THE BROTHERLY LOVE JUDAH

International Sunday School Lesson for June 20, 1937.

Golden Text: "Let love of the brethren continue."—Hebrews 13:1.

It seems that the severe drought predicted by Joseph which was being felt in Egypt was also being suffered by the inhabitants of Canaan. Jacob, hearing that there was food to be had in Egypt, dispatched his 10 sons to that country to buy grain for food and for their cattle.

When they appeared in the court of Pharaoh, Joseph immediately recognized them, but probably because of the fact that he was 20 years older and that he was wearing the dress of an Egyptian officer, his brothers did not recognize him as the boy they had hated and sold into slavery many years before.

In order to test their characters and to learn in a round about way of the affairs at home, Joseph accuses them of being spies. In their denial of the charge, they admit that they are all brothers and make the point that their father would have hardly allowed any 10 of them to risk their lives as spies. They go into other intimate details about their home with their aged father. Joseph required one of them, Simeon, to remain as a hostage in Egypt to guarantee the return of the brothers to Egypt with Benjamin and his nine brothers.

Joseph shows his bigness of heart when he bids his brothers not to grieve nor be angry with him because of their crime, as they had paid for the grain in which they know it to be the will of God for him and the means of saving the lives of many Egyptians and of many others. As he knew there were yet five years of famine, he sent his brothers to make haste and go down into the land of Canaan and bring his father and all their household and possessions down into the land of Egypt, to dwell in the land of Goshen where they will be taken care of.

The message to Jacob was sent by "thy son Joseph," revealing the fact that Joseph, in spite of his power and place of authority in Egypt still loved his father and was still proud of him. This show of filial affection is pleasing now because all of his brethren how humbly at his entrance into their presence. Greatly amazed were the brothers when they were invited into Joseph's home where a feast was prepared for them.

After a few days' sojourn, the brothers received their grain and departed joyfully for home. They had not gone far, however, when the steward of Joseph overtook them and accused them of stealing his steward's silver cup. The steward informed them that he in whose sack the cup was found, would be held as Joseph's slave. The brothers were astounded and grieved when the cup was found in the sack belonging to Benjamin. Instead of condemning the lad, they all immediately returned to the city. Admitting Benjamin's appointment, Judah makes an impassioned plea to Joseph for the boy, pleading to be allowed to be made a slave in the place of Benjamin.

So overcome was Joseph at the depth of Judah's plea, that he wept and, after ordering all others to leave the room, he revealed himself to his brothers as Joseph, the boy whom they had sold into slavery. His love of and concern for his father was revealed in his next question: "Doth my father yet live?" It seems that this was a question less a question because from what his brothers had already told him he knew that Jacob was alive, but he was so fearful for news of his father that this question was only natural.

Joseph shows his bigness of heart when he bids his brothers not to grieve nor be angry with him because of their crime, as they had paid for the grain in which they know it to be the will of God for him and the means of saving the lives of many Egyptians and of many others. As he knew there were yet five years of famine, he sent his brothers to make haste and go down into the land of Canaan and bring his father and all their household and possessions down into the land of Egypt, to dwell in the land of Goshen where they will be taken care of.

The message to Jacob was sent by "thy son Joseph," revealing the fact that Joseph, in spite of his power and place of authority in Egypt still loved his father and was still proud of him. This show of filial affection is pleasing now because all of his brethren

Sarah Ann's Cooking Class

Surely there never was a meat with such a universal appeal as chicken. In most American families it is the most popular of all meats. When having a chicken dinner don't forget the accompaniments that turn the meal into a feast. This is a collection of recipes that will prove very satisfactory.

Brown Fricassee (Chicken)
Clean, singe and disjoint a 3-4 lb. chicken. Sprinkle the pieces with salt and pepper. Dredge in flour and fry in a small amount of fat until a delicate brown on both sides. Place chicken in a deep pan, pour enough boiling water to cover it completely. Cover and cook slowly about 2 hours, or until done.

