned down?"

He Could See Redstock's Eyes Flashing Green

"What about it?" demanded Redstock. "Why, nothing—nothing at all. But, Barney, this is why I wanted to talk to you: There's folks here in town that don't know you as well as I do, are mean enough to say you know a lot more about that fire than you want to tell. I claim they're wrong—what'll I tell 'em?"

"Tell 'em to go to hell."

"Suppose they won't do it, Barney?" asked Sawdy calmly. Redstock shrugged angrily. "Look here, Sawdy. You can't bunk me any more. If they don't want to go to hell, you go for 'em."

With this suggestion, Redstock started again for the stall door. Sawdy's hand came down a bit heavier on Barney's shoulder. The slippery fellow tried to jerk away when Sawdy's fingers sank deep into the coat and shirt of his victim. Barney, he protested solemnly, "I don't like to see an old friend break up by thoughtless words."

"A hell of a friendship," snorted Redstock. "Barney, I want to be friends with you. What's the facts about that first?" With a volley of on-Redstock took from Sawdy's grasp, became hurriedly away, and tried to spring over the side wall. Sawdy was too quick. In the dim light of the lantern, high in the gangway, Sawdy caught the flash of a knife in Barney's right hand.

Both were quick. Redstock, smaller and lighter, could strike and spring. He was a fighter, but his tactics were wrong. Though larger and heavier, was estimated among his fellows as one hard to corner. Sawdy held the door side of the stall with his back to the light. He could see Redstock's eyes flashing green. Redstock wanted to get close enough to Sawdy to cut him and jump through the door; but he feared the terrific grip of the cowman's fingers on his wrists before he should get the knife into play.

Sawdy carried his gun—Redstock had left his own with Boland—and he was disinclined to use it on a party injured man. It was no part of his program to get himself embroiled with the law by shooting the criminal; what he did not crave was wanted from Redstock was information.

It took only an instant for Sawdy to perceive that he could not safely hold his stand in front of the stall door. The lantern light was too uncertain—he could not follow Redstock's eyes—part of the time he could hardly follow his body.

"In a moment," he said, one big, the other small, were jumping about the stall like boxing strippers for the ring. Redstock, who was wearing a moustache on his feet among the corners that rode the Gunlock ranges. He had little alcohol aboard, was naturally as quick as a flash, and knew he was facing the most dangerous man with a knife along the Spanish Siesta. Ten years ago, he had spent among Mexican bandits, together with a lean and jumpy physical make-up, had given Barney Redstock the name of a man who with a knife, and Sawdy had no intention of adding to the outlaw's reputation as a killer, if he could help it.

The fight was in the lap of the gods, and Sawdy was not to be disappointed. He was just as quick as a flash, and knew he was facing the most dangerous man with a knife along the Spanish Siesta. Ten years ago, he had spent among Mexican bandits, together with a lean and jumpy physical make-up, had given Barney Redstock the name of a man who with a knife, and Sawdy had no intention of adding to the outlaw's reputation as a killer, if he could help it.

Barney, enraged at his plight, was breathing hard, and wind was coming through his nostrils. The silent struggle for the one slight advantage that would end the fight went on to the very end. Teachers in the grades found themselves in the midst of a contest in the beautification of the school rooms being conducted by the advanced and primary grades recently. The idea seemed to have developed after the purchasing of Eisenhower decorations. Enquiries/inspections were made by the public at noon and recess to determine the progress of each room. New curtains, bulletin boards, etc. were added to the rooms. Teachers are wondering which will last longer—new shades or originality.

MRS. CLIFTON DIES OCT. 19

Mrs. Emma Sturgen Clifton, 37, died at her home here Monday, October 19, a victim of pneumonia. She had been ill only a few days and her death came as a shock to her family. She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Paulette Ramsey, Annabelle, Willie Lee, and one in the city of Prestonsburg.

Funeral services were in charge of Rev. James Bork, and burial was made in the Westminster cemetery under the direction of E. P. Arnold.

Red Cross Potential Life Savers Number Nearly 2,000,000

First aid and life saving certificates issued by the American Red Cross since the start of the service 26 years ago now number 1,888,702. During the past year the Red Cross qualified 122,892 persons in first aid and taught water safety and rescue methods to 40,000.

This array of first aid and life saving is one of the great safety factors in the nation. They are trained to give immediate first aid at the scene of accident, thus saving many lives and preventing permanent injury. Red Cross training includes skill in treating for shock, splinting fractures, checking arterial bleeding, applying artificial respiration, lowering drowning persons to safety, and in the safe handling of boat and canoe.

The condition of Mrs. Cynthia Holbrook, of Middle Creek, who has been ill for some time, remains the same. Mrs. Holbrook is the mother of Mrs. Greenville Spradlin.

Worth a trifle—and worth millions

Marble is just plain marble... but skillful hands can give it value that is hard to measure in terms of money. In The Discus Thrower there is such a wealth of art, skill and character that for 24 centuries art students have studied this simple marble statue and tried to copy it.

Barley is barley and hops are hops. With yeast and water they can be made into beer—all kinds of beer. But, when brewing skill at its finest takes these ingredients in hand, the finished product can be counted upon to win the acclaim of all students of the art of good living.
