This Town... That World

For two cents I'd leave this column were I should this week—because the idea was from them and I once heard, running to this effect: "When you don't know nothing, don't say it."

BIRTHDAY COMIN' UP
Glancing at the masthead of last week's Times, I was reminded of the fact that, come October 24, the above-mentioned publication will observe its 26th anniversary. If you want to help us celebrate the occasion, you're all come visitin'. But I can't at this moment tell you whether I'll be up the lake or down.

Do you suppose wild bass haven't done too well in Dewey Lake because blacks were there and they don't like the idea of intergradation?

POPULAR LOCALLY, ANYHOW
Reference to fish and such reminds us that one of the more popular appointments made by Governor Curtis is that of the State Game Warden, at Seventh district member of the Fish & Wildlife Commission, Mr. Garnett succeeds Roscoe Davis as Game Warden member whose term expires.

WE LIKE 'EM ALL
After visiting Pine Mountain and Cumberland Falls State Parks recently, we're less ready than ever to declare any one park the best. The nice thing about this park system is, you find such wonderful variety. What one doesn't have, the next one has, and move over to the next and you'll find something neither of the others possess. . . . Why the world's population should want to drive hundreds of miles for (See Story No. 2, Page 2)

NEGOTIATIONS IMPASSE SEEN

Pipe Size Snag Cause, Superintendent Says; Added Drilling Viewed

The Floyd County Board of Education and the Prestonburg Water & Gas Commission may have reached an impasse in the negotiations toward an agreement whereby the new Middle Creek elementary school would be supplied water from Prestonburg.

County Superintendent Charles Clark said Wednesday that the board of education is willing to pay the cost of four-inch pipe from Prestonburg to the school but that it will not be responsible for the larger size of the water and gas commission had asked. Four-inch pipe, the board holds, is large enough to supply the school and is less expensive than that which merely permits the city to serve customers living along the route followed by the line.

The water and gas commission had offered to lay the line to the school at its expense.

Negotiations for possible city water service at the school began after two water wells drilled at the school failed to yield a volume of water sufficient to meet anticipated needs. Clark said.

"COMMITTEE OF 500" READY FOR RUM FIGHT

GROUP ASKS CITY COUNCIL COOPERATION

Start in Prestonburg With Law Enforcement, Is Suggestion Offered

The Committee of 500 is no myth. It exists in Floyd county, is at work, is adding members and Wednesday night made demand of the Prestonburg City Council that the mayor chair a police, public health and all other officials charged with the administration of law take necessary measures to eliminate bootlegging in Prestonburg.

"Like Drive in Prestonburg is notorious everywhere for its bootleggers," read the statement prepared by the Council by John Roberts, attorney employed by the Committee of 500. "This night on Prestonburg is no myth. It exists in Floyd county, is at work, is adding members and Wednesday night made demand of the Prestonburg City Council that the mayor chair a police, public health and all other officials charged with the administration of law take necessary measures to eliminate bootlegging in Prestonburg."

The law is on your side and you should have little difficulty in cleaning up Prestonburg if you desire."

These excerpts from the prepared statement presented at the Council meeting were cited by a leader on the committee as representing the purposes of the organization.

"The Committee of 500 is a group organized by religious, business and professional leaders of Floyd county whose purpose is to abate the menace of organized bootlegging in this county. The organization is headed by a group of dedicated Floyd county citizens who are a cross-section of the social, cultural, economic and professional fabric. It has no political, economic or any personal motivation other than the desire to make this county a better place to live in."

"We propose to be militant and aggressive in our campaign and we pledge to bestow 100 favoritism on any person or group in our campaign to destroy our bootlegging problem in this whiskey. We are agreed to employ legal counsel and to promote a campaign in solicited, denied, denied and our public office."

STREET GRANT IS POSSIBLE

Fitzpatrick, Reed Lead Effort To Get Federal Assistance

Returning here last week from Washington where they conferred with Community Facilities Administration officials, H. D. Fitzpatrick, Jr. and C. Alan Reed expressed the opinion that if sufficient local interest is shown both the street and water improvement projects proposed for Prestonburg can get federal assistance.