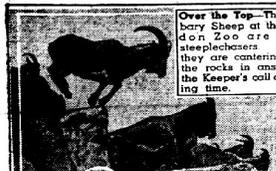

Chicken Dumplings
2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1-2 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons shortening
Milk (about 3/4 cup)
Mix the flour, baking powder and salt together. Rub in the shortening. Add enough milk to hold the ingredients together. Drop by tablespoons on top of chicken, cover tightly and steam 12 minutes. Thicken the gravy with some flour mixed to a smooth paste with a little cold water. Season with salt and pepper.

Scalloped Chicken and Rice
1 quart of diced cooked chicken
1 quart cooked Rice
1 teaspoon minced onion
1-2 cup diced green pepper
3 cups of milk and chicken stock
6 tablespoons of butter or chicken fat
6 tablespoons flour
mix chicken and rice, add the onion and green pepper. Then a cream sauce made of the chicken, milk, chicken fat and flour. Season with salt and pepper. Mix thoroughly. Sprinkle with grated cheese, if desired. Pour into a shallow buttered baking pan. Bake in a moderate oven for 45 minutes.

Chicken Hash
2 tablespoons of fat
2 tablespoons flour
2/3 cup cream
2-3 cup chicken stock
2 cups stewed chicken cut very fine
1-2 teaspoon salt-pepper

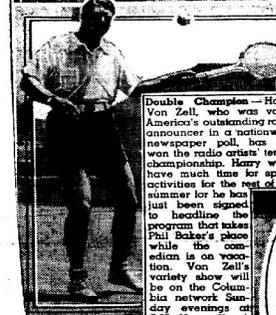

THE TIMES SNAPSHOTS

Over the Top—The Barbary Sheep at the London Zoo are born steeppleasers. Here they are contending over the rocks in answer to the Keeper's call at feeding time.

On the Beach—Two bathing beauties display the latest in swim attire.

Double Champion—Harry Von Zell, who was voted America's outstanding radio announcer in a nationwide newspaper poll, has just won the radio artists' tennis championship. Harry won't have much time for sports activities for the rest of the summer for he has just been signed to headline the program that takes Paul Baker's place while the condition is on vacation for the summer. Zell's variety show will be on the Columbia network Sunday evenings at 10:30 New York time.

An International Sportsman—Count Theo Rossi, leading Italian racer of high power motor boats and the world's vermouth king, who is bringing two new 30-mile-an-hour boats to America to participate in the Cold Cup race at Detroit on Labor Day, Sept. 6, now thrown open to foreign competition for the first time.

Another Di Maggio Promises Baseball Stardom—Dominic, bespectacled nineteen year old brother of the famed Joe of the New York Yankees and Vince of the Boston Sox, has the experts agree because of the sensational manner he's sporting in his first professional season as a member of the San Francisco Seals.

Although blind, Cretia Gellis of El Dorado, Kansas, cooks complete meals on her Hotpoint Electric Range.

2 eggs
2 teaspoons cooking sherry
1/2 cup fat, add flour and mix well. Add cream and chicken stock, and bring slowly to boiling point. Stirring constantly, add chicken and cook until tender. Add the beaten eggs and the sherry flavoring. Mix well and pour into a shallow baking dish and pipe hot mashed potatoes through a pastry bag around the edge of the dish. Put under a broiler to brown. Serve at once.

Chicken Soup
Put in a large saucpan all the bones, scraps of meat and pieces of skin of the chicken and cover with cold water. Add 1-2 cup of chopped celery and an onion cut in fine pieces. Let it simmer from 2 to 3 hours. Strain off the fat. Add 1 tablespoon of flour as a thickening for each quart of soup. Add to the flour and butter a cup of hot soup and when well blended and smooth, add to the rest of the soup and cook until slightly thickened. Then add a blade of mace. Let simmer a few minutes, remove mace, season the soup with salt and pepper to taste, add 1 cup of scalded cream and serve soup in the crisp, brown crunchy croustif. To make these cut stale bread into small cubes, toss in butter in a slow oven. Be sure they are dry, and not too heavily browned.

