BOOTLEGGING SITUATION HIT BY MINISTER HERE

Material, even cultural, progress is not enough for youth, the Rev. W. D. Jaegers, pastor of Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church here, told members of the Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club last Thursday evening.

"You and I need you and I need you," he said, "our boys and girls, sons and daughters, have every opportunity to grow into the moral and spiritual persons that have made America great," he declared.

The speaker hit particularly at the bootlegging situation here and elsewhere in the county.

"It is not enough to have beautiful buildings, excellent streets and many cultural advantages," he added, "Our children must have the wholesome atmosphere which is conducive to moral and spiritual growth."

Specifically, the minister spoke of the promiscuous sale of intoxicants, even to minors; of the ease with which alcoholic beverages are procured through tavern operators and clubs, and of the deplorable condition represented by the fact that even young children know of the bootleg traffic and where whiskey or beer may be bought.

Where lies the fault? The Rev. Jaegers pointed that it lies with free citizens.

Yea, Team-White or Black!

It might require a little more time, but the most peaceful way to integration of schools would be to let athletes do it.

Let those colleges which admit Negro students admit the top athletes of both races, let the segregationist schools continue with their all-white teams—then sit back and wait.

Americans can face defeat in other areas, and smile. They can "lose down" a dipper, even. But they cannot afford a losing team.

Those teams which play Negro-athletes are making the all-white opposition look bad, mighty bad. And any old grad will tell you that is not best.

This line of attack on the problem would forget all about the concept that all men are born free and equal, that "American" America is willing to go along with "Jim Crow" for all, white or black, and no respecter of persons.

It would forget all the heated arguments over back and front. All would sit back and listen to the alumni scream "Teach, team!" and yell for the coach's scalp.

Finally would come the peaceful surrender. For dear, old Kiwanis must have her place on the sports pages, must have her all-Americans and her athletic place in the sun.

Let the colored boys, scorned as they may be in other areas of life, die for dear, old Kiwanis—rah-rah!

First High-Speed Road To Eastern Kentucky

SMOOTH, SAFE, AND MODERN stretch of The Mountain Parkway, now open 43 miles from Winchester to Campbell, gives little hint of the engineering problems which had to be overcome. Construction was "cut and fill" for much of the 43 miles. In recent dedication ceremonies Gov. Bert Combs called the Parkway a lasting symbol of the perseverance and hopes of the mountain people.

HISTORIC VALLEY ROAD PIONEER WAY TO WEST

By HENRY P. SCALP

The old road connecting Virginia and the west by way of Big Sandy valley is gone now except for bits of wagon trail that have survived at the back of bottoms or around hillsides.

Between Ives and Tram on the north side of the river and above U. S. Highway 29 a short segment begins at a field fence and ends a few hundred feet south in a yard at the top of a low hill. It is gathering seven, twice and rolling stones.

From the top of the hill where the short stretch of ancient road ends in a yard you can see the village of Tram and the white houses in the river bottoms. Down under the promontory are the remains of the old log house that domiciled the domestic slaves of Col. Harry Stratton, explorer, one of the founders of Floyd county and an early justice. Water blanches grow in a camp where his horse stood and where the first Methodist class was held in the Big Sandy valley in 1792.

Eight years after Col. Harry built the home the Virginia Road was authorized. The old pioneers who had come from Virginia to Kentucky wanted a road to the west which they could drive their herds of hogs and cattle to market. The lawmakers at Frankfort authorized it in 1802. It began at Mt. Sterling, ended at Pound, then Sounding Gap. There it joined a road to Richmond. By east it was called the Virginia Road, by others the Sounding Gap Road.

At first it was not really a road, only a path beaten out by the Indians and after them by the first immigrants. It followed ridges and streams and the first attempts to negotiate it with ox-drawn wagons were foolhardy adventures inviting disaster. Many are the traditions of broken axes that foreshadowed the founding families to settle in Eastern Kentucky when they had originally planned to reach the Blue Grass.

After that first legislative notice in 1802 the lawmakers neglected or forgot the section for 15 years. In 1817, when Alexander Lackey, of Prestonsburg, was a member of the Kentucky House of Representatives, a bill was passed to open a road from Mt. Sterling, via Prestonsburg, to the Kentucky-Virginia line.