The Prestonburg men were accompanied by Congressman Carl D. Perkins in calling on Community Facilities and there was learned that the library project here and other Kentucky jobs were ready for approval.

It was learned that funds will be left over from a previous appropriation and that the people who drive the hardest will get this money for local improvements.

WOMAN REVISES STORY OF JOHN MAY SLAYING

What purports to be new evidence claimed to be that of Katherine Martin

What purports to be new evidence claimed to be that of Katherine Martin, sister Commonwealth witness in the trial of the officers here. The two trials Miss Martin testified that she was present in the kitchen of the building on Cox Mountain where May was killed and that she was shocked at the firing of the officers upon being spoken to by one of them. That testimony claimed he did not fire a shot and did not have his revolver in his hand.

A statement, signed "Katherine Martin" and dated June 10, 1963, at Columbus, Ohio, gives this version of the shooting.

"I, Catherine Martin, state that I am the same Katherine Martin that testified at the trial of Troy Mullins and Martin Martin, charged with the offense of murder in connection with the death of John May on Cox Mountain in Floyd county, Kentucky. On the evening that John May was killed, he made the statement that they would probably be after me and if they take me they will have to take me with my toes sticking out. He told me that he and I should be on the table and when Troy and Martin walked in John May reached for his gun, not in his hand and fired a shot. I do not know who fired the other shots."

"No matter what law officers came there that night there would have killed them and they."

The first part of the statement explains that it was made at the woman's request, "without the presence of any lawyer or anyone."

The statement was witnessed by Junior Martin and Holley Conley, not hospitalized.

Commonwealth's Attorney Holley Conley said this week at a Pikeville hospital.

BOYS AND VACATION PARENTS WOULD SHUN TIME OF PARTING

$69,000 GRANT MADE FOR LIBRARY PROJECT

Mr. and Mrs. Little, David and Donald pose for a picture in one of their quieter moments.

August 30 is a date toward which the two boys who have been their Floyd county couple and two young brothers, guests in their home, many friends in the county, and aren't looking forward to with any great anticipation. That's the day the boys will end their visit and part with their summertime "parents."

The hosts are Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Little of H. H. Hart, their guests are David, 9, and Donald, 13, boys who have been living at the Kentucky Children's Home, London. Learning that the Department of Child Welfare has a summer home program which helps children experience a family living situation outside the state-maintained institution, Mr. and Mrs. Little applied through the office here of the Department of Child Welfare for two boys to visit in their home this summer. So it was that the Littles brought David and Donald home with them, June 15.

And ever since the Floyd couple and the two youngsters have literally been having the time of their lives.

It would be difficult for a stranger to see into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Little and detect that the two boys there aren't permanent members of the family. Said Mrs. Irene Campbell, director of the Department of Child Welfare office here, "The Littles have derived a lot of happiness from the experience and have done everything possible to make the boys happy and to show them a good time and give them a wholesome home."

Fishing, swimming, bowling, Little League baseball—the boys have found with the H. H. Hart couple a new kind of home. Mrs. Little is happy about the prospect of its ending.

Mr. Little is employed by the Kentucky Power Company at H. H. Hart, and his wife works as a secretary of the good conduct and managers of the county.

County and community committees who will administer ASCS programs, beginning October 1, will be elected by farmers in September. The election will be held at 10 a.m. at the home of H. T. Hill, chairman of the Floyd County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

The first part of the statement explains that it was made at the woman's request, "without the presence of any lawyer or anyone."

The statement was witnessed by Junior Martin and Holley Conley, not hospitalized.

Commonwealth's Attorney Holley Conley said this week at a Pikeville hospital.

The report received by him was that the victim and another young man were fighting last Friday and that Garrett was placed on the ground by the other when a younger brother struck a piece of timber which apparently was aimed at his brother's ankle. This was the cause of the injury, the Sheriff said.

A raid staged by Mr. Grant Claude A. Flannery, State Trooper, Don Cook and Tomper County on Monday resulted in the seizure of a large quantity of bootleg liquor and the confiscation of all cases of beer and in pairs of it.

The youth later told a brother of the bootlegger, and McGuire was taken to the Nashville hospital. The report received here indicated that the shooting was an accident. ## Strip-Mining Involves The Rights of Many

The Floyd County Times is, essentially, a friend and supporter of the coal business, an industry upon which Eastern Kentucky has, in the absence of other industries, found it necessary to lean heavily.