Chicken and Succotash
1 can succotash
2 egg yolks
2 tablespoons chicken fat or melted butter
Salt and pepper
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
2-1-2 cups stewed chicken cut in large pieces
1 cup buttered crumbs
Beat egg yolks and add the succotash, fat, salt, pepper and pars'ey. Put 1-2 this mixture in bottom of casserole and the chicken and cover with remaining succotash. Sprinkle top with remaining bread crumbs and bake in an oven 350 degrees for about 1-2 hour. Serve with hot butter.

Coffee Souffle
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1-4 cup evaporated milk
2-1 cup clear coffee
4 eggs
1-2 cup of sugar
1-2 teaspoon vanilla
1-4 teaspoon salt
Melt fat, add flour and mix until smooth. Add milk and coffee gradually and bring to boiling point. Beat egg yolks and add sugar under supervision of the National Park Service. An effort will be made to reforest areas where fire, disease or other stiffly beaten egg whites causes have left scars.

turn into a greased baking dish and bake in an oven 350 degrees for 60 minutes. Serve at once.

SILO SERVES AS JAIL
A Knox, Indiana, news story says: Albert Mroszak, farmer, was behind bars here today, charged by his wife with forcing her to remain four days in a silo without food and water. Mrs. Mroszak said her four children would appear in court against their father. Maybe the story meant to say, "against their father."

TREES
Twenty million trees will be planted this year in national and state parks by the CCC and add several under supervision of the National Park Service. An effort will be made to reforest areas where fire, disease or other stiffly beaten egg whites causes have left scars.

CALEB JOHNSON, 42, KILLED AS WAS HIS SON FIVE YEARS AGO

Traffic Accident Claims Another Floyd County Citizen

Fading beneath a moving truck, Caleb Johnson, 42, of Melvin met death Wednesday, en route to Melvin from Prestonsburg, in the same manner as did his son, who was killed in a traffic accident about five years ago.

In company with approximately 25 other men who had hired a truck to come to Prestonsburg, Johnson was returning to his home at Melvin. Reports state that the man driving the truck was drinking and shooting a pistol.

When crossing a steep mountain on the Virginia section of the highway, the passengers got off the truck and began walking. A change of drivers was made and the passengers climbed back on the truck. It is said it was then that the accident occurred.

Funeral services for Johnson were held June 11, at 2 p. m. at Melvin by the Reverend Dewey Hill of Ligon. The Rev. Billy Moore of McDowell and the Rev. Harmon Hall of Melvin, The Weeksbury local union of the United Mine Workers, assisted by the Ryan Funeral Home of Martin were in charge of the burial rites. Johnson is survived by his widow, Mrs. Josephine Johnson, by two daughters, Alma and Ida, by two brothers, Marion and Willie, and by one sister, Mrs. M. L. Johnson, of Weeksbury.

MISSIONARY TO SPEAK AT BOTH SERVICES AT BAPTIST CHURCH HERE

The Rev. V. B. Castleberry, of Ashland, will speak at both services of the Baptist Church here June 20. Reverend Castleberry is a former missionary to South America and is now connected with the Kentucky Baptist Board of Missions. He will fill the pulpit in the absence of the pastor, G. W. Redding, who is leaving daily devotional exercises at the state Baptist Boys' campment, June 18 to 25, at Clear Creek, near Pineville, Ky. Reverend Castleberry's message should be of interest to all. The public is cordially invited to both of the Sunday services.

in Louisville. Mr. and Mrs. Stephen W. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Zininger, of Wheelwright, will leave Saturday for Lewisville where they will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Clark. While there they will attend the wedding of I. S. Clark, Jr., and Mary Margaret Kruse, which will be held at the Church of Christ the King, 44th street and Broadway. Stephen W. Clark will act as best man at his brother's wedding.

PASTOR SAYS PLANS FOR ANNIVERSARY ARE NEARING COMPLETION

Plans for the anniversary and home-coming at the Methodist Church on June 27 are nearing completion, according to information given out by the pastor, Rev. H. F. King. Definite program for the morning service will be released for publication next week. This program, it is understood, will be made up of local people telling what they remember about the history of the local Methodist church.