Lackey was named one of the three commissioners to establish it. For many years this road was the subject of several legislative acts and many Floyd county court orders. In the period of 1836-1847, the legislature was really "generous" on Eastern Kentucky roads. Between Owensville and the Big Sandy River it spent $168,763.82, between Mt. Sterling and the Virginia line the lawmakers authorized the expenditure of $23,243.40 but recognizing that the road between Preston (Pikeville) and Sounding Gap was in atrocious terms, the sum of $6,324 was authorized. These sums did little more than make the roads passable for most of the year.

Before and after the road was improved it was a "highway" for immigrants. They emerged through Pound Gap, traveled down Sounding Creek, followed the river north and west, the covered wagons rolling and swaying with the slow movement of the oxen that drew the families and their possessions west. Scores of the migrating families stopped at Col. Harry's and stayed all night. It was a house of good cheer and commodious for company.

The year the road was built the county of Floyd was a wilderness empty, broken here and there by pioneer cabins. The town of Prestonsburg, then a log cabin hamlet of less than a dozen people, was the only town between Abingdon, Virginia, in the east and Washington, in the present Mason county to the northwest. Floyd county began at Pound or Sounding Gap, extended west to Blackwater Creek in the present Morgan county. Its northern boundary was the Tug River and on the south it bordered the North Fork of the Kentucky River. The year the road was built the legislature cut off Clay county from Floyd, for the inhabitants were quarreling about the hundreds of fifty miles of rough trail they had to ride to reach their county seat of Prestonsburg.

Col. Harry sat in his huge living room and before the fireplace bright with burning logs listened to the immigrants tell their tale. The territory of Ohio was now a state and the town of Chillicothe was the new state capital. A few more miles from Chillicothe was the mouth of the river and across it was the vast, waiting seas of Indiana. Farmer west was Illinois.

Many were the nights that Col. Harry had old Spencer Adkins from the present Millard, Pike county, for company. The two were fast friends, had hunted and explored the valley when the creeks had no name. Years later when litigation over land titles arose, Stratton and Adkins were witnesses in court. Universally referred to as the Old Hunters, they told of Indian streams that had already been named but most were unnamed at all, Harry and Spencer named a few themselves.

You can walk a few steps on the ancient highway and with your foot rake back the gathering leaves. Down under them lies the rotting organic matter of the years. Under that is a rutted dailstone, cut first by the stony led by the wheels of covered wagons going west, later by the loaded iron carts going east. The enterprising Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia had found the iron hills on the Ohio River in the present Greenup and Carter counties, Kentucky, and across the Ohio in the Hanging Rock section. Bars of raw iron were shipped back east, much of it going up the Big Sandy and through Sounding Gap.

The iron trade to the east reached its height before the Civil War but some of it lingered on until after the internee struggle. The road of empire was to the west and demand turned the laden wagons around. The creaking vehicles and the struggling, straining oxen on the Sounding Gap road ceased and memory of them faded. Only a few old records exist to remind us of a forgotten chapter in our area history.

Col. Harry prospered on his vast plantation, his slaves tending the herds of cattle and hogs and hoing in the fields. Once a year Col. Harry and some of the Laynes or other pioneer families gathered hundreds of hogs and moved slowly out on the road east. In two months they would return from Lynchburg with the proceeds of the great herd and settle with their neighbors.

South of the Col. Harry Stratton plantation were the other Stratton estates and beyond them, principally around the present Harbords, were the Laynes. Richard Stratton had settled at the mouth of the Mace Creek in 1763 and being still fearful of Indians despite the killing "Mad" Anthony Wayne had given them at the Battle of Fallen Timbers the year before built his cabin upon a rocky promontory high above the river. Wise in the ways of the frontier, Uncle Dickie as he was called, cleared the woods back of his cabin as far as a rifle ball would carry.

A few years after Uncle Dickie cleared the land and built his cabin at Mace Creek Narrows, the road was built. Under his cabin the hill descended as a rocky declivity to the river. The boulders cut a narrow road in the rocky hillside above the river. It added emphasis to the name, the Mace Creek Narrows.