Although the number of men which it employs is steadily dwindling, the coal business provides the area its biggest industrial payroll. Nobody has gone out hunting for representatives of this industry to locate here. No sites have been bought and given to coal-mine operators in return for the location of a mine in a county or near any given community. The men who have risked their capital have financed their own ventures, not even receiving any quarter from the federal government.

Yet, for all our awareness of the economic importance of the coal business, we do not sincerely hope that the Pike county man has sued in U. S. district court to restrain strip-mining of his lands with his case.

Those old Northern Coal & Coke deeds simply had too much of infancy about them for this earth. Strip-mining was not even a dream when they were executed. As the plaintiff, Elbert Roberts, has pointed out, the company now removing the coal on his land has a right to mine coal but it does not have a right to destroy his surface property.

Our sympathy for the plaintiff in this action does not necessarily mean that we are irrevocably opposed to all strip-or-auger-mining. Men who have invested heavily in machinery to carry on this type of work have their rights, and if coal is not to lose out entirely to other facts of nature and science, the strip-miner must be given the right to strip-mining.

Yet we are committed to the theory that the landowner, his neighbors, the general public and the nation are entitled to consideration and that the mining of coal by striping, augering or any other method which leaves the surface and the life of the landowner and the society which countenances it must mend its ways or quit.

The twin dangers of erosion and flood are too great, the loss of top-soil and natural beauty in a land whose great natural beauty may indeed be its greatest resource is too heavy. Something has to give, and the land-owner has given too much already.

Wherever the state and/or federal governments can and will enforce full and immediate steps to reclaim the damaged surface and where the type of mining can be carried on without permanent damage to the immediate vicinity and to other downstream properties and fisheries, work should be permitted to continue. But if this work is to demand of others a sacrifice of rights and possessions, it should be stopped.

And the land-owner does have some rights as possessor of the surface—rights, it is to be hoped, which are not to be violated by a mining method which takes not only the coal but is the farmer's.

If Child Has School Problem Parents Usually Are At Fault

BY IRVING ARBENZ, M.D. (In "Ourier-Journal")

Last week I wrote about the school health examination. Today I must impress on you parents certain ideas that I consider of utmost importance.

Every day I see the almost hopeless problem-boys and problem-girls who cannot be helped. I have seen them in my office. Whose fault is it? Now I don't intend to lecture to you or to give you uninteresting psychological statements. I am going to tell you just what I believe from having had a lot of grass-roots experience with problems of children.

First, it isn't true that it is always the parents' fault when something goes wrong. But it is almost always the parents' fault and it is always their responsibility.

Now let me tell you just a few of the many reasons some children cannot "make it" in school and "slip up behind the eight-ball":

1. Failure of the parents to supply the know-how of culture, of experience, of knowledge and failure to set proper examples in the home from the time the child is born.
2. Illness of the child.
3. Mental retardation.

The next kind of frustration, to defiant behavior, to truancy and to delinquency:

4. Having an unreasonable learning loss or vision defect, leading to poor scholastic and then leading to faulty behavior and all the rest.
5. Getting on with wrong buddies—which leads to bad behavior, truancy, delinquency.
6. Having a mother who does not discipline her child, but who is too lenient and who does not discipline her child.

It is your boy or girl who gets a failing grade in school you should consider it as important as a bad case of scarlet fever or measles. You should try to determine the cause and do everything you can to see it rectified and that it doesn't happen again.

Work missed because of unnecessary absenteeism from school can never be made up completely. You must not allow your child to stay out of school except for very serious reasons.

It is a parent's duty to know how well or how poorly his child is doing and not to find out until it is too late. This requires constant and motion, with the teacher from time to time. It requires a thorough health examination of the child.

Parents must take an interest in the curriculum, the homework, the child's friends, his hours of sleep and play and work his school work at all times—and the possible need for extra help for school work.

Lack of parental responsibility is the cause of so many dropouts and so much delinquency. The home must be strengthened.