DINGUS, GREEN, STALLARD KIN TO ASSEMBLE

Continued from page one chased thousands of acres of land throughout Floyd county. According to Mrs. Ford Mr. Dingus made a return trip from Virginia to Floyd county with a gusny sack full of money in payment for the lands.

Relationship with the Green and Stallard families was established through marriage of the father of this same William Dingus to a sister of the famous Revolutionary hero General Green. About four or five generations ago a Dingus married into the Stallard family to establish kinship with them.

The oldest living descendant of this ancient Dingus is his namesake, Senator William Dingus, of Prestonsburg. Although 79 years old, Senator Dingus is still active in the practice of law. Formerly he was senator in the Kentucky Legislature, and county attorney and clerk of Floyd county.

SUPERSTITIONS ABOUT MODERN INVENTIONS

It is erroneous to suppose that superstitions adhere only to things that used to be some of the most primitive. I have known have grown up around "our" modern things or were transcribed from previous articles.

Screens came slowly into use in rural Kentucky some 35 years ago. I have heard much of screens, such as their keeping out the air from a man's face. A farmer once said that if the Lord had wanted screens, he would have made them. For a long time many houses had screens only around the kitchen and dining room, leaving the bedrooms free from the air and mosquitoes. The telephone also went into every community not long after 1900. A friend and neighbor of mine would not allow the telephone line to cross his farm because he felt the electricity would injure his crops. Another one told me that the corn under a telephone line was very poor.

For the telephone line, he said, he had to put a fence around the house. The telephone wires were over the wire and he regretted that she did not have her telephone box so she could hear what was being said.

The automobile has brought along plenty of superstitions, probably the most used of which is the idea that it is good luck to touch one while it is in motion. When anti-freeze preparations were first introduced, dozens of people refused to buy them, fearing they would ruin their cars.

Others have known many people to put their cars up for the winter or else drain the radiator after each necessary use of the car in bad weather. The radio, the last great invention to attain a universal use, is already attracting to itself numerous superstitions. When there was a severe drought in 1930, a farmer who owns some 300 acres of good land asked me seriously whether I supposed that radio had anything to do with the drought. When I should I have told him? The very mystery of the radio accounts for some of these superstitions. But apparently that alone did not breed the superstitions held everywhere about the invention.

A negro woman whom we once employed, not many years ago, was afraid of the "electronic" iron. She would use it, but her eyes would bug out when it popped on or off. She much preferred one that had no machinery inside it. One old lady I have heard of swore she could smell the electricity and was afraid to touch the iron of the cord.

Checks are dangerous things to many ignorant people. It is nearly impossible to pay some kind of help in anything but coin of the realm. But I have noticed that when a person has accepted a check and has successfully cashed it, he rather likes the idea of having another one. A check gives one an importance, it conveys the name written on the back. The man who merely makes his mark is seldom honored by having such attention paid him. Hence the importance of having your name written in such a prominent place as on a check.

LETCHER CO. JUDGE LIVED IN 4 COUNTIES MOVED FROM NONE

Nathaniel Collins, first county judge of Letcher county, long ago established a record. He lived in four different counties without ever moving out of a single county. He moved once, but his new location was in the same county where he moved.

It happened thus: Judge Collins lived in Floyd near the mouth of Camp Branch. In later years this section of Floyd was cut off into the new county of Perry. Then his part of Perry county it was changed to a portion of Letcher county.

From there Judge Collins moved over onto Carr Creek, a portion of Letcher county. When Knott was created however, Carr Creek became a part of Knott, where it still is.

U. of K. Picture Booklet Is Ready for Release To High School Graduates

A 32-page picture book of the University of Kentucky depicting students at work in the classrooms and laboratories, at recreation in the various activities on the state University campus and halls has just been issued by the University, and is available to those interested in attending either of the two summer terms of five weeks each, the first of which opened Monday, June 14, or to those high school graduates wishing to attend the regular winter sessions.