North of Col. Harry's home the road hugged the back of a giant bottom and when it reached the mouth of Ivy Creek it followed across on a crude, wooden bridge. South of that the hillside also came down to the river and the road was cut, seven feet wide, through the rock for a hundred feet or more. Residents promptly named the place the Ivy Narrows.

New Detection Technique Assists in Tuberculosis Fight in Kentucky, Said

Frankfort, Ky., June 13.—The field against tuberculosis in Kentucky is resulting in the discovery and treatment of cases which would have gone undetected except for better reporting and case finding, technicians.

Dr. M. Stuart Lander of the State Health Department reported that 5,200 active cases of tuberculosis are now known in the state compared with 2,300 five years ago. He also reported that the number of inactive cases dropped from 14,676 to 5,924 during the same period.

Crash Seedling Planting Program Begins

THE CRASH PROGRAM to plant 2 million or more pine seedlings on denuded Eastern Kentucky mountain slopes is under way by the State Division of Forestry along the headwaters of the Cumberland, the Sandy, and Kentucky rivers. The planting is designed as the first step in an over-all program to help control future flooding in Eastern Kentucky. Gov. Bert Conno has allocated $20,000 from his contingency fund to finance planting of 1 million seedlings, $20,000 in Federal funds has been set aside by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service for planting another million, and Governor Conno has asked Eastern Kentucky farmers to plant a third million. Private firms have also agreed to speed up their own tree-planting work. Here a crew near Cumberland sets out seedlings on a steep, rocky, and gullied hillside.

Application of Mulch May Be Made Following Planting Or Before, Said

Plastic or paper mulch can be applied before seeds are planted or soon after plants come up. If applied before planting seeds, one can plan to use paper or plastic just above the row to allow the plants to come through. These materials usually are held in place by rutting soil along the edge.

Methodist Conference Hits Commercialization Of Sabbath Tendency

The Kentucky Annual Conference of the Methodist Church, Wednesday, June 5, went on record opposing the commercialization of the Sabbath and "the general practice of making it into a holiday instead of a holy day."

Lexington, Ky.—U. K. Ag Experiment Station annual industry researchers, after three years of experiments, still are hunting a material to go with fat and try in steer rations.

Meeting at Eastern Kentucky State College, Richmond, approximately 400 ministers and lay delegates adopted a resolution "that the people called Methodists be urged to use their example and influence to discourage the use of the Lord's Day as a holiday or for commercial purposes."

The 13rd annual conference which began Tuesday, June 4, ended three days later with the reading of new appointments by Bishop Walter C. Gunn, who presided. The resolution stated that "the commercialization of the Lord's Day is increasing, and if allowed to continue, will eventually result in all business places staying open on Sunday for competitive purposes, thus resulting in more and more persons having to be employed on Sunday and depriving of the privileges of spiritual growth."

"It is the responsibility of each individual Christian to set the proper example before the world. The ministers of the conference were urged 'to preach on the spiritual values of the Lord's Day as a day for the worship of God and the Christian education and the values of the Christian home.'"

What's Going On
FISH & WILDLIFE
BY MINOR CLARK, Commissioner
Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources

Q. We own a farm in Breckinridge County but do not live on it. Is that considered a residence and do I have fishing?

A. Ownership of a pond does not constitute a residency. Therefore, unless you move to your farm, you will be required to purchase a valid fishing license to fish in your pond. In your case the valid license would be a non-resident, costing $5.00. When you move to your farm, of course, no license will be required to either hunt or fish on it.

Q. I've been hearing many reports of the fabulous white bass fishing in Kentucky's major lakes. Night fishing is producing the greatest yields, according to reports. I was wondering, since the creel limit is 60 per day, could a man fish all night, that is, start before midnight and end the next day and have two limits in his possession? Not that I'd ever catch that many, but I'd just like to know. In case, R. W. C. Davidson, Ind.

A. You have misinterpreted the limits allowed on white bass. The creel and possession limits are the same—60. Therefore, a person could have had 60 in his possession regardless of the time fished.