How is your boy or girl doing to make a living later if he or she doesn't learn how to know there are fewer and fewer jobs for an ill-skilled, uneducated boy and girl? Give your child a chance.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Mildred O'Dell on her 100th birthday:

When I cross this life of sorrow,
When from death sets me free,
I'll expect a bright tomorrow,
Dear ones do not weep for me.

When beneath the soil I'm lying
And you'll want to find me,
Do not think of me and I'll be
Do not shed those tears for me.

You who once crossed the river
To the rest prepared for me,
By that hand and blessed voice
Then why should you weep for me?

 Handle peaches with care! Peaches keep their fresh appearance and natural goodness longer when handled carefully in the store and at home. Mature peaches are neither too hard nor too soft. With a little practice, you can learn to "get the feel" of a mature peach. A hard ripeness isn't needed—by holding the peach gently in the hand, its degree of firmness can be easily felt.

State Parks' Nature Study
BIRDWATCHING—Ray Harm, wildlife artist and naturalist, is conducting a week-end series of special programs for the Kentucky Department of Parks. Harm (sketching), has found that a popular phase of his nature efforts are bird walks and nature hikes. While walking, he points out different animals, birds, and flowers and discusses characteristics of each. At informal lectures he also displays prints of many of his paintings and shows several stuffed birds and small animals. Here Harm points out a bird to a few members of a study group at Kentucky Dismal Village State Park. Shown (from left), are: Dr. Charles Butrey, 5422 Roseliff Dr., Lorain, Ohio; Michael Uram, 2415 Lynch Ave., Granite City, Ill.; and Mrs. Fred Seligman and daughter, Suzanne, 1225 Roosevelt Ave., Ames, Iowa.
Frankfort, Ky., August 12 (Sp.)—wildlife artist and naturalist Ray Harm has an oversimplified explanation for his success:
"Dad taught me to be observant." That hardly tells the story. For at 36, Harm has parlayed his sixth grade education and that razor sharp observation into a remarkable collection of talents and skills.
Latest chapter in the Harm story has been his work with the Kentucky Department of Parks. He is serving as staff artist and lecturer for a special series of week-end nature programs.
Not one for formality, Harm has no set format for his park programs.

Road Job Acceleration Seen When Management Planning Is Organized

Frankfort, Ky., August 17 (Sp.)—Highway Department officials look for earlier construction starts on key road jobs, now that the new Office of Program Management is functioning.
The job of setting road projects ready for building on schedule has been given to J. C. Moore, a veteran Highway Department engineer and former deputy commissioner with considerable experience in programming and scheduling highway construction and improvement projects. He fills in the new position as assistant commissioner.
In outlining the work of the office, Highway Commissioner Henry Ward directed that it see that projects are ready for scheduled construction dates by expediting such preliminary functions as location, design and acquisition of right-of-way and that it make full use of the electronic data processing facilities of the Department.
As head of the Office of Program Management, Moore's new responsibilities include maintaining an improved project program of construction, programming federal aid projects with the Bureau of Public Roads and keeping records on the status of projects.

Instead, the West Virginia native confesses that he more or less "plays it by ear." He prefers to let the mood of his audience dictate the type of presentation he makes.
At each state park session, Friday night is known as "Meet Ray Harm Night." He introduces listeners to his work, including paintings and examples of stuffed birds and small animals. Then he talks at random about wildlife and nature, inviting questions all the while.
Saturday mornings usually bring an outdoor activity, a nature hike or a talk under some spreading shade-tree. Harm identifies birds and animals by both sight and sound and discusses their characteristics.
From Saturday noon on, he gears his program to fit the desires of the persons attending the best two meetings. His schedule for the remainder of August includes visits to Ashburn State Park, Henderson, August 16-17; Carter Caves State Park, Olive Hill, August 23-24; and Pennywell Forest State Park, Dawson Springs, August 30-31. Dates for another series will be announced at the end of August.
Brooks have played a secondary role in Harm's self-education. Often he tells his audience that he has spent more than half his life "sleeping under the open sky."
On impulse he once parked his car along the highway and hiked into the New Mexico continental divide country. He stayed 43 days with no tools except a pocket knife, yet he actually gained weight living off the land.
Now married and the father of three children, he is forever studying plants, birds, and animals in the woods and thumbing through books. Yet he has a tendency to "sell himself short."
"There's been a lot of fuss about the painting and studying I've done," he offers, "but I deserve little credit. I was fortunate enough to have been born in beautiful mountain country. Nature has always been my background."
As an artist, he is a perfectionist. Patience is his forte. He spent nine weeks on a perch 30 feet high studying the bird called for one of his more recent paintings. Sometimes he sketches an idea as many as two dozen times before he adds the first touch of color. His studies of birds are done feather by feather, layer by layer.
Born near Elkins, in the West Virginia mountain country, Harm got an early indoctrination into the hows and whys of nature. His father was a naturalist, herbarist and outdoor lover.
Both parents were concert violinists. Ray, at the age of five, began to learn to play classical music on the violin. Later he learned two other stringed instruments — the guitar and ukulele.
Harm left home at 13 to go West. He worked for a circus, for gude ranches and wild west shows, and as a cowboy for cattle outfits all around the life.
He followed the rodeo circuit in western Oklahoma and California and played guitar, harmonica and fiddle. He remembers having his share of "busted bones."
"Needless to say this kind of work kept me in the out-of-doors and on the move," he recalls. "I could watch prairie chickens court at daybreak in one state and in the same week catch a pair of mountain quail. My sketch books stayed full."

What's Going On
FISH & WILDLIFE
By MINOR CLARK, Commissioner
Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources

It is said that more game is killed on the highways by traffic than by the hunters in the field. This is true, we believe, especially of rabbits and squirrels and we are now concerned at the period when the roads will be a greater attraction for these two species than at any other time of the year. Of course, the rabbits are killed mostly at night while daylight hours, especially early morning and late afternoon, are the favorite time for the squirrels to prance along the highways.

So, it's 24 hours a day that the driver must be careful of the wildlife on the highway. And why do rabbits, for instance, use the highway? Well, there are several ideas on this subject. Some say that the hot sun of the day leaves the highway warmer than surrounding areas at night and that is an attraction for rabbits to use the roadway as a playground. Also, biologists know that rabbits like open areas on which to play and if these openings cannot be found in the fields, then they'll use the highways. Anyway, it's for sure that the rabbits do use the highways more during the day than at any other time.

Now, for the squirrels. It is not known why squirrels may be seen in such great numbers on the highways in the early morning and late afternoon. They are not playing on the highways and they are not seeking food there, it is believed, but it is known that it is during these periods that squirrels travel most and that probably is the reason for their being on the highways. Be that as it may, we know that these two animals do use the highways a great deal; that great numbers are killed and, therefore, we urge all drivers to give the wildlife a brake. Careful drivers can prevent much slaughter on the highways, although it will be foolish to advise anyone to endanger themselves to avoid killing wildlife. But, drivers can cut down on the wildlife toll, if they're careful.

THE REAL POWER IN GOLF. The man who means the most in golf today is not the Arnold Palmer, not Jack Nicklaus, not Gary Player. He is the lawyer who brings in the gold for these three men. Mark McCormack drove a 1964 Ford until he took over Palmer's affairs in 1960. Now he handles all business matters of Palmer, Nicklaus and Player for a ten percent commission. Palmer says that he makes no decisions without first consulting McCormack's business data with McCormack. All of McCormack's deals — "20 or 40 companies," says the lawyer — have contributed to make the 34-year-old Palmer the wealthiest endorser golfer ever. Says McCormack: "Arnold Palmer could quit playing golf right this minute, never win another tournament, and for the rest of his life he would be a very rich man."

Arnold's seven-year-old daughter, Peggy, sees all this in a different light. Peggy says, "My Daddy really wants to stay home with us, but he can't. If he does, his lawyer will fire him."

WILLIE MAYS SPECTACULAR. A West Coast television team, Lee Mendelson and Charlie Einstein, are preparing a television documentary on Willie Mays. One afternoon they went out to Candlestick Park and started shooting Mays in the third inning of a game. One of the TV technicians said, "Why shoot him now? He's in a slump."

Mendelson said, "We ordered a home run. We need it for the show."

A moment later, Mays responded by hitting a home run. Two elderly ladies, sitting in back of the television crew, had overheard Mendelson's remark. Said one to the other: "You told you the game was fixed."