The booklet is a pictorial presentation of a student's life at the University of Kentucky, with an introductory letter from Dr. Frank L. McVey, president of the University.

what Irvin Cobb thinks about:

The Good Old Days.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.— Take a pen in hand to write Uncle Sam's check for that next installment, I look longingly backward to what I'm sure was the golden age of our generation.

It was the decade that began soon after the turn of the century and ended with 1914.

Kings lolled securely on comfy thrones and dictators thrived in strong nations were undreamed of.

Without shaking the foundations of the financial empire, Teddy Roosevelt was fling the allegorical teeth of predatory wealth.

People laughed at the mad suggestion that there could ever be another great war—let alone a world war.

With suffrage in prospect, women were going to the polls.

Taxes were a means unto an end and not the end of our means.

Standards of living climbed faster than did the costs of living.

Automobiles were things to ride in at moderate speed, not engines to destroy human life with.

Millions actually believed that, if prohibition by law ever became effective, drunkenness would end and crime decrease.

Yes, I'm sure those were indeed the happy days—the era when the Twentieth Century lit itself into running and W. J. Bryan stopped.

Synthetic Imitations.

WE STOPPED at a wayside station advertising pure orange juice; there's one every few rods. Next to autograph hunters, oranges are the commonest product of California.

The drink was the right color. But there didn't seem to be any orange in it. The best you could say for it was that probably its mother had been badly frightened by an orange.

I made inquiry, and an expert told me some roadside vendors—not many, but some—were peddling an essence compounded of chemical flavoring and artificial extracts because it kept better than the genuine article.

Thought America had reached tops in the gentle art of substitution and adulteration when we began making pumpkin pies out of squash and maple syrup of corn stalks and buckwheat flour out of a low grade of sawdust—anyhow, it tastes like that imported English sole out of the fishy boulder and scallops out of skate fins. But when, in a land where a strong man couldn't tote a dollar's worth of oranges on his back, there are parties selling synthetic imitations—well, just let the East coasters and gosh, how he does dread it!

For every yachtsman who really gets joy out of being afloat, there usually is another to whom the great heart of the nation should go out in sympathy. You almost expect to find him putting ads in the paper for guests who can stand the white duck pants.

Problems on Wheels.

AMERICA'S newest problem goes on wheels. One prophet says by 1920 there'll be million trailers and three million people about them. Roger Babson raises the ante when twenty years, half the population living in trailers and all the roads clogged.

So soon the trailer-face is recognizable. It is most noticeable riding along behind, while Popper smiles pleasantly as he drives the car in solitary peace—getting away from it all. Have you noticed how many trailer widows there are already?

But as yet nobody reckons with the chief issue: think of the incalculable mortalities when the incalculable speed bug discovers that not only may he continue to mow down victims with head-on assaults, but will garner in many who escaped his frontal attack by side-swipes of the hitched-on monster that is swinging and lunging at his rear like a drunken elephant on a rampage!

To catch 'em going and coming—that should be the motor maniac's dream of earthly joy.

Hugh, on his way out, planned that he would have his mother invite Ellen for dinner very soon. Or he would issue the invitation, call up and coax her a bit if she seemed unwilling. Not tonight—he had to work late tonight. And tomorrow Mother had invited the John Renshaws for dinner, and the next night he had to go to the Welles—well, some time soon! Perhaps next week.

But the Renshaws could not come the next night and Fluvanna went to a concert with Margeery and Will. Hugh rested the paper, looked at a trade journal, and at nine o'clock, feeling restless, decided on a long ramble. He took Rowdy, Kezia's dog, with him, a wire-haired terrier, which she could not keep in the apartment.

Hugh circled the boulevard and the park twice, a walk of two or three miles, drawing in deep breaths of the early March air, which was keen and cold, yet with a difference.

He walked with a swinging step, submerged in his own reflections. Rowdy investigated lawns where lighted windows drained away into the shrubbery, then returned to him. Hugh did not know when he became conscious that a woman was walking half a block ahead of him. She must have turned out unnoticed from a side street. She walked rapidly, for it was a lonely place for a woman to be, the dark woods on her right, and on her left the houses set far back from the street. Young, slight, and faintly familiar.