Q. What are the hours for visiting the Game Farm? Are there picnic tables available? G. B. H. Shelbyville

A. The Game Farm, which is located three miles west of Frankfort on Highway 66, is open to visitors from eight in the morning until 5 p.m. A shelter house and picnic areas are available. The Farm is open seven days a week.

Q. What's Your Question about the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources? Send it to: Minor Clark, Commissioner, Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Frankfort, Ky., and it will be answered in this column in the near future. All questions must be signed by the sender but initials only will be used in the column, if desired.

I would also congratulate my opponents upon their sportsmanlike conduct, and I wish each of them well.

FOR DELIGHT AND A FIGHT TRY WHITE BASS AT NIGHT

Frankfort, Ky. (Sp.)—White bass populations in Kentucky's major lakes afford excellent sport for night fishermen who use live baits, according to the Fisheries Division of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

More and more sportsmen are trying their hand at the art of white bass fishing and it is not uncommon for a pair of fishermen to return to the docks and throw a string of whites on the scales that will weigh well over a hundred pounds.

Fishing for white bass at night, as a rule, takes place after the fish have completed their spawning run to the tributary streams and have returned to the lake.

Fishermen need the following equipment to be comfortable as well as to have the necessary gear for this special type of angling. Warm clothes such as insulated underwear, insulated boots, head gear that will keep the ears warm, heavy jacket and pants, rain gear, thermos bottles for coffee and soup, flash light, gasoline or coal oil lanterns (at least one hundred feet of rope for each anchor, minor dipnets, large landing net optional, at least three rods and reels per fisherman, and a good supply of assorted sized hooks and sinkers.

White bass seem to strike better when the moon is not visible or during the period that the moon is either in the first or last quarter. Some of the best strings are harvested between midnight and daylight and stormy nights seem to be their delight.

To locate areas where white bass will pass sometime during the night try such spots as bridge piers, steep banks, points that have gravel or shale bottoms or try drifting along the above mentioned spots.

A procedure which may prove valuable is as follows: with one fishing outfit hook the minnow through both lips and allow the minnow to sink to the bottom, then retrieve it slowly toward the surface. Often the depth that the whites are running may be found in this manner. Once the proper depth is found set all other minnows on the baited hooks at the same depth. Rods with light tip action and about five feet long are fine for measuring the exact depth desired and to tell when a white strikes.

Night fishing starts in mid-spring and ends in the late fall with summer months fair for this sport.

The daily and possession limit for white bass in Kentucky is 60 and there is no size limit.

Geological Map Program Of Kentucky Outstanding In Nation, Dr. Nolan Says

Frankfort, Ky., June 13—The State of Kentucky is "getting ready for tomorrow" in carrying out a state-wide geological mapping program, according to Dr. Thomas B. Nolan, Washington, director of the U. S. Geological Survey.

Keynote speaker at a Frankfort meeting concerning progress and importance of the Kentucky mapping work begun in 1959, Dr. Nolan added that "at the conclusion of this program, Kentucky will be well ahead of the rest of the nation" in detailed knowledge of rock formations found in the Commonwealth.

He said that the $12 million program will have many practical results, including a knowledge of "what minerals and construction materials can be obtained from the land and what types of structures can safely be built on it." The program is being financed by federal and state matching funds.

The speaker pointed out that geological mapping is different from other forms of mapping in that "much that is depicted on geological maps is unseen." He said that the geologist "actually sees less than one per cent of all the rock formations" depicted on his maps.

Dr. Nolan pointed out that "only 20 per cent of the nation has been mapped at a scale of one mile to the inch" and added that many of the individual maps are "old, crude and out of date," and praised Kentucky for its statewide geological mapping program to be completed about 1970.

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore

It is said many a bean so highly favored frozen or frosted down; something must have been crossed up with the signs, as happened with my potatoes in 1913. I do not know when they were planted, but they froze to the ground on the night of May 1. I hope that Mrs. Carolyn, which I share, and of course, with all my neighbors, was not brought on by my neglecting to plant my spuds in the Mark of the moon. But all the other latters froze, too, regardless of the time of their planting.

How about the weather signs that you all cling to, so as not to lose connection with Pa and Grandpa? Or do you look first, as I do, at each morning or afternoon paper to see what the weather promises to be for the next day or two? And do you still cling to the ancient belief that only your political party or your church or your social group knows and knew all the answers? If you do, why try to adjust to a changing world, which must look very short-sighted and wacked to you?

Gov. Bert Combs has proclaimed June "Dairy Month" in Kentucky.

The ice cream soda was the concoction at the Centennial Exposition held in Philadelphia in the 1870's. Summer is vacation time, it doesn't make it a vacation from milk and adults and children need salt in their diets in all weather conditions—and drinking milk is one of the best ways to get enough salt.

SCENIC 43 miles of The Mountain Parkway from Winchester to Campton was dedicated recently by Gov. Bert Combs who predicted it would become known as "one of the most beautiful, scenic drives in mid-America." This four-lane section cost $40.5 million. Under construction now is another toll section from Campton 35 miles to Salyersville, and two major freeway access roads. The freeways run from Campton 80 miles to Whitesburg and from Salyersville 46 miles to Pikeville. The Campton-Salyersville section will be opened later this year.

KENTUCKIANS CHALLENGED IN RIFLE CONTROVERSY

Frankfort, Ky., June 13—Of Dan'l Boone would have turned over in Scranton, Pa., the rifle he could have seen what was going on in Frankfort last week.

Eight Pennsylvanians, clad in frontier garb and armed with the weapon Boone made famous, the "Kentucky" Long Rifle, rode into Kentucky's capital city on horseback and issued a challenge to Kentuckians to prove their claims to the old, muzzle-loading, flint-lock weapon.

They were met by a militia of bookbinders and Kentuckians also brandishing the long rifle.

The Northern invaders, who had just completed the more than 900-mile, 29-day trip from Reading, Pa., claimed the weapon is misnamed because it was developed in Pennsylvania before being brought to Kentucky by Boone and other frontiersmen. Kentuckians admit this but point out the rifle was made famous in the Blue Grass state.

Fred Gehm, leader of the rifles and in real life a television producer in Mechanicsburg, Pa., read a challenge to Gov. Bert Combs from the crowd.

Of course you can't. A child is priceless. Yet, it is very important that you calculate her worth in dollars and cents. Does that sound incongruous? It's not. Stephens Discusses Election

The Primary election held on May 28, 1963, was what you call a duze or bungler. The voting machines are a grand thing if operated by honest people...

There were many people selected as election officers who did not know the square of his choice and could not handle these machines. The switches or levers were turned or perhaps could not read or write...

The old ballot system was far more honest in that the ballot of the person who could not read or write was checked with a dot in the square of his choice and the voter retired to his place of voting and placed his stencil where designated...

I do not believe in CONTESTS and never did and I am sure the opinion that the majority of the people do not, so it is better in the long run to abide by the result than let the people be led.

In this Primary I had many kind folk, cousins and double cousins who were strong for Governor Breathitt but that some of them would not dare even mention my name as it might hurt Breathitt. Although I had been a teacher for six years in the rural schools of Floyd county...

TUBERCULOSIS CASE TOTAL FOR KENTUCKY IS 9,222

Frankfort, Ky., June 2 (Sp.)—The state register of tuberculosis cases has been brought up to date with 9,222 active and inactive cases listed, according to Dr. M. Stuart Lauder, director of the program for the Kentucky State Department of Health.

Dr. Lauder noted that this was a reduction of the total number of cases from 10,896. The greater part of this has been in the inactive cases which have come down from 14,679 to 8,929 largely due to sending cases which have not been heard from in the past five years.

Work is continuing on setting up county registers and should be completed within a year's time. The registers for Hart, Rockcastle and Franklin counties have been completed and show 78, 75 and 89 cases respectively.

This work on the registers and laboratory research on sensitivity to all strains of tuberculosis organisms isolated from cases was made possible by a federal grant of $18,787 scheduled to lapse May 31, 1963.

Our Historic Heritage A Pictorial Review of East Kentucky

It was there at Ivy Narrows that "Bill" Nelson, the Union commander and Capt. Andrew Jackson, Confederate, contended for supremacy in the valley on that cold, gray day of November 8, 1861. Col. Harry was dead then. He departed in 1860, at an advanced age, the decades on the frontier and in the new country of the Big Sandy valley having lain lightly on him. He lived much longer than most of his pioneer companions.

Right where the section of the Sounding Gap road ends in a private yard a couple of hundred feet above Col. Harry's old home, the Confederates' cavalrymen hitched their horses after rushing hurriedly from Pikeville to re-inforce Capt. May at the Battle of Ivy Mountain. There the horses stood and gnawed the earth as the cannon rolled half a mile away. They were all there swinging the limbs to which they were tied when the fleeing Confederates reclaimed them to ride south toward Pikeville.

John Wesley Wallace, 53, Brother of Floyd Man, Dies At Hamilton, Ohio

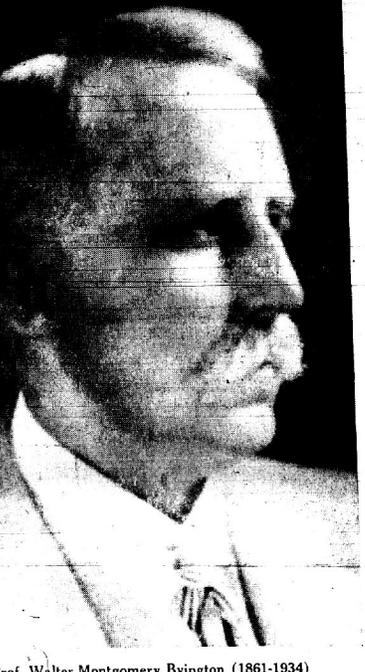

John Wesley Wallace, 53, of 690 Rost Hill Drive, Hamilton, Ohio, died last Friday in Hughes Memorial hospital. Although he had been hospitalized previously and had been in failing health for a year, his death was a shock to relatives and his many friends.

Mr. Wallace was born in Johnson county, Dec. 4, 1909, a son of William F. and Florence Arrowood Wallace. He was educated in the schools of the county and at Pikeville. On June 21, 1934, he married Burdette Turner in Wayland, Ky.

Mr. Wallace was a supervisor at the National Lead Plant in Hamilton for several years and for nine months had been employed by the Monsanto Chemical Corp. at Miamisburg, Ohio. He was an ardent golfer, was an active member of the James W. Allen Lodge 869, Free and Accepted Masons, Wayland, and had a wide circle of friends.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Burdette Wallace, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Wallace, Wayland, a son, Larry Wallace, a daughter, Mrs. Ruby Lee Tutts, both of Hamilton, three brothers, James Wallace, Hamilton, Thomas Wallace, Wayland, Robert Wallace, Prestonsburg, a sister, Mrs. Walter Adams, Louisa, and five grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at 2 p.m. Monday in the Webb Funeral Home chapel, with Rev. P. C. Tuttle, pastor of the Southern Hills Baptist Church, officiating. Burial was in the Rose Hill Memorial Park, Lexington, Ky. — Mary Hardin Davis, of Shelby county, is leaving a lot about potatoes these days. Her first haul in Germany, where she is spending six months as an International Farm Youth Exchange (IFYE) delegate, is the largest potato breeder in the country.

Prof. Walter Montgomery Byington (1861-1934)

Prof. Walter M. Byington, one of the most beloved Eastern Kentucky educators, was born at East Fork, Lawrence county, Ky., May 9, 1861. He received his college education at Marshall College, Huntington, W. Va., and at Ohio State College, Columbus, O. Early dedicating himself to teaching, he entered the profession at Inez but came to Prestonsburg in 1892 where he established the Eastern Kentucky Normal School. Such was the fame of the Prestonsburg institution that more than 700 pupils were in attendance at one time.

From Prestonsburg, Prof. Byington moved to Louisa, where he established the Eastern Kentucky Normal College, a preparatory school for teachers. Following years of service at Louisa, he went to Martin, Floyd County, for two years. At the time of his death he was Boyle County (Ky.) Superintendent of Schools, at Danville. He died July 6, 1934, and lies buried at Rose Hill cemetery, Ashland.

The First National Bank salutes the memory of the beloved educator and the hundreds of men and women who studied under him and afterward embarked upon careers that contributed greatly to the development of our region.