Suddenly she turned abruptly to the right and plunged into the wood. She walked swiftly and without uncertainty until she disappeared. Hugh stood still. He had recognized her by a forward movement of her shoulders—or thought he had. Why was she going into the park at this time of night?—familiar, perhaps, the parker's recognition broke out on his forehead as he remembered the small artificial lake.

She was up to her knees in the water and wading out when he reached her.

She looked in his face dazedly. "It's Hugh? . . . Hugh?" Then in a low murmur: "Why did you come?"

"Fate sent me, Ellen," he answered simply. He drew her head to his shoulder. "Because you were never meant to do that thing."

She gave a long sighing breath that was more poignant than any shed, of misery. "Hugh," she whispered, "I aches so high." She laid her hand on her heart.

"I know," then her voice again on that throat, respiratory note: "Yes, you know." She drooped against him shivering.

Suddenly she sat up. The water dripped from her sodden clothes. She faced him, her wistful blue eyes started and examining. She shook her head. "You are braver than I—stronger. I can't go on."

She began to cry, shuddering dry sobs, that leaked his heart like flaming faggots. He drew her to his feet. "Let us walk. No good sitting in wet clothes after that ducking. We'll walk very fast—see, like this."

box—get us a lunch! We'll have a nice clubby evening—come!"

She put her hand on her eyes. "Whatever you say—I'm so bewildered."

His mother was not home when they arrived. He took her directly upstairs, turned on the hot water in the bath. "Get in there, young lady, and be quick about it. I'll have changed and be pounding at your door in five minutes."

He changed his clothes quickly, then ran down to the telephone and called the Pendletons. Gavin's nervous, irritated voice answered. "Ellen is here with us."

"Yes, yes," Gavin stammered. "She's all right. We'll keep her until tomorrow if you don't mind."

Gavin had a colloquy with Lizzie, then muttered: "Mother wants you to bring her home."

"If I do I won't answer for the consequences!" replied Hugh. There was a pause while Hugh heard Lizzie's strident voice in opposition. She evidently wanted to talk to him, said Gavin, in suddenly. "See you tomorrow."

He foraged for everything he could find in the way of food, cheese and ham, olives, white and rye bread, fruit and cake. When Ellen appeared she shook her head. "All this to eat?"

She nibbled, then began eating. Presently at something he said the dimples came out and she laughed in a soft, contented increment.

Her own laughter startled her, and a puzzled look came over her face. "It's beginning to seem ridiculous—like a joke . . . how could I?"

"Some people think life is a joke." "Playing tricks—yes?" "It looks like that sometimes when you have set your hearts on something you don't get. But I think that there is a malicious Being who enjoys our scrapes, a leering, cruel, practical joker."

"It must be true." Her head drooped, her tone was muffled. He blocks each exit as you hurry from one to another. He says, laughing horribly: 'Stay in your prison' . . . it seems that way to me."

"And there's another way to look at it. He may be a great wise force that foresees more than we can—has a plan for us. He lets us on each one the burden of destiny and says: 'Take this, carry it on your own back; grow under it; and I shall lead you out and be your deliverer.'"

"The burden of destiny," Ellen repeated in a dazed tone, "or a practical joker? . . . Which is right?"

"The one which gives us courage," said Hugh with sudden conviction. "I believe that," he answered in a low voice. In his effort to help Ellen, he had suddenly clarified his own vague gropings—was conscious of the uplift of spirit which accompanies an illumination of thought.

Charming Panel to Crochet

Pattern 5790.

There's the charm of Grandmother's time in this lacy panel-set, a luxurious bit of dress-up for your "best" bedspread! In string it measures 24 by 35 inches, but goes quickly, for the background is in lace stitch. It would also be effective as a door panel. The stunning panel running lengthwise of the bolster may also serve as a scarf. Crochet this beautiful design of humble, durable string or in finer cotton for smaller panels. In pattern 5790 you will find detailed instructions and charts for making the panels shown; illustrations of the panel and of the stitches used; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle
