List Jurors For Coming Court Term One Murder Probe By Grand Jury Seen; 2 Trials Uncertain

For the April criminal term of circuit court names of 82 Floyd county residents have been drawn for jury service.

The only murder case to be investigated by the grand jury is the slaying on Abbott Creek of Vernon Hopkins.

At least two murder cases developed from earlier grand jury action are not expected to be heard during the term. The special judge in the conspiracy to murder case against Eddie Jones, Johnny Martin and Agnel Jones had indicated he will be unable to preside in a trial during April. It has been indicated that the murder case against Eddie Jones and Martin, which was transferred on change of venue to Pike county, may be returned to this county for trial.

Trial of Bobby Workman, who is under indictment in the mystery slaying on Arkansas Creek of James Chaffin, is almost certain not to be heard during the term. Workman has not been arrested, but is being sought by the FBI on a warrant alleging unlawful flight. He was last known to be living in Michigan.

The list of prospective jurors follows: Raymond Ratliff, Prestonsburg; Mrs. Ora Bussey, Prestonsburg; Mrs. James R. McClung, Emma; Larry Cecil, Emma; Claudia A. Kerry, Grethel; Mrs. Charles Marshall, Prestonsburg; Glen D. Robinette, Dana; Dennis Lafferty, Water Gap; Johnny Boyd, Dana; John H. Keenan, Prestonsburg; James N. Allen, Langley; Rev. J. A. Harmon, Allen; Maggie Gunnes, Prestonsburg; Eva Clark, Prestonsburg; Bill T. Goble, Prestonsburg; Edwin Horn, Prestonsburg; Conrad Prater, West Prestonsburg; Huey Gray, Prestonsburg; Olga Trusty, Garrett; Mrs. Kathy Goble.

Municipal Aid Here For Year Is $15,484

Governor Julian M. Carroll and Transportation Secretary John C. Roberts last Friday announced the 1974-75 Municipal Aid Program for the City of Prestonsburg.

The program is based on an anticipated allotment of $15,484 for the coming fiscal year and provides for slip corrections and backstop resurfacing for Archer Park Drive, backstop resurfacing for Central Avenue, the installation of sidewalk on North Lake Drive, and initial backstop surfacing and backstop resurfacing for Scott court.

The activities authorized will be accomplished by the city with the Bureau of Highways financing all or a portion of the work in accordance with the Municipal Aid Agreement.

The Municipal Aid Program, which became effective July 1, 1973, is supported by a one-half cent per gallon gasoline tax. The funds derived from this tax are distributed among the incorporated and unincorporated areas according to the terms of a formula chosen by the General Assembly in 1972.

This Town... That World

I may take up bird-watching for the good of my soul. It makes you wonder about humans when you see a red-bird, a black-bird and a brown sparrow, all around the same feeder—no white birds, but nobody interested in the other fellow's color. I also have observed that the joy, beautiful as he is, is the toughest customer of the lot and does less fraternizing than most of his kind. Maybe that's why the good Lord gave the joy that fish-water voice.

I am affronted by the daily press. Now they're calling that Kentucky River community Hell For Certain and it gets cut off by high water. Nothing like that happened as long as the name remained Hell-for-Sartin.

THE LONG, LONG TRAIL...

A good story-teller doesn't skimp the detail, but he has to watch it, lest he get tired down. His hearers may go to sleep on him as he winds his way from Genesis to Revelation, making side-trips into the minor prophets, so to speak, in the course of his rambling remarks.

I heard, the other day, of the fellow who with a buddy left Charleston, W. Va. for Prestonsburg, years ago, and of the story he told about his journey. It was while the man was "sitting up" at a wake when he began telling of his odyssey. One of the fellows in the group said he had got around Huntington when he went home and that when he returned, next morning, the spinner of this marathon tale had reached Wayne.

Got stuck in Wayne, where, he said, he and his pal had got mixed up in a school election.

All of which reminds me of Lenna Moore's attempt to describe to a couple of coal miners, the other day, his four years in the mines. "Trouble was," Lenna confessed, "when I got to the end of my second year I looked around and both of them fellows were gone."

Data Fails To Prove Home Return of Idle

Taking a look at student membership records, Superintendent of Schools Charles Clark this week remarked, "The media stories about 'lost hillbillies' returning to Appalachia with their young'uns are highly exaggerated."

Or they're not sending their "young'uns" to school.

In fact, the enrollment for the fifth month of the present school term is one less than for the first month. And kindergarten classes dropped from 61 in their first month to 52 in the fifth.

Every high school in the county showed a drop in enrollment between the first and fifth months. It is held possible that some high school boys have dropped out of school for high-paying coal mine jobs during the recent boom. Allen Central dropped from 594 the first month to 553 in the fifth; Betty Layne, from 529 to 506; McDowell, from 349 to 343; Prestonsburg, from 820 to 813; and Wheelwright, from 329 to 277.

Meanwhile, all grade schools in the county with the exception of John M. Stumbo, Wayland and Spruce Pine, show

Allen Leaves Health Agency After Meeting

Quentin D. Allen concluded his association with Big Sandy Health Care as its director at last Friday's meeting of the health agency's board of directors, and his formal resignation is scheduled this week.

Meanwhile, operation of the agency is being handled by board and staff members. Reassignment of Allen followed months of a power struggle inside the two-county organization.

The former director said he decided to resign when it became obvious that there was no possibility under existing conditions of his effective management of the health work which involves clinics at Wheelwright and Salsberyville.

"I came back to my home county last year," he commented, "hoping that a health program such as this could help many people. I knew that a previous effort had failed and had ended in considerable confusion, but I honestly felt that we could get an effective work going. It is disappointing to me to learn after all these months that I was wrong."

Jones Convicted On Gun Charge

U. S. District Attorney Eugene E. Siler, Jr. last week announced the conviction of Agnel Jones, of Lackey, in U. S. district court at Pikeville for violation of federal gun control laws.

A jury of 11 men and one woman returned a guilty verdict on three counts of an indictment charging Jones with possessing a firearm after having been convicted of a felony.

Jones, who operates a store in Knott county, near Lackey, had been convicted previously for violation of Internal Revenue laws relating to the sale of whiskey.

Flood Threat Passes After Steady Rains

Rainfall which began last Wednesday and ranged from steady to intermittent through Saturday brought flood conditions to most parts of Kentucky and in this section gave residents some uneasy hours.

Although property damage was not heavy in the county, several roads were cut by water. No assessment of the damage to roads, bridges and culverts by the water and earthslides has yet been made.

Tide was interrupted on KY 122 at Orkney, on Abbott Creek and on the road skirting Dewey Lake. Some homes were isolated, and on the Left Fork of Bull Creek some residents reached the road only by boat. The same situation existed at Jenny Wiley State Park where May Lodge guests were ferried across the water which cut the access road. The golf course there and Archer Park at West Prestonsburg were deep under water.

But for upstream reservoirs Prestons-

Court Votes Magistrates Salary Raise

The fiscal court at its March 5 meeting voted to increase salaries of magistrates by $200 a month.

The increase is retroactive to Jan. 1 and brings magistrates' monthly salaries to $600. Per diem pay for meetings is eliminated.

Other court action during the session included:

Voted to construct a bridge across Left Beaver Creek from KY 122 to join the road up Caslaw Hollow.

Directed County Judge Henry Stumbo, Magistrate Bill Wells and Sam Fitzpatrick, county road foreman, to inspect the Gas Fork road at Allen and determine if its improvement is necessary.

Authorized Judge Stumbo to order through the state purchasing agency two two-ton dump trucks.

Authorized the Prestonsburg Water and Gas System to run a four-inch gas line to West Prestonsburg via the old bridge.

Employed Perry Tackett, of the Betsy Layne section, as dog warden and livestock inspector at a salary of $300 a month. The county has not had a dog warden for the last year.

Wrecked Car Recovered From River Near Here

The 1975 Monte Carlo which was recovered from the Big Sandy River at Knottley Hollow last Sunday was identified this week by Kentucky State Police as the auto of Phillip Boothe, of Bevinville.

Police said Boothe wrecked the car Friday night, escaping as it plunged into the river. The auto entered the river, upstream from the Goble-Roberts Addition and had carried downstream approximately 300 feet by the current.

The area where the car wrecked has been the scene of some of the valley's worst tragedies.

Juror in Allen Case Claims Threat Made

The affidavit of a juror admitting misconduct at the trial and alleging that his safety and that of his family was threatened by an unnamed man has been introduced by attorneys for Lawton Ray Allen, Prestonsburg accounting firm head, and his wife, Eleanor, as additional grounds for a new trial of their damage suit against the Johns-Manville Corp. and Elliott Glass and Electric Company.

The jury in the case reportedly voted, 9 to 3, at the trial of the case in the Johnson circuit court last month to deny the Allens' claim of $80,000. Plaintiffs contended that Mrs. Allen's serious respiratory problem resulted from fiberglass used in their new residence in the Executive Heights Addition, near Combs airport.

The new grounds for retrial of the case are embraced in an affidavit made by Chester Haney, Jr., one of the jurors. Haney stated that he was approached by a man at the conclusion of the noon "break" in the trial on Friday, Feb. 14, and this man asked him if he was Chester Haney, Jr. and a juror in the case. Told that he was, the man, according to Haney, told the juror to give the instructions by the Court, the closing arguments by the attorneys and jury deliberations. I did not really consider the evidence that I had heard during the case but could only think of the statements made by the aforesaid individual, who was unknown to me at the time and is still unknown to me, and considered those statements to be a threat to me and the safety of my family.

The statements prevented me from voting my true convictions and belief.

Haney added that, had the statements not been made to him, he would have voted for a verdict for the Allens.

The motion for a new trial is expected to be heard April 4.

Divine Is New Administrator At Highlands Medical Center

MR. DIVINE

Eugene Divine, of Ft. Smith, Ark., began his duties Monday as administrator of the Highland Regional Medical Center, succeeding in that capacity Chalmers H. Frazier, who has been named president of the hospital corporation. It was announced this week by Edward Music, chairman of the medical center's board of trustees.

As administrator Mr. Divine will be responsible to the president and the board of trustees for the details of actual hospital operation. Mr. Frazier, as president, will be the chief executive officer, and his leadership role will involve future development, fund-raising, planning and other non-operational functions.

MR. FRAZIER

A native of Lexington, Mr. Divine holds a bachelor's degree in mathematics from Texas Christian University where he has also done work toward a master's in management science. He received his master's in health care administration from the Washington University School of Medicine, St. Louis, Mo., and did a residency at Sparks Regional Medical Center in Fort Smith, serving there as associate administrator since June 1, 1973.

Mr. Divine also was an industrial engineer five years and supervisor seven years with the General Dynamics Corporation. He served from 1944 to 1946 in the Marine Corps. Mr. and Mrs. Divine and their two children have moved to Prestonsburg.

Cold Check 'Notice' Threat to Business, Prosecutor Claims

A warning was voiced this week by Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo to business people who may be affected by the cold check law under the new penal code.

Stumbo pointed out that the law now requires the writer of a "cold" check to be given 10-day notice before a warrant for his or her arrest can be issued.

"If the writer of a cold check moves, says, to another town, how can he be notified?" the prosecutor asks.

The new penal code is unsatisfactory at a number of points, prosecutors and peace officers say, and the Commonwealth's Attorney has indicated an effort will be made at the next General Assembly session to get some changes made.

Selecting the Juror—With a Careful Eye

(The following from The Lexington Herald-Leader of March 2, pertains to the talents of Prestonsburg native, Henry Hughes and of his success as a Lexington attorney. Mr. Robert Hughes, of Prestonsburg—Editor.)

Henry Hughes is an actor. His forum is 'ne' the stage, but the courtroom. As the prosecution built its case against his client in a trial in Fayette Circuit Court this week, Hughes—as is his style of practicing law—had little quarrel with any of it.

But when the prosecution ended its case and it was Hughes' turn, he used most of the same evidence to construct an entirely different set of circumstances.

Hughes, like many trial lawyers, takes the science of jury selection a step further by turning jurors on his client with his own conduct.

Hughes' reluctance to become unruffled at the most damning evidence against his client sometimes causes prosecutors to come unhinged. Hughes refuses to give a jury a sign that something is as bad as a prosecutor tries to make it. During a trial this week, Hughes—as the jury prepared to watch a slide presentation—asked prosecutor Larry Roberts, "Is there any popcorn?"

Later, when a taped recording involving his client, was played, Hughes' cringed and covered his face as a few bawdy jokes were told.

The jury was openly amused. Few jurors realize that this is a play, a valuable but sometimes dangerous ploy because there is a fine line between not looking worried about something and not looking like you are taking the job seriously.

Hughes manages to cover all the bases and has a good record of acquittals and hung juries, especially in his specialty: murder trials.

"But you don't have to be so careful about who you get on a jury in a murder trial," Hughes explained, "because most everyone can understand what makes a person kill someone. But in something like a drug trial, not everyone can understand the reason for drugs."

According to Pat Molloy, the Commonwealth attorney, Hughes' tactics are more difficult to work against, than that of a lawyer who takes what he calls "the 180-degree turn." In other words, a lawyer who objects to everything the prosecution does, and risks angering the jury in the process.

But manipulating a jury in this manner is less important than selecting a jury in the first place.

No-Fault Law Becomes Effective July 1

By CHARLES WILLIAMS
Frankfort, Ky.—Beginning July 1, Kentucky automobile owners will have the option of either accepting or rejecting the new no-fault insurance benefits.

The law, enacted by the 1974 General Assembly, becomes effective on that date.

According to Harold B. McGuffey, commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Insurance, "There are many misconceptions about no-fault and we are planning an education campaign to inform the public of the new law."

"Basically, no-fault insurance requires the policyholder's insurance to pay medical expenses resulting from a traffic accident," he explained, "regardless of who was at fault."

In accepting this coverage, an accident victim loses his right to sue unless medical expenses exceed $1,000. But the coverage will guarantee prompt payment of claims because it will no longer be necessary to await the results of a lengthy investigation to determine who was at fault.

McGuffey says that under the plan, if an injured party is not paid within 30 days, the insurance company must pay him interest of up to 18 per cent.

The law requires minimum coverage of up to $10,000 for each injured person. These benefits include payments for medical and rehabilitation expenses, a maximum of $200 per week for loss of income or benefits to survivors in case of death and $1,000 for funeral and burial expenses.

McGuffey pointed out that a motorist may obtain additional protection and could choose deductibles of $250, $500 or $1,000 at reduced premiums.

The no-fault law pertains to injury or death only. It has no bearing on loss or damage to property.

"Any person not wanting this coverage must obtain a rejection form from his insurance company or his insurance agent," McGuffey said. "He then retains his right to sue, but will not be eligible for the no-fault benefits."

"The rejection forms will be filed in the insurance department's offices," he added, "and anyone who does not submit a form will automatically have his present insurance coverage converted to no-fault July 1."

Should a person reject the coverage and later decide he wants its benefits, he may withdraw his rejection. Persons accepting no-fault will be eligible for a 10 per cent reduction in his present bodily injury liability insurance rates.

Whether a person accepts or rejects no-fault, the commissioner said, the new law requires that all motor vehicles be protected by auto liability coverage to a minimum of $10,000.

A person found guilty of operating an uninsured vehicle in Kentucky will be subject to a $50-$500 fine.

McGuffey says that guidelines for the regulations were drafted by a committee he appointed last July. The 18-member committee consisted of 13 individuals from other areas of the United States with experience in implementing similar laws.

He said that the group was divided into seven subcommittees and that they worked more than 270 hours drafting the guidelines.

Brochures explaining no-fault are now being distributed through all county court clerk's offices. Beginning April 1, there will be radio and TV announcements on the subject and insurance agents will conduct seminars to educate the public.

State Parks—

Pleasant Places To Be

By HELEN PRKCE STACY
Why is Kentucky spring so delightful? Because it is so many things.

Its whimsical weather is what most people love about Kentucky. "It's the seasons, all the changes and even the surprises."

At Natural Bridge State Resort Park near Slade, just off Mountain Parkway, a recent week-end was just that: warm on Friday, windy and overcast on Saturday; and sunny and crisp on Sunday—great for hiking. Guests who checked in late Sunday started the week with a good beginning, especially if they brought along sleds or skis.

A young couple, each with a camera, stood at the front desk, asking the clerk about trails to the bridge. "We want scenic views to enter in photography contest," the young woman said.

A youngster, also with a camera, stood by listening. "I'm looking for trout—no, not a fish. I'm doing a school paper on trout lilies, bloodroot and other spring plants. I have pictures of them pushing through the leaf mold and then in the bud stage and I'll be back in about two weeks to see if they're blooming."

An elderly man wheezed. "Where do they get all that energy? That lad has been up and down the trail three times today and he's still going like a trippammer."

A Louisville couple, hungry and chilled from a morning hike, headed for the dining room. "We got up at seven this morning," she said, "and drove here in two hours. It's a beautiful Sunday, crisp and cold outside—nice and warm in here. We're starved."

A young couple in the gift shop looked at turquoise rings. "We spent our honeymoon here in January," she laughed, "and it was so warm I sunbathed two days on the small balcony off our room." He added, "We're just now getting around to buying our rings." Both wanted matching bands set with genuine turquoise, but the man also purchased a silver bracelet as a surprise for his wife. "Her birthday is next week," he whispered.

At a table in a corner four adults sipped coffee and talked about sports. One couple said they planned a visit to Carter Caves one week-end and to Jenny Wiley the next, where they would go boating in Dewey Lake.

A man at the table explained that he never allowed the weather to interfere with a planned or "spur of the moment" visit to a park. "There's always something to enjoy. Our youngsters can learn about nature, that's for sure. They spend all their time climbing and hiking, and we can relax."

Any day is a good day for a short drive to a nearby park, whether the skies are clear and the day is warm or the wind is as cold as the eyes of a mountain bobcat.

HIGHWAY DEATH TOLL UP

Traffic deaths are running about 10 per cent above the number reported during the same period last year, according to figures from the state police. The upswing is due to the increased traffic volume following the end of the apparent gasoline shortage of a year ago and to the increased number of motorists who are ignoring the 55 mile per hour speed limit, says state Police Commissioner Truett Hicks. Hicks has ordered a special effort by the Kentucky State Police to end the growing death toll.

The installation will be used by Brandeis for the repair and reconstruction of earth-moving and other equipment.

The construction project will include two buildings with a total of approximately 33,000 square feet of floor space. Work on the steel structures is expected to begin next month and to be completed late in the year.

Brandeis hopes to begin work with 40 employees and to increase the work force to 70 or more. Area residents will be given employment preference. A Brandeis official said. Most of the employees will be male and will be skilled workers.

The Brandeis Machinery and Supply Company was founded in 1958 and is one of the South's best-known firms.

Prestonsburg businessmen issued urgent calls here this week for citizens of the county to appear at the courthouse Wednesday to testify to the need for the proposed municipally-operated bus line. Bobby Donald Morrison, 29, was fatally injured Friday night when his auto wrecked on the Cow Creek-Buffalo road as he was driving to his home near Endicott. The Prestonsburg Chamber of Commerce appealed this week to residents to make available at least 20 rooms for the increased number of students expected at Prestonsburg Community College during the fall semester. A pilot project to start in Floyd and three bordering counties will provide about 250 families a trip at federal government expense to some other section of Kentucky or to another state where there is work for the head of the household. The Stone Coal Regular Baptist Church at Garrett broke precedent this week when it invited ministers and laymen of other denominations to join it in a protest against what was described as lawlessness. Martin high school's Purple Flash last Saturday night defeated Morgan County high 64-51 in the championship game of the Region 15 tournament here thereby winning a place in the state basketball championship. Except for long-distance phone service, the effects of the strike of Southern Bell Telephone Company workers were not felt in Floyd county. H. M. Wilkinson, veteran store manager for the Inland Steel Company at Wheelwright, will retire April 1, but before that he will be manager for a few days of Inland's huge new store, the Community Shopping Center, which is replacing the company's old store. No '57, But Still A Flood Trash carried into Dewey Lake last week, such as this in the state boat dock area, creates an eyesore for park visitors as well as a monumental clean-up task for park employees.

Stranded at May Lodge by water which completely covered the road in the area of the boat dock, park guests were ferried, compliments of Park Manager George Barker, to cars parked in the amphitheatre parking lot.

At the mouth of Beaver Creek at Allen where, in the early 1900's, log jams were formed into rafts to be floated down river to the Ohio at Catelettsburg, now massive "log jams" form whenever high, swift water performs the task of cleaning up countless backyards of families upriver who either have no means of garbage disposal or, else, just don't care.

Crossing the flooded bottom which separated their home from the new Water Gap road was no problem for the Arthur Leach family last week as a canoe provided ideal transportation. Mr. Leach (in front) and son, Bryan, man the paddles. The passenger is Ronnie Robinson.

Lake "In Trouble" Biologist Tells Area Bass Fishing Club

"Dewey Lake is biologically in trouble," state fisheries biologist Ted Crowell told members of the Highlands Bassmasters at the club's meeting Monday night in which the problems of the reservoir, biological and otherwise, were discussed.

Crowell was one of three guest-speakers, including John Redwine, supervisor of the 7th Conservation District, and Dean Murray, Dewey reservoir manager for the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers, who discussed future plans and potentials of the lake.

Crowell, biologist for 26 Eastern Kentucky counties, discussed past efforts on the part of the state Department of Fish and Game to improve the balance of sport to rough fish and particularly the population of black bass in the lake. He pointed out that since 1961, a year after the lake was impounded, the fisheries department had tried virtually every method available to improve fishing, including poisoning, to reduce the overpopulation of large gizzard shad, netting, to thin the large number of un-desired crappie, the utilization of car-bodies as artificial cover or "structure" and several years of lake fertilization to enhance the growth of one-celled aquatic plant life. He stressed an oft-quoted fact which Redwine had pointed out earlier in the meeting, that "twice or three times more money per acre has been spent on Dewey Lake than any lake in the state."

In spite of these efforts, Crowell emphasized, no appreciable improvement in fishing quality had been experienced in the lake's history. The problem, he said, Crowell sees it, and one which he could offer no clear cut solution to, was the lake's inherent infertility. "I hate to discourage you boys," Crowell said to the group, "but besides having coal in this area, there's little else of benefit in the soil. To say that Dewey Lake is infertile would be the understatement of the year." He said that the fertilization program was of only short-term benefit and one which had become too expensive to be worthwhile.

Crowell also pointed to the siltation resulting from upper John's Creek mining operations as being harmful to the sport fish population and agreed with a proposal suggested by Dean Murray that a silt "catch" dam be constructed in the lake's headwaters. Another problem confronting Dewey, according to figures quoted by Crowell, is unusually heavy fishing pressure. Dewey, for example, had twice the number of fishermen (108,749) during the past season than either Fishtrap or Grayson, other Eastern Kentucky impoundments. He also suggested the raising of size limits for black bass and discouraged the taking of female bass during nesting season. "Catching nesting fish is committing suicide for a lake," Crowell commented.

Crowell and Redwine agreed to supply brood bass in support of a proposed club project to feed and raise bass in "pens" constructed at Dewey. The club hopes to overpopulate a length of several inches so that predators such as bluegill, catfish and other bass would not decimate young fish as they are released into the main body of the lake. Although vowing support of this as well as other club projects, such as the sowing of grass seed along lake banks to provide fish cover, spawning areas and promoting the growth of aquatic plants, Crowell told club members not to expect any projects to improve bass fishing greatly at Dewey Lake. Referring to the lake's chronic poor fishing and low sport fish population, Crowell said, "I really don't know what the answer is."

Dean Murray told the group that the Corps siltation study results would be completed by a length of several weeks, but he reassured the fishermen that a patrol boat would be on the water seven days a week and that "no skimming" zones would be strictly enforced. The club's meetings have been scheduled for the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. at the Porter Elementary School.

Gill, Trammel Nets Outlawed In Most Waters At Year's End

Frankfort, Ky., March 11—The state Fish and Wildlife Commission acted yesterday to eliminate gill and trammel nets as legal commercial fishing gear in all Kentucky waters except the Mississippi and Ohio rivers and their lakes directly connected with those rivers.

"The regulation will not become effective until Jan. 1, 1976," Commissioner Arnold Mitchell said, so that commercial fishermen will have one year to "phase out" their use of such nets. The commission also upped the cost of commercial fishing licenses for both residents and non-residents, Mitchell said, but included in the new fees (also effective Jan. 1, 1976) and will be 10-kennel tags for individual pieces of commercial fishing gear which formerly cost the fisherman from $2.50 to $6.00 each, depending upon the type of equipment used and kind of license held.

The commission also approved the addition of the slit basket, or slit trap, to the list of commercial fishing equipment legal in all Kentucky commercial fishing waters effective as quickly as the regulation can be filed and processed. The baskets, or traps, must, however, be no larger than 2 feet in diameter or square and measurement; the catch portion must have at least two openings between slats of 1 1/4" and there must be no crossbracing that will restrict the length of those openings to less than eight inches.

The commission's decision to change the commercial fishing regulations was based on recommendations made by the director of fisheries, Charles C. Bowers, Mitchell said.

Bowers' reasons for elimination of gill and trammel nets were his findings that they pose a present and potential danger to the rockfish population; that the use of such nets has cropped the large desirable commercial fishes in the smaller lakes and certain desirable target species, such as spoonbill in Lake Cumberland and fathead catfish in Nolin, causing a decline or a potential decline in business profit; that they have not removed significant numbers of rough fish in Barkley and Kentucky Lakes because of lack of interest on the part of fishermen, and a lack of good market for carp and buffalo and have concentrated on the catfishes to the exclusion of other species; that other gear can harvest the catfishes without the drawbacks of gill and trammel nets and that the small gear for buffalo and carp can be supplied by gill and trammel nets in the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers and by 3-inch mesh hoop nets, wing nets etc. in other commercial waters.

Physically handicapped youngsters from all over Kentucky will have the time of their lives while attending resident camp sessions at Camp Kysco (the Easter Seal) camp at Carrollton, and Camp Green Shores at Rough River.

Area's Highway Surfacing Cost Set at $645,450

Almost 40 miles of highway in this section of Kentucky are scheduled for resurfacing under the $9.5 million road program announced recently by Gov. Julian Carroll. The work in this area (Highway District 12) will cost $645,450.

Laid for improvement in this section are 11.8 miles on two sections of US 23, 8 miles of KY 428, 7.6 miles of KY 850, 3.9 miles of two sections of KY 7, 6.6 miles of KY 40, 4.2 miles of KY 1498, 1.2 miles on KY 80 and three miles on KY 194. Other parts of the program include $789,089 for resurfacing 39.2 miles of highway in Highway District 9, headquartered at Flemingsburg; $1,199,694 for resurfacing 36.9 miles of highways in District 10 (Jackson), and $468,086 for resurfacing 24.3 miles of highways in District 11 (Manchester). Carroll said the program is financed totally with state funds and affects only state-maintained highways. It does not include similar activities funded by special programs, such as County Road Aid, Rural Secondary or Municipal Aid. The 113 miles of shoulder treatment on other sections of I-64 and I-75 will provide resurfacing for worn shoulders. This is the first time that such sections have required such treatment since they were constructed.

"While a limited mileage on coal-haul roads is included in this program, the $9.5 million I have made available for a special coal-haul road program will not be used to fund any part of this program," Carroll said. He said that he recognizes the resurfacing needs of Commonwealth highways are more than $9.5 million can meet. If subsequent revenue review indicates more roads can be added to the program, the governor said he would approve them.

Council To Meet

The Prestonsburg City Council will meet at 6 o'clock tomorrow (Thursday) evening instead of the usual 7:30 p.m. hour.

Johnson Central Wins Regional

By C. "OLLIE" ROBINSON
The Golden Eagles of Johnson Central High School last Saturday night joined the "Sweet Sixteen" regional tournament champions who will play in the state trophy this week by downing Virgie in the finals of the 15th regional. Floyd county's representatives of the 58th district, Prestonsburg and Wheelwright, failed to make it to the finals. Wheelwright dropped its tournament-opening game at Mullins and Prestonsburg in the semi-finals fell to Virgie.

Wheelwright opened the regional tournament last Wednesday night, facing Gormie Collins, Mullins winners of the 58th district, and Wheelwright wasn't the same team they were in the district tournament. First of all, their high scorer, Jeff Rilely, had suffered an ankle injury in their last practice session. The Tigers of Mullins got off to a good start, leading at the end of the first half by 33 to 28. The two teams battled even terms in the third quarter, but in the fourth quarter everything went wrong for the Trojans. They lost Gary Anderson and Jeff Rilely via the foul route and Mullins outscored the Trojans by a margin of 27 to 14. The Trojans led, 75 to 55. Dewey Jamerson was high for the Trojans with 13 points. Bob Newman was the leading scorer for Mullins with 34. Mullins took a fantastic edge in the rebounds, 40 to 19. Johnson Central won over Beltry by the same score, 75 to 55, as the seasaw battle between the two clubs turned into a thumping. Beltry and Johnson Central battled on even terms in the first three quarters, Johnson Central leading by only one point going into the final period, but Johnson Central outscored the Pike countians in the fourth quarter by a 28 to 9 margin.

Thursday night, the Virgie Eagles won over Johnson Creek, 77 to 71. Virgie had to make a comeback in the second half to win after trailing at halftime, 45 to 38. The Prestonsburg Blackcats won their opener by defeating the Paintsville Tigers, 73 to 61. The Blackcats led, 36 to 23, and coasted on to the win. Robbie Herrick paced the Cats with 25 points, connecting on 10 field goals in 14 tries and 5 of 9 from the free-throw line. Gormie Collins tossed in 15 points. In the semi-finals Friday night Johnson Central again had to come from behind to win over Mullins, 73 to 57. The Golden Eagles were trailing, going into the fourth quarter, 41 to 40, but outscored Mullins 33 to 16 to wrap it up. The Prestonsburg Blackcats faced a fired-up band of Eagles from Virgie and the Blackcats led, 67 to 59. Donnie Eagles upset the Cats, 67 to 59. Donnie Eagles fired in 26 points and fought the boards for 12 rebounds. Virgie never trailed in the game, although tied twice. Virgie connected on 25 attempts from the field, hitting 60 percent while the Cats were hitting only 38.3 percent. Gormie Collins scored 14 points, Robbie Herrick and Flannery had 12 points each, David Harrington scored 10 points and grabbed 10 rebounds.

Johnson Central Eagles in the championship game won over Virgie, 92 to 80. Johnson Central will face Knott County Central tomorrow (Thursday) night at 7:30 at Freedom Hall in Louisville.

ALC Has Four Top Prospects for Next Basketball Season

Pippa Passes, Ky.—Jim Rose, coach of the Alice Lloyd College Eagles basketball team, said last week that he expects to sign four top area players for next season's effort. Rose said he would not disclose the names of the four players until they were signed, but said they were all "outstanding prospects."

Next season will be Rose's seventh at ALC. Rose, who was recently named director of the Knott County Biomedical Institute, Inc., said his new job would not conflict with his coaching duties at ALC. Rose resigned his teaching position at ALC before taking the job with Knott County. He has taught health, first aid, physical education and recreation courses at the College.

The coach said this year's impressive record of 18 wins and 6 losses is likely to be difficult to top next year but the coach cited two reasons why he feels prospects for next season are "extremely good."

First, seven team members will be returning next season. Among them are the teams second leading scorer and leading rebounder.

Second, the team is expected to play its entire season in ALC's new Physical Education-Community Recreation Building. Last season the team was undefeated on its home court, suffering all its losses on the road. Rose said part of the reason is that the team did not have an opportunity to play in a large modern gym at home.

The seven returning players are: Donnie Amburgey, of Carr Creek, Knott county, a 6-ft., 160-pound guard and graduate of the former Carr Creek High School; David Combs, of Bulan, Perry county, a 6-ft., 150-pound guard and graduate of M. C. Napier High School; Eric Fenner, of Washington, D. C., 6-4, 175-pound forward and a graduate of Roosevelt High School; Keith Gearheart, of Hueysville, Ky., in Floyd county, a 6-7, 195-pound center and a graduate of Allen Central High School; Gary Gibson, of Tompost, Knott county, a 5-8, 150-pound guard and a graduate of the former Knott County High School; Jess Hall, of Garrett, a 6-3, 215-pound forward and a graduate of Allen Central High School; Greg Roberts, of Harlot, Floyd, a 6-2, 175-pound forward and a graduate of Betsy Layne High School.

Leading scorer last season was Cliff Washington, a graduating sophomore from Ripley, Ohio. The 6-5 forward averaged 16.1 points per game.

Second leading scorer and leading rebounder is returning sophomore Keith Gearheart, who averaged 15.3 points and 18.5 rebounds per game. The ALC Eagles finished second in Eastern Division of the Kentucky Junior College Athletic Conference. The Eagles had an 8 win and 4 loss record in the conference, trailing Knott County College which had 10 win and 2 loss record.

John Y. Brown, Jr. Plans Business Development Program for State

By PATRICIA MELLEN
John Young Brown, Jr. likes challenge, and he likes success. Those attributes should help in his task, as the chairman of the governor's Economic Development Commission, of selling Kentucky. Brown is determined to show America's business community that Kentucky is a good place to do business. The Louisville lawyer, who guided Kentucky Fried Chicken's growth to the world's largest commercial food service operation, was recruited by Gov. Julian Carroll to revive the Commonwealth's Economic Development Commission. The governor called for the establishment of a 300 to 400-member advisory commission, whose purpose will be the creation of "an economic and social climate that will result in new jobs, more opportunities and a better way of life for all Kentuckians." Brown has accepted an unsalaried position directing the independent commission which Carroll has revitalized. Brown will work cooperatively with the state's Development Cabinet, which formulates the state's economic policies. Dr. Dee Akers, secretary of the Development Cabinet, anticipates that Brown's involvement could aid the state's industrial development efforts. "Both Gov. Carroll and I have high hopes that with Mr. Brown's help we can come up with an industrial development program that is second to none," Akers said. "All of us realize that this is a most opportune time to improve Kentucky's economic image."

With the help of his long-time associate, Commerce Commissioner Larry Townsend, Brown has begun planning his business development program. He envisions a cooperative role for his commission and the commerce department. "Townsend and his staff will establish the game plan, Brown said, with preliminary research and an evaluation of Kentucky's economic needs.

Deputy Commerce Commissioner James Nutter feels that Brown's salesmanship will be an asset to his department in widening Kentucky's reputation. "We're becoming aware of trade misperceptions," Kentucky businessmen selling abroad. John Y's selling expertise is invaluable and I appreciate his knowledge of foreign markets," Nutter said. "We need to sell the best product I know—and that's Kentucky and her people."

Brown will work with the commerce department to plan a sales campaign that commission members will use to attract business and industry to the Bluegrass state.

His selling job will begin in Kentucky, Brown says. The Commonwealth's business fraternity needs to be sold the development philosophy; his first aim is to change attitudes toward growth held by Kentuckians.

Brown is critical of Kentucky's past reluctance to seek business growth. "Kentucky's been sitting on its hands for 40 years, doing very little about attracting business. It's time to stop apologizing for Kentucky and start selling it."

The Economic Development Commission will do that through the "selling arm" of the Department of Commerce. Its members will study Kentucky's needs and assets and prepare a sell-Kentucky package to take to the country's corporate boardrooms.

Brown's wide-ranging business contacts are a ready advantage, he says. His years with Kentucky Fried Chicken led him to meetings with many of the country's top business leaders and these contacts will get Kentucky's message from the Townsend sales corps.

The sales message should be well-received, he adds. "Any company will find Kentucky an attractive location—and we've got a lot to sell," he asserts, adding a litany of the Commonwealth's assets: good highways, state parks, the quality of family life, the clear skies and unpolluted environment.

"We have one handicap in attracting executive families," Brown admitted. "Our stumbling block is our low educational quality." However, economic development could help improve Kentucky schools, he said, by providing a stronger tax base to support a better educational system.

While Brown talks expansively about improving Kentucky's economy, he realistically admits that development isn't an effortless process.

"It's not something coming to us," he asserts. "We've got to go get it."

His enthusiasm will have to be long-lasting, because Brown plans a comprehensive development program. "This isn't overnight growth; we're aiming for planned, selective growth. We need industries with a long-term potential to complement Kentucky's business and economic growth."

Nor does Brown anticipate immediate response to his development campaign. "This is a slow process. It may take a business several years to reach the decision to come to Kentucky." The commission's initial efforts will multiply by word of mouth, Brown foresees, as the business community spreads Kentucky's reputation.

Brown emphasizes that his goal is to establish a development program for the Commonwealth's future. "In fifteen years, we want Kentucky to be nationally known as a business leader. We want to lay the foundation for long-term growth."

Julian Carroll has started the momentum for the best thing that ever happened to Kentucky. "This is the start of the economy moving," said Brown, citing the benefits that Kentucky can realize from business and industrial expansion.

According to Brown, industry can bring in more jobs and create a wider tax base that will pay for increased governmental services.

However, Brown emphasizes the great beauty of Kentucky: "we'll be preserving resources. We want the business com- (See Story No. 7, Page 9)

Bell Asks Raise In Phone Rates; Cites Expenses

South Central Bell has filed new tariffs which increase the company's annual revenues by $33 million.

The company said the increases are to cover higher costs of providing telephone service and that more than half of it would go to pay taxes.

The major rate changes in the company's request to the Kentucky Public Service Commission include:

1. Higher rates for long distance calls within Kentucky, with the largest increases generally on calls requiring operator assistance.

2. Increases in basic telephone rates that range from $1.15 to $2.18 per month for residence service, and from $2.34 to $6.11 for business service. In Prestonsburg, Allen, Martin and McDowell, the one-party residence service rate would be $7.25 per month.

3. Increases in rates for certain optional equipment, residence extensions and service connections.

The company's request also includes proposals which would benefit all customers through a reduction in rates for local service of 50 cents per line per month. These proposals would change the method of charging for "Directory Assistance" calls, and increase the charge for local calls from coin telephones from 10 cents to 20 cents. Both would require equipment modifications, and could not be implemented immediately upon approval. But when they become effective, monthly rates would be reduced.

Telephone service will remain a bargain even under the new rates, Paul D. McCandless, vice-president in charge of Kentucky operations for the company, pointed out. "Even with this increase," he said, "the overall price of telephone service in Kentucky will have increased only one-third as much as consumer prices in general since 1960."

"The rates we're charging today are simply too low to cover today's costs of providing good quality telephone service," McCandless said.

"Our request is made in the best interests of Kentuckians who want good telephone service now and in the future. We're simply asking the commission to take a look at all of the higher costs of providing telephone service, and to set rates accordingly," he said.

McCandless emphasized that all the proposed increases are caused by increased costs, including the cost of borrowing money. He pointed out that last September, South Central borrowed for its five state operations $225 million for 40 years. "It cost the company 10.14 percent," he said. "And, of course, to be able to use borrowed money, we must be able to pay for it."

Trout Prospects Considered "Good"

Fishing for rainbow trout in Kentucky has been growing in popularity by leaps and bounds. In fact, some 15,000 trout anglers attest to the excellent fishing opportunities in the stocked creeks, lakes and tailwaters in the Commonwealth.

Two of the perennial hot spots for rainbows are Rock Creek in McCreary county and the tailwaters of Lake Cumberland in Russell, Clinton and Cumberland counties.

Even though the trout stocking program conducted by the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service is on a "put-and-take" basis, monster holdover rainbows are harvested every year.

The best area for big rainbows is the Cumberland tailwater, which provides trophy trout angling from Wolf Creek Dam to Burkeville and even farther downstream.

In fact, all state record rainbows have been harvested from this area. The present record tipped the scales at 14 pounds and 6 ounces. Many experienced trout anglers believe there are rainbows exceeding 15 pounds in the Cumberland tailwater.

Trout fishing to many simply means bait fishing with whole kernel corn, flavored cheeses or worms. However, trout fishing is also for the pros who cast artificial lures on fly rods or spinning rigs, and many times it is the artificial lure that accounts for the big trophy trout.

Trout prospects look encouraging for 1975. Several new waters are being added to the stocking lists, and a few potential "hot spots" are beginning to appear. The biggest new water will be the Barren River Lake tailwater. This area was stocked several years ago and is now back on the list by popular demand. Some experimental trout stockings will be tried this spring on Russell Fork in Pike county and on the Little Kentucky River in Trimble county. If the trout "take" and the fishermen respond, both streams may be added permanently to the stocking list.

Two of the better trout areas this year will be Green River tailwater and the new Laurel River Lake. Green tailwater has been stocked with rainbows for only two full years, but hefty hold-over fish up to three pounds were harvested by anglers this past winter. The new Laurel Lake, the deepest and perhaps coldest of the Commonwealth's big waters, is already yielding rainbows up to 18 inches.

The total number of rainbows to be stocked in "select" areas by the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources this year is 315,000, while the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service has allotted more than 54,000 adult rainbows and 17,000 sub-adults to the streams of the Daniel Boone National Forest.

The Department of Fish and Wildlife will stock 29 streams, six lakes and eight tailwaters. The Daniel Boone National Forest offers 11 streams with catchables and six remote streams which are stocked in the fall with sub-adults.

Trout fishermen in Kentucky must have a valid fishing license besides a trout stamp, which costs $2.25. There is no size limit on rainbow trout. The creel limit is eight fish per day or eight in possession.

White Amur, or Grass Carp, Illegal, Regarded a Threat

Frankfort, Ky., March 13—If you're looking for a new fish to add variety to a favorite lake, or a fish to control weeds in your farm pond, then don't consider the white amur, according to state fisheries director Charles C. Bowers. It's an "illegal" fish.

The white amur (Ctenopharyngodon idella), also known as the grass carp, is among a group of exotic or non-native fishes whose importation into or through Kentucky was recently banned by the state Fish and Wildlife Commission.

Among the half-dozen families of exotic fishes ruled illegal, the white amur poses the most significant threat to Kentucky waters at the present time, Bowers said. One specimen was reportedly recovered from a commercial commercial trout fisherman from Illinois who reported catching the east Asian species from sections of the Ohio River. Unconfirmed accounts purport that the white amur may already have established itself in the Mississippi River. The fish were believed to have gained access to the river from Arkansas during floods in 1972 and '73.

The white amur was introduced into this country in 1953 by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service and Auburn University for fishery research purposes because of its possible value in aquatic weed control. It has been used for this purpose by the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission, and more recently it has been promoted by some commercial fish farmers in a number of Southeastern states for both weed control and the table fish market.

Bowers agrees that the white amur feeds on aquatic vegetation and can be of some effectiveness in weed control but notes that the grass carp's diet is not entirely a plus. Like other species of carp, first introduced into North America from Europe in the 1880s, the white amur roots among bottom debris which results in muddy water. This makes the water less suitable for popular native species such as the black bass and crappie. The white amur's dining habits make it even more of a threat to waterfowl since it feeds on many of the same types of vegetation sought by "dabbling" ducks like the mallard, black duck and wood duck.

State fish and wildlife law enforcement officials point out that a conviction for possession or transportation of the white amur or other illegal species through Kentucky can result in confiscation of the fish and transporting vehicle and maximum fines of $200 and six months imprisonment.

At its December 1974 meeting, the Fish and Wildlife Commission ruled that the white amur poses a potential threat to existing state fisheries and amended a regulation banning five other families of non-native fishes to include the amur. The amended regulation has been in effect since Feb. 5. The other species which may not be possessed in Kentucky or brought through the state even for aquaria purposes are: piranha, piraya, piraie, caribe or tiger fish; Mexican banded tetra, Mexican minnow or Mexican tetra, sea lamprey; walking catfish, and snakeheads (Ophichthys or Channa) of Asia or Africa.

Democratic Women Report Successful Membership Drive

The Floyd County Democratic Woman's Club, started the new club year with a successful membership drive and several new projects. Richard Fitzpatrick, Floyd county juvenile court judge, was guest-speaker at the February meeting. At this meeting the club presented Mrs. Des Burchett a silver engraved tray for the two years that she served as president.

The club met March 12 at May Lodge, with Mrs. Ann Scutfield, president, presiding over the business meeting. Mrs. Scutfield and Mrs. Gwen Dingus attended the Winter Board meeting held at Democratic headquarters in Frankfort. Governor Julian Carroll was guest speaker at the luncheon. Membership cards were passed out and derby tickets were distributed for members to sell.

Mrs. Gwen Dingus gave a report on the progress of the Scholarship committee. Mrs. Scutfield explained that a few changes had been made in the score card which would be discussed and voted on at the next meeting.

Community to know we're interested in protecting Kentucky's environment."

Brown is determined to meet the governor's challenge and he is confident that his commission can do the job. "We're going to attract the best minds in Kentucky business. Three Women Serve As Solid Waste Landfill Inspectors

By MARVAGAY
Frankfort, Ky.—It takes courage, ruggedness, dedication and a sense of humor to be a female landfill inspector. The Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection employs three young women in the division of solid waste as landfill inspectors. Becky Noble, covering Eastern Kentucky, works out of the Hazard Field Office; Christie Shelby, who covers the Bluegrass area, is stationed in Frankfort; and Cecile Schultman, working in Western Kentucky, is headquartered in the Earlington Field Office.

The division's field personnel act as combination enforcement officers and public relations specialists. As one of them recently remarked, "It's not exactly what you dream of becoming as a little girl or one of your glamour professions. But, it is unique and challenging."

Inspections of landfills for violations of state regulations constitute only about half their work load. The inspectors also lecture civic groups, investigate open dumping, decipher engineering blueprints, attend hearings, help local governments improve their operations and smooth the wrath of outraged citizens.

Being a female in this line of work poses some unique problems, Mrs. Shelby said. "After you spend a considerable amount of time explaining what's wrong with a site and how to correct it, it's frustrating to turn your back to walk out and hear, 'Oh, what does she know. She's only a woman.'"

The standard cliché, "What's a nice little girl like you doing in a place like this," crops up frequently, as do letters sent to the office with the big "M" in front of a decidedly feminine name.

On the whole, the three women agreed everyone they dealt with was more than friendly and courteous. The work garb of the female inspectors is fairly standard—blue jeans, shirt, coat, sunglasses and boots which are usually two sizes too big and covered with mud. Basic cases and the performance of their duties include a clipboard and hard hat.

The women agree the hardest part of the job is getting used to it. "This is not exactly the type of work you discuss over the dinner table," Mrs. Shelby said. "A landfill's not too bad," she continued, "but we're always aware of that foul dump that lurks around the corner." At first, Mrs. Shelby said, the sickening stench and sight of mounds of rotting garbage and animal carcasses bothered her. But, she soon hardened to the spectacle and now is able to make an investigation which entails rummaging through the refuse.

"The thing that really upsets you," Mrs. Shelby said, "is seeing children out in the dump looking for food." Although she sees some desperate people, Mrs. Shelby believes most people are wasteful and throw away an astounding amount of useful materials.

When especially difficult problems arise, the division of solid waste sends out another woman—Caroline Halght, one of the division's two sanitary engineers. She covers the entire state, assisting field personnel with tough problems requiring special training. To an outsider, solid waste may be strictly a man's world. But, as Mrs. Shelby said, "We females are doing quite well for ourselves, breaking out of the traditional roles and stereotypes and establishing new fields of endeavor."

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINION

An Attorney General's opinion states that a Board of Education student attendance policy which provides for automatic failure in any class missed more than eight times in a term, regardless of the reason for absences, or whether or not the absences are excused or unexcused, is arbitrary. The opinion notes that, in light of the recent Supreme Court decision on student suspension requiring due process in certain suspension cases, the arbitrary nature of the policy seemed to be an unconstitutional effort to encourage school attendance.

Under federal law, youths 16 or older may work at most jobs in manufacturing, warehousing, laundries, drycleaning plants, hospitals and restaurants, except those declared hazardous by the Secretary of Labor.

U.K. Announces Sturgill Award

The William B. Sturgill Award for Outstanding Contributions to Graduate Education was established March 10 by the executive committee of the University of Kentucky board of trustees.

In 1966 the Trustees established the Philip D. and Elsie O. Sang Award for Outstanding Contributions to Graduate Education. Mr. Sang supported the award for seven years. The new Sturgill Award replaces Sang's.

Because of the value of the award to the UK graduate program, Mr. Sturgill, chairman of the UK Board of Trustees, has agreed to support a similar award to be given at the end of the 1975 spring semester and then annually for an unspecified period.

Procedures and criteria used in the selection of the recipient will be the same as those used for the Sang Award. The award recognizes annually the member of the graduate faculty who has made the most outstanding contributions to graduate education at UK. Recipients are chosen by a committee of graduate faculty members.

Mini-Home Regulations Revamped

By JAN MANNIS
FRANKFORT, Ky.—The Certificates of Need and Licensure Board is tightening control over family care homes (mini-homes) by revamping many of the regulations governing them. The new regulations will be effective in June, 1975.

A family care home is defined as one that must provide 24-hour protective and personal care services for two or three individuals who, because of impaired capacity for self-care, elect or require a protective environment. The individuals cannot have an illness, injury or disability which requires constant medical care and skilled nursing services.

The board voted unanimously to require that existing family care homes conform to all standards within one year. The exact time schedule and required plan for specific improvements will depend on the board's consideration of individual situations.

In the past, family care homes were required to meet only those standards which related to life-endangering situations. As a result, many homes did not comply with all standards, while others did.

The board now requires that family care homes must be in compliance with the standards when applying for a license for the first time.

The board also requires home operators to attend at least one training program per year for family care home operators as offered or approved by the Department for Human Resources.

The courses begin this summer and will include everything an operator needs to know about taking care of residents' needs.

The board expanded the definition of the family care home, distinguishing between a family care home and a boarding home. Boarding homes are not licensed and do not provide a "protective" environment for individuals.

The clarified definition will make it easier for the investigating staff of the Department for Human Resources to classify a home. This can be done only by seeing and talking to the residents themselves.

Other new decisions include:
—A family care home may not be located in a house trailer or motor home.

—Accident reports on residents now must be written and a copy kept on file in the home. The original must be sent to the Division of Licensing and Regulation, Bureau for Administration and Operations, DHR. This division is responsible for investigating licensed facilities in Kentucky. The accident report will help in the monitoring of all family care home facilities.

—Phone numbers of a hospital, ambulance service and physician for emergencies must be "posted by the telephone in large, legible print." In the past, the regulations stated only that the numbers be "available."

—A resident of a home may self-administer prescription medicines only with the written instructions of the attending physician, and a record must be maintained.

—Each resident shall have individual toilet accessories, such as a clean wash cloth and towel, toothbrush, brush and comb, and a cupboard for storing personal belongings. In the past, these items had to be "available" to resident but did not have to be personal possessions.

—To meet safety requirements, approved basements constructed for sleeping quarters must have an outside door.

The board removed the word "personal" from the term "family personal care home" to avoid confusion with the personal care home, licensed to provide services to four or more residents.

'Charting' Meet
Slated at Lodge

The Kentucky Department of Commerce will host an informal meeting for local officials, business and civic leaders of the Big Sandy area from 1:30-3:30 p.m. Thursday, March 20, at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Resort Park, here.

The meeting, part of the commerce department's "Charting a Course for Kentucky" series, will be a get-acquainted session for state officials and local leaders and an opportunity to exchange ideas regarding the area's economic and industrial development.

Kentucky's new commerce commissioner, Larry G. Townsend, will preside.

Townsend has already visited several of Kentucky's Area Development Districts as means to determine the advantages as well as the problems that each community has in terms of industrial development potential.

"I want the input of the business and civic leaders as to what their priorities are," Townsend said, "and for them to tell me how they feel the office of commissioner of commerce can best help them."

"Now is the time to begin some positive thinking and to rekindle enthusiasm for locating new industry and achieving further economic growth in Kentucky communities," he added.

Furniture and Wood Products Made By Mountain Craftsmen

By ARTHUR B. LANDER, JR. (Travel Writer)
Woodworking—whether it be cabinetmaking, furniture woodcrafting or even "courthouse steps whittling"—has for generation to generation been a strong tradition in the Cumberland plateau of Eastern Kentucky. And the abundant hardwoods of the Appalachians have provided mountain craftsmen with perhaps the choicest wood on earth to work with.
In an age of automation, the old-time craftsmanship of the Appalachians survives at Stanton Woodcraft, in Powell county. Craftsmen there still make furniture as useful as it is beautiful. Rocking chairs, knee-hole desks, shaving mirrors of early American design, principal and Shaker furniture, wooden bowls, and fruit sculptured from walnut, cherry and cedar, are among the products made and sold at Stanton Woodcraft, east of Stanton on Highway Ky-15.

Formed in 1973, Stanton Woodcraft is an economic development project of the Kentucky River Foothills, a federally funded Community Action Agency. It serves the counties of Estill, Clark, Powell and Madison, providing jobs for veterans and disadvantaged mountain craftsmen. The non-profit business is a complete operation that encompasses the purchasing of raw lumber; drying; grading and selection of materials for production; finishing; and marketing.
The handcrafted wood products are wholesaled to craft, gift and interior design shops in Kentucky. They are for sale in the gift shops at Kentucky Dam Village State Resort Park and Fort Boonesborough State Park, and at the rest stop at Beaver Dam on the Western Kentucky Parkway. During the summer, a sales outlet is open at Natural Bridge State Resort Park.

Choice Appalachian hardwoods—cherry, wormy chestnut, walnut, tulip poplar, butternut and maple—are used for the ladder-back chairs, mifflin stands, Charlotte chairs—a padded dining chair in traditional early American style—dining tables, hutches, cabinets, cutting boards, bookends and beds. The furniture is constructed with impeccable care and is completed with a coat of sealer and lacquer and hand rubbed with furniture wax. The ladder-back chairs are hand seated with twisted corn shucks.

Stanton Woodcraft's own outlet shop sells wood finishes and cabinetmaker's polish. Baskets made by Indians on Cherokee reservations, beeswax candles and wooden hand-painted birds—hawks, owls and songbirds—are among the craft items. Scenes of Appalachian and the Red River Gorge, by photographer Warren Brummer of Berea, stand alongside the handmade wood products of Kentucky's proud artisans.

Visitors are welcome to tour the production facilities and browse through the outlet shop weekdays, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; and Sundays, 1 to 3 p.m. From January through March, Stanton Woodcraft is closed on week-ends.

Troutt Tells Plans For Child Programs

Teachers of exceptional children in ROPES Region-41 were participants in an inservice meeting held March 8 at the Clark Elementary School. The meeting was coordinated by the region staff and was attended by 48 special classroom teachers, speech therapists, home instruction teachers, and supervisors.

Project Lead, the program for exceptional children, is funded by Title VI B, ESEA, and Reo Johns, executive director, ROPES Region 11, has submitted a project application for continuation of funds for the project for fiscal year 1976.

Dr. George Troutt, assistant superintendent of public instruction for the Bureau of Education for Exceptional Children, discussed the comprehensive state plan for improvement in the areas of identification, location and placement of exceptional children. He also discussed the planned expansion of his bureau and told the group that the visually and hearing handicapped programs are coming into the Bureau of Education for Exceptional Children.
Two consultants from the Department of Special Education in the College of Education at the University of Kentucky also appeared on the program. Dr. James McLaughlin, director of Learning Disability Programs, discussed methods of identifying characteristics of a school system and stressed that these must be taken into consideration when initiating a resource room or mainstreaming in order to develop and implement the best possible program. Dr. Joseph W. Helmick, director of Programs for Speech Pathology and Audiology, discussed causes of speech problems and methods of diagnosing them. He pointed out that program visibility is important in order to attain the maximum effect from speech programs in public schools.
ROPEs staff members appearing on the program were Audrey Pratt, regional special education supervisor, and Shirley Beard, administrative assistant.

Don't Forget Trees

Spring planting season is upon us again. And while you are busy filling out your seed orders for gardens, crops and flowers, don't forget your trees.

Because trees take a longer period of time to show a profit than other crops many people tend to neglect planting trees. Nevertheless, trees are an important part of Kentucky's resource and economy.
Kentucky has over one million acres of idle or underproductive land which is better suited for producing trees than any other crop.

Although the profit from trees is not immediate, you derive benefits from the trees while they are growing. Such benefits include: erosion control, soil building, wild-life food and cover, improved hunting and beautification. Also, an investment in trees will pay a high rate of untaxable interest.
The Kentucky Division of Forestry has three established nurseries to supply you with tree seedlings which annually produce from 11 to 15 million trees. The state produces five species of pine (Shortleaf, Loblolly, Virginia, white and Scotch) which are well suited for growing in Kentucky, and about ten species of hardwoods (black locust, black walnut, yellow-poplar, white oak, sweetgum and others).

A special wildlife packet is also available consisting of: 10 Autumn Olive, 10 yellow-poplar, 10 white ash, 10 black locust, 5 Chinese chestnut, 15 Scotch pine, 10 white pine, 10 Virginia pine, 10 shortleaf pine, and 10 loblolly pine, for a total of 107 trees.

All species except Autumn Olive and Chinese chestnut are available in bundles of 1000, 500, or 250 trees. Most seedlings sell for $15.00 per 1000 trees, the exceptions being Scotch pine and yellow-poplar at $20.00 per 1000 and white oak and black walnut at $25.00 per 1000 trees. The wildlife packet sells for $5.50.

The West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company operates a matching program in Floyd, Johnson, and Lawrence counties whereby the company will pay for half of tree seedlings you order. Simply order your entire amount and pay for half.

To order your trees contact the Kentucky Division of Forestry in Prestonsburg at 886-8562. Forestry personnel are available to inspect your planting site to offer recommendations at no extra charge.

Youth groups such as FFA, 4-H and scouts are eligible to obtain all their tree seedlings free, paid for entirely by the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company.

Coal Company Loses Access To Mine Site

Special Judge Ben Mann, of Salversville, ruled last week that a Floyd county coal operator may not use as a means of access to his operation a road which is claimed as a private road.

The route in litigation is on the Mitchell Branch of Tinker Fork of Mud Creek, in the headwaters of which the Sterling Hamilton Coal Co., Inc. has begun mining operations. Willard Johnson, owner of an 11-acre tract downstream from the mine, claimed the dirt road and a wooden bridge to his house were built by him and his neighbors in 1970; that the bridge and passway have been used solely as an access route to his residence and, with his permission, for two of his neighbors, and is, therefore, a private passway.

The road dispute got into the courts in late February when the coal company procured from the circuit clerk a temporary restraining order to prevent Johnson from interfering with its use of the route.

When the hearing on the injunction was slated Circuit Judge Hollie Conley disqualified, and Judge Mann was assigned to the case. He overruled the company's motion for temporary injunction and dissolved Hamilton's restraining order, then granted Johnson a temporary injunction forbidding the coal company from using, until further orders of the court, the passway over Johnson "in any manner that is inconsistent with prior use of the passway," which use, the order held, was limited to specific residents living above (upstream from) the defendant to reach their homes by private vehicles or small pickup trucks. The coal company also was enjoined from widening, damaging or in any way altering defendant's passway or bridge and from traveling over the road with any vehicle larger than an automobile or small pickup truck.

Johnson was represented by Charles Dahlenburg, of the Appalachian Research & Defense Fund.

Meanwhile, the Floyd fiscal court has adopted a resolution to take steps toward adding the road to the county highway system. If this is done, the road will be open to the public, including the coal company's equipment.

Lead Poisoning Prevention Tips

Frankfort, Ky.—Children can die from "pois," an unusual craving to eat paint, clay, chalk or similar substances.

They also can die from accidentally tasting these substances, since many of them contain lead. Lead, being highly toxic, can cause brain damage and sometimes death.

The 1974 General Assembly took action to help stop lead poisoning in Kentucky by passing a statewide prevention program. This program provides for prevention, screening, diagnosis and treatment of lead poisoning. The law also provides for research, educational epidemiological and clinical activities relating to lead poisoning. The Department for Human Resources' (DHR) Bureau for Health Services is responsible for administering the program.

March 16-22 is Poison Prevention Week. DHR has provided some general rules to help prevent lead poisoning:

- Use only interior paints inside the home;
- Scrape flaking paint and plaster chips from the walls and sweep them into a garbage can;
- Use unleaded paint or stain on children's furniture and homemade toys;
- Improperly glazed ceramic ware may be a source of lead poisoning. Hobbyists should be familiar with the lead content used in glaze.

For further information on lead poisoning or other poison prevention contact DHR's office of Pesticides and Consumer Safety, 564-6537.

LRC Rules Out East-West Train Service in Kentucky

Frankfort, Ky.—Creation of an east-west passenger rail service in Kentucky is economically unfeasible, a Legislative Research Commission (LRC) research report concludes.

Such service would require massive state subsidy for operating costs plus substantial capital expenditures for new passenger cars, station improvements and track repairs, the report says.

The report was prepared by LRC staff members Brian Kiernan and Karen L. Garrison as a result of Senate Resolution 19 of the 1974 General Assembly. The resolution called for a study of the possibility of establishing service that would be part of the federally-funded Amtrak system.

Copies of the report are available free upon request from the Legislative Research Commission, State Capitol, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601.

At present, there is no east-west rail service in Kentucky except for a few freight lines. East-west passenger service, if it were to be established, would most likely use existing track which runs from Ashland to Paducah via Mount Sterling, Winchester, Lexington, Louisville and Elizabethtown, the report says.

"Under Amtrak's charter a minimum of two-thirds of the operations deficit of a new service must be provided by the state or governmental agency requesting such service. Thus, the Commonwealth of Kentucky could expect to have to fund up to $1.5 to $2 million per year if Amtrak were to operate an east-west rail service," the report adds.

"Furthermore, even if the rail service were implemented, Amtrak would not be obliged to continue the service after the first year's operation. Thus, the state would not only have to subsidize the implementation of the service, but would have no guarantee of its continued existence," the report says.

Any subsidy probably would require action by the governor and the General Assembly, which is scheduled to meet next in January 1976.

CLIFFORD B. LATTA

FOR STATE SENATE

A lifelong Democrat and native of Eastern Kentucky, Clifford B. Latta has been an attorney in Prestonsburg for 20 years, beginning practice with his grandfather, the late Congressman Andrew J. May in 1955.

He was Prestonsburg City Attorney for four years and served in the State Senate from 1968 to 1972.

As your Senator, he was Chairman of the Public Utilities and Transportation Committee, the Special Committee on Education, the Special Committee on the State Employees Merit System, and a member of several other committees.

He worked for and sponsored bills on education, black lung, crime prevention, natural resources, and good government.

His experience and legislative know-how are needed now, at a time when Eastern Kentucky is at the crossroads.

There is new prosperity in Eastern Kentucky, but there are also those who would like to take it away and will try to take it away in the next Legislature.

You need Clifford Latta speaking out for you in Frankfort at this critical time.

Elect A Strong Voice For Eastern Kentucky
Democratic Primary, May 27

(Paid For by Candidate)

Technical considerations, competition, federal policy and public opinion also tend to discourage creation of an east-west passenger route.

"Although tracks do exist along an east-west route in Kentucky, most are not used frequently and none have been used for passenger cars for several years. A great deal of repair would probably be necessary before these tracks would meet safety regulations for passenger rail service," the report says.

"The availability of (passenger cars) is a current operating problem for Amtrak. The majority of the Amtrak locomotive fleet is more than 21 years old.

"Passenger cars ordered in 1973 are expected to be delivered in early 1975, resulting in a year-and-a-half to two-year delay for new rolling stock. Even if Amtrak could immediately obtain all the new rolling stock that it would like to have, it does not have the capital resources to purchase the equipment," the report adds.

"Very little is known about the availability and the state of repair of railroad stations along the east-west Kentucky route. It is highly probable that at a minimum, stations which still exist are unlikely to be fit for immediate occupancy. Substantial capital expenditures would be necessary to provide adequate station facilities," the report says.

East-west rail service in Kentucky would have to compete with the state's existing highway system, cross-state bus service and proposed commuter air service authorized by Senate Bill 263 of the 1974 General Assembly. S. B. 263 authorized the Kentucky Department of Transportation to establish a pilot project that would provide commuter service between five or more airports across the state.

The report notes a 1972 Louis Harris poll that showed the American people at best were ambivalent about passenger rail service. Although an energy crisis has increased ridership on most forms of public transportation since the poll was taken, "by the summer of 1974, the American people were showing signs of reverting to their former transportation habits," the report says.

Finally, the report quotes from a 1974 speech by former U. S. Secretary of Transportation Claude S. Brinegar saying that Amtrak should concentrate its activities in densely populated areas of the country and not attempt to compete with air, automobile and bus transportation in other areas.

Judge Orders Youth Returned To His Classes

Reinstatement of an expelled Martin county high school student to his classes last Thursday by U. S. District Judge H. David Hermansdorfer echoed a recent Supreme Court decision affecting student rights.

Expelled from Sheldon Clark High School Feb. 14 when he was accused of selling drugs to another student, and denied readmission, although he claims, his mother and two attorneys requested readmission on Feb. 19, Feb. 24, Feb. 28 and March 6, the student, Uddell Scott, 17, filed a complaint in U. S. court by his mother, Caldonia Scott. The action was instituted in their behalf as a class action by Kay Adrian and John Rosenberg, attorneys for the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund here.

Named as defendants were Wilburn Goble, principal of Sheldon Clark High School; Sheldon Clark, superintendent of Martin county schools; and members of the Martin County Board of Education, Holmes Cassidy, chairman, Goldie Kirk, Glenn Morse Booth, Howard Castle and Howard Price, members.

The complaint alleged that the expulsion action was in violation of the 14th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution and in violation of Kentucky law. It was pointed out that young Scott, a high school junior, maintained a high B average in his school work and until the Feb. 14 incident had had no difficulty with school authorities.

Plaintiffs also claimed that Scott was expelled without notice and a hearing. They cite KRS 158.150, which provides that "the board of education of any school district may expel any pupil for misconduct as defined in this section, but such action shall not be taken until the parent, guardian or other person having legal custody or control of the pupil has had an opportunity to have a hearing before the board."

Plaintiffs alleged that on Feb. 14, immediately after a conversation in the office of school principal Goble, the principal "summarily removed plaintiff from the school, drove the plaintiff within several blocks of his home in Inez, Ky., and left him there. Judge Hermansdorfer's order temporarily restrains the defendants, their agents, employees and persons acting in connection with them from prohibiting the plaintiff from attending school until defendants have provided him with a due process hearing. Plaintiffs also seek damages.

Opinions from Office of Attorney General

Everett L. Miller, Wolfe county attorney, stated recently that the Wolfe county fiscal court has refused to levy a gross receipts utility tax for school purposes, even though the county board of education has taken all the steps required by law to request the tax. It is the opinion of the Attorney General's office that, if the school board complied with all statutes governing the petitioning for such a tax, the county fiscal court is required to levy the tax within 15 days of the request. For the fiscal court to refuse the tax levy would be wholly illegal and an act of bad faith, the opinion held.

Lawrence Casner, of Madisonville, indicated that his city has a water problem which the city council seeks to alleviate by constructing a lake in Hopkins county. This plan would involve right of way purchase and condemnation. Mr. Casner proposed a solution of constructing a water line along public roads to take advantage of the Green River watershed, thus doing away with the necessity of gaining right of way or condemnation. He asked if the city has the legal power to go ahead with its plan when there is no necessity for it. Since Madisonville's form of government has the power to condemn, the office of the Attorney General held that the city has the right to follow this course of action, whether or not another solution exists. Unless it can be proved that the council acted fraudulently, in bad faith or was grossly abusive of its power, the action to condemn land cannot be overturned by the courts.

William E. Mitchell, attorney for the city of Clay, wrote that his city is planning to encourage a face-lift for several buildings downtown by contributing $10 for every $100 obtained by the property owners. He requested an opinion as to whether or not city funds could be used in such a way. The Attorney General's opinion held that a fifth-class city possesses no statutory authority for the face-lifting of private buildings. The Kentucky Constitution expressly prohibits a city from apportioning money for any corporation or individual, especially city money for non-governmental use.

Albert H. Thomason, mayor of the city of Leitchfield, asked if he had the authority to call for an audit of the police judge's records if the question of possible irregularity should arise. The Attorney General's office ruled that no statute empowers a mayor to do this, although he may require written information from any city officer upon any duties relating to that office, such as the handling of fines, forfeitures and costs. However, the city council is the only agency with authority to procure audits. An annual audit is mandatory, and all funds handled by the police judge must be paid into the city treasury.

Holy Week and Easter Services Announced

The passion, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ will be observed next week in a series of Holy Week and Easter services in the Floyd County Catholic Parish in Prestonsburg and Martin. On Holy Thursday (March 27) the Evening Mass of the Lord's Supper and foot-washing will be held at Saint Juliana Church, Martin at 6:30 p.m. The Good Friday celebration of the Lord's Passion will take place at 6:30 p.m. at Saint Juliana Church in three parts: Liturgy of the Word, Veneration of the Cross, Holy Communion.

The Easter Vigil will be celebrated Saturday, March 29, beginning at 11 p.m. at Saint Juliana with four parts: the Service of Light, Liturgy of the Word, Liturgy of Baptism, Liturgy of the Eucharist.

The Easter Sunday Masses will be at 9 a.m. at Our Lady of the Way Hospital Chapel in Martin and at 10:30 a.m. at Saint Theodore Church in Prestonsburg. The schola cantorum will sing at the 10:30 a.m. liturgy, and Easter praises will follow the service. Easter foods will be blessed during the Mass.

Poke Heads the Greens List

Throughout Appalachia poke heads list as the most popular and widely used of all wild greens. Many people begin looking for their first shoots as soon as they hear the first love songs of the toads. My old family doctor advised: "Everyone should eat at least two messes of poke greens in the spring. They're worth all the medicine you can take!"

Poke is rich in iron, phosphorus and Vitamin C. It is a good spring cleanser of the clogged system—a thinner of the sluggish winter blood.

Try the following mess of greens and you'll feel like biting a nail in two after eating a goodly portion. Gather the poke shoots when crisp and tender, mix with plantain if available, or with wild beet. Boil the greens until tender, then drain off the water. They fry them in hot grease. After you have let them cool down, break three raw eggs in the simmering greens and mix well. Serve with pepper sauce or vinegar.

FRIED POKE STALKS. Fix these properly and they taste almost as delicious as fresh fried fish. Slice the stalks into lengths of about three inches, then roll them in a mixture of meal, salt and pepper. Fry in hot grease until brown.

Poke is one of our most valuable plants and should be let grow in all waste places or unused spots about the farm.

Its berries dry on the branches in the fall and feed the bird during cold winters. Bluebirds and cardinals are fond of lining on poke berries in winter.

Poke plants are the first to take root and grow in stripmined lands. The plants are robust and hardy and will grow on dry hillsides as well as around barnlots and pastures.

Poke also has valuable medicinal properties and when properly prepared is a good tonic and helpful in cases of rheumatism. It has narcotic and tonic values and is superior for cleansing the system.

Is poke poisonous? This is a highly controversial question. Some say, Never eat the young poke shoots raw or they will poison you. Cooking destroys any poison they might contain. Others say the berries are poisonous, but birds eat them all winter long. Perhaps the fall winds dry out the juicy berries and eliminate the poison. The berries have been widely used in the south to make "pokeberry wine," as a treatment for rheumatism and bursitis. The ripe berries are placed in a stone vessel and covered to let fermentation take place. The juice is strained off and sweetened for use as a medicine. So the berries of poke surely can't be overly poisonous. Perhaps the roots are more poisonous, but I've seen my father cut them into small pieces and put these in whiskey for use as a remedy for rheumatism. He would take two tablespoonsful at the time and it cured his rheumatism.

In using the young shoots of poke, it is wise to boil them well and then fry in grease. They are absolutely safe to eat then.

My grandmother always said, "If you eat poke sallet in the spring, it will give new life to your blood." The young shoots should be broken off at the ground level, and no part of the root should be taken with them. The shoots are safe to eat until they are over a foot high.

I predict this year will be a banner year for gathering poke to eat and to can for winter use. Perhaps each community should get together and elect a "poke warden" to supervise the distribution and supply, so that each family will be assured of its fair share of this most delectable wild plant.

An Easter Thought

There seems so much we take for granted and yet so much we appreciate. There is no time to waste in wonder and yet sometimes we have to wait. When Easter comes we don't remember what Easter day is really for. And most of us just don't remember the crucifying of our Lord. It seems so strange that all we think of is putting on our brand-new clothes. When all the time we should be thinking of the glorious day when Christ arose.

When at times we have no answers, we go to Him—the Lord above—And ask Him for the help and guidance that He provides along with love. The love that made Him die so lonely upon the Cross of Calvary.

The love that made Him die so humbly for the sake of humanity. We worship Him with admiration and know his love is beyond compare.

And when we are alone and troubled, we call on Him and He is there. Some of us, we take for granted the love He gives us as divine.

And only remember the art of praying when we are having troubled times. Yes, the story of Easter is often forgotten when Easter day comes 'round each year.

But if you will only try to remember that Christ above is always near.

I'm sure that your Easter will be much better and no one can say that you forgot That Easter is for Christ and His dying and keeping in mind an Easter Thought.

OPINIONS
Of Attorney General

F. T. Burns, superintendent of schools for Daviess county, requested an opinion concerning a student who violated a school district regulation by attending one school while living in the attendance area of another. The student has refused to transfer, and his father has secured a court order making the student's aunt his guardian "for school purposes only." The office of the Attorney General held that a student who defies the authority of the school district may be suspended and, after a hearing before the school board, may be expelled. It is also this office's opinion that the appointment of a guardian "for school purposes only" is invalid and the school board is not legally bound to recognize such an order.

Rep. James B. Yates, of Louisville, asked whether or not taxes on motor fuels could be used to repair roads in unincorporated areas of Jefferson county. These roads have not been accepted into the county road system, although some have been in use for 30 years. The Attorney General's office wrote that revenue from such taxes may not be used for road repair anywhere other than an "unincorporated urban place" of 2,500 population so designated by the 1970 census. There are, however, two ways an area can gain help before the 1980 census and they are (1) to incorporate the area, which would make it eligible for benefits at the beginning of the second fiscal year following its incorporation, and (2) to get the fiscal court to accept the roads as county roads.

Bob C. Whitaker, commissioner of the Department of Public Information, inquired as to the legality of amending the state seal for use as a distinguishing mark on a state agency's publication. It is the opinion of the Attorney General's office that only the General Assembly has the power to alter the form or description of the Commonwealth's seal. Even so, it appears that the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA) seeks to use only the encompassing outer circle of the seal. Since the KHEAA is not a private concern seeking to use the state's seal for commercial purposes, use of the outer circle would merely show that the department is a state agency; therefore, no statutory prohibition against such use exists.

Louis E. Arnold, city attorney for Fort Thomas, asked if policemen could enter private, off-street parking facilities provided for apartment residents and their guests and place citations on cars not bearing city stickers. The Attorney General's office replied that such action is illegal since these parking spaces are not for general public use, but are in the same legal category as a private driveway or garage.

Surface Mining Surveillance Gets Federal Go-Ahead in State

Frankfort, Ky.—The Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection has received a long-awaited federal go-ahead to start an analysis of the effectiveness of using satellite and aircraft data systems for surveillance of surface mining in Western Kentucky.

According to John S. Hoffman, secretary of the department, the state-federal effort is being funded by $98,587 from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and $34,643 from the state environmental protection department.

Hoffman said a variety of statistical techniques will be used to develop detection and inspection strategy models. "We hope," said Hoffman, "these models will provide basic tools for a comprehensive analysis of the cost and benefits of the application of remote sensing to inspection and monitoring of surface mining operations."

If the cost benefit analysis suggests that satellites are an economically effective link in a total mine inspection system, guidelines will be developed for use of the remote sensing system in Kentucky.

Hoffman said, however, that if the system was eventually used as part of the state's total surface mine inspection program, it would not take the place of reclamation inspectors now employed in the eastern and western Kentucky coalfields. The system would be used as a supplement to aid the inspectors.

As part of the research effort, these firms will assist in date gathering, model design and photo interpretation. The firms are MATHEMATICA, Inc. of Princeton, New Jersey; Ford Bacon and Davis Mining Engineers of New York; and Environmental Research Institute of Ann Arbor, Michigan. In 1973 and 1974, MATHEMATICA and Ford, Bacon and Davis collaborated with the state environmental protection department and the Appalachian Regional Commission to complete a study of surface mining systems in the eastern Kentucky coalfields.

The Office of Planning and Research in the state environmental protection department is coordinating Kentucky's portion of the research project.

Extension Service News

By JOHN E. SPARKS
County Extension Agent

The first in a series of five Horticulture sessions were held this week. Emphasis was placed on types of lawn grass, seeding practices, and general lawn maintenance.

The varieties of bluegrass recommended were Kentucky grown (common), Kenblue or Winsor favorite for well managed lawns. Mixing with fine leaf fescue, 50 pct. weight of bluegrass for shady areas.

The best time to seed the lawn is between August 15-September 15 with fall seeding not having the competition of weeds like the spring seeding. Spring reseedings need to be done before April 1.

The Bluegrass favor the PH around 6.2-7.0 doesn't perform well on acid soils or low fertility. For a better looking lawn apply one pound of actual nitrogen per 1,000 sq. ft., starting in March, then September and November.

Those in attendance for the first session were Patsy Brown, Mary Jane Brown, Joe Labell, John K. Pitts, Carol Lee Bailey, Phillip Price, Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Valentine, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Clyde B. Burchett, Mr. and Mrs. Dallas B. Sammons, Garnet Fairchild, Mr. and Mrs. Elton McGary, Ronald K. Cameron.

The second in a series of horticulture meetings will be held Thursday, March 20, 7:15 p.m.-9:15 p.m. at the Prestonsburg Community College (Room 148, Johnson Building). The topic this week will be "Basic Principles of Landscaping," using ground covers, vines, and other problems of landscaping. Robert Stone, horticulture agent of Ashland, will present the program.

The following sessions will be dealing with diseases of the home landscape and their control: March 27, Designing the Landscape with Flowers, their Selection and Management; April 3 and the last session, April 10, will be on Controlling the Insects of the Home Landscape.

Kentucky Afield

By JOHN WILSON
Guest Writer

Before you fillet that whopper you're going to catch this year, do a little checking. There's a possibility that you may have a new state record fish.

The Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources maintains records for 27 species of fish, ranging from the largest, a 100-pound blue catfish, to the smallest, a one-pound warmouth. Kentucky's list contains one world record, the 11-pound, 15-ounce smallmouth caught by David L. Hayes at Dale Hollow Lake in 1955.

According to Mike Smith, who compiles and maintains the department's list of records, there are several which could very likely be broken this year. Any bowfin over three pounds, four ounces would be a new state record, as would a channel catfish over 15 pounds, six ounces. Smith also feels that there are larger rock bass than the one pound, seven ounce record and larger sauger than six pounds, one ounce lurking in Kentucky waters.

Another record that could fall is for rockfish. There have been reports of fish larger than the current 44-pound, four-ounce record, but none with the verification necessary to be entered as an official record.

Of course, it is possible for any record to be broken, so if you catch a larger-than-usual fish of any species, it would be a good idea to have the catch verified and report it to the department. The fish must be weighed on "official" scales—any scales legal for trade will do—and at least two witnesses must verify the weight and measurements of the fish. Send the signed statements, along with a photograph of the fish, to Mike Smith, Division of Public Relations, Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601.

Below are the current records. You might want to keep this list in your tackle box for quick reference in case you do land a larger fish this year.
Alligator gar, open; bluegill, 3 lbs., 6 oz.; blue catfish, 100 lbs.; buffalo, 32 lbs.; bullhead catfish, 2 lbs., 8 oz.; bowfin, 3 lbs., 4 oz.; carp, 54 lbs., 14 oz.; channel catfish, 15 lbs., 6 oz.; fathead catfish, 97 lbs.; freshwater drum, 31 lbs.; short nosed gar, 10 lbs.; Kentucky bass, 7 lbs., 10 oz.; largemouth bass, 13 lbs., 8 oz.; muskellunge, 42 lbs.;

rainbow trout, 14 lbs., 6 oz.; rock bass, 1 lb., 7 oz.; rockfish, 44 lbs., 4 oz.; sturgeon, 36 lbs., 8 oz.; smallmouth bass (world record), 11 lbs., 15 oz.; sauger, 6 lbs., 1 oz.; shiner-cracker, 2 lbs., 5 oz.; spoonbill, 72 lbs.; walleye, 21 lbs., 8 oz.; warmouth, 1 lb.; crappie, 4 lbs., 3 oz.; white bass, 5 lbs.; yellow bass (open).

Senator Backs ARC Extension

Washington—Senator Walter "Dee" Huddleston has endorsed extension of the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) and its program, which are due to expire in 1978. Huddleston is a member of the Senate appropriations subcommittee which handles ARC appropriations.

Floyd county is one of 49 counties in Kentucky that are covered by the ARC programs, and Kentucky is one of 13 states belonging to the Commission.

"The Appalachian Regional Commission has been particularly important to Kentucky," Huddleston said. "In Eastern Kentucky we have the largest number of low-income counties of any Appalachian state."

"But with ARC assistance, we have been catching up," Huddleston added. "And now, with the nation depending upon our coal, we must depend on ARC and the federal government to help us with some of the special problems we will face as a result of that dependence."

Huddleston said the economic situation in Eastern Kentucky has been complicated by the current recession, pointing out that 90 counties in Kentucky have unemployment in excess of 6.0 percent as of January. Of the 49 Appalachian counties, 42 counties have unemployment rates in excess of 7 percent, while 27 counties exceed the 10 percent point.

Floyd county's unemployment rate is 8.9 percent.

Health Notes

The Floyd County Health Department will conduct a glaucoma clinic here, Friday, March 21, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Glaucoma is a serious disease that usually occurs in persons who are 35 years of age or over. This disease can slowly and painlessly cause blindness, but early detection and treatment can prevent it. For this reason the health department urges all persons age 35 and over to take advantage of this free screening.

A nurse from the Floyd County Health Department will conduct a pap smear clinic Monday, March 24, at the old high school building at Wayland. Clinic hours will be from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The health department reminds all women that they should have a pap smear every year. This service is free.

Each year Kentucky physicians may report as many as 1,000 new cases of cervical cancer. A pap smear can forestall the development of this kind of cancer, even before obvious symptoms are noted by the woman or her doctor. The Floyd County Health Department will conduct a pap smear clinic Wednesday, March 26, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. The health department urges all women to have at least one pap smear every year because when this kind of cancer is discovered early enough, treatment can be started and lives can be saved.

Chamber of Commerce Banquet Set March 28

The Prestonsburg-Floyd County Area Chamber of Commerce will hold its annual banquet, March 28 at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park, Ted Naim, chamber president announced this week. Virgil Kinnaird, area director of the federal department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) will be the guest speaker. The social hour will begin at 5:45 p.m. with dinner at 7.

INVISIBLE BARRIERS

By O. F. THOMPSON

During my first pastorate our country church was situated in a grove of maple trees. Being somewhat out of the way and a cool retreat, it became the home of many varieties of birds. Among these were the Yellow Hammers or Flickers. There were a dozen or more of them and they had their nests there. I counted as many as twenty of these holes one day as I walked around the church.

They got so bold at last as to go ahead with their hammering on the Sabbath Day and even while the minister was preaching—this somewhat to the confusion of the preacher, the distraction of the older hearers and the curious amusement of the children. So one day I took down the "twenty-two" rifle and getting in the buggy drove to the church intending to kill some of the birds and frighten the rest away so that we would not be further disturbed by their competition.

When I opened the door of the church I heard a flutter of wings and looking in saw one of the brightly colored birds fly across the room over the rows of pews and dash against the window pane. It appeared dazed at first by the sudden setback but soon righted itself and made another dash across the room for a window on the other side. Again it struck the glass and with such violence as almost to break it. Again the bird seemed dazed partly by the blow and partly, apparently, by the fact that it could not fly through, what appeared to be, a clear opening. It made repeated attempts, growing almost frantic in its efforts to fly through the glass, and never seeming to learn that there may be hindrances to passage that cannot be seen by the eye.

At last it fell exhausted. I picked up the beautiful trembling creature and stroked its feathers gently, musing the while on an expression that had come into mind as I watched the strange procedure—"Invisible Barriers." As I stood thus it seemed to me that I was the church and that the Saviour was seeking entrance into my heart and life. I had made my profession of faith, to be sure. I had given the Lord the invitation to come and live in me and work through me, to do His own will. I longed for that and was striving for that very thing, as I thought. To all appearances the way was open for Christ to come in and do whatever seemed best to Him. Yet He had not come in the fullness I had longed for and was not working through me as I had so earnestly hoped that He might do. I wondered why it was so. Now, as the words kept repeating themselves in my musings I knew that it was "invisible barriers" that were keeping the Saviour out, just as that which seemed to be an opening to the bird had proved to be closed by invisible glass. Now I realized as never before that Christ was wanting to come into my life completely, was trying to enter in, would gladly be working through me. I had opened wide the outer door that all the world could see but had put up the invisible barriers of my inner life that only He and I could know about—invisible to all others—and these barriers within my soul were the closed door to the Saviour's presence and power.

I realized now as I had never realized before the meaning and the consequences of certain things. The thoughts that I had allowed myself to think many times—the Saviour could not come in and share those with me. There were plans and hopes that were not for the glory of God or the advancement of His Kingdom—the Saviour could not come in and share those with me. There were many pictures hung upon the walls of my memory, ones that I left hanging there—the Saviour could not come into my soul until those were taken down. There was selfishness and worldliness; there was pride and jealousy; there was a condition that could be called "self-centered" instead of "God-centered"—the Saviour could not come in to live and work in me while such things held sway within. There were wrong emotions and the deep-down intents of my heart—the mire underneath what was apparently the pure, clear-flowing stream of life above—the Saviour could not come in while that condition was there. And there was lack of faith, failure to trust when the way was rough or the work apparently impossible—could the Saviour trust me when I did not trust Him? Could He believe in me when I did not believe in Him? Could we be partners in this great life of the Kingdom when I was not co-operating more fully than I was?

And more than all of these there was the stubborn will that would not submit. How strange it all seemed to me now as I stroked the bird and repeated again the words, "Invisible Barriers." They were so plain to me now and I realized why and how it was that my life was so empty and so barren. I had closed doors in His face—doors that the world could not see and that I had not realized before were actual barriers to His entrance, but doors that had most effectively kept Him out, though He was so anxious to come in.

And flinging wide the door of the church I set the bird free to fly off into the sky where it longed so much to go. And turning back I faced the Master pleading that He would help me and show me how to fling wide open all those invisible doors that I had closed against Him and let Him come in to live with me and work with me and I with Him.

Note—We all seem to need to become conscious of invisible barriers in our lives hindering our service and after we have come to the end of our own resources we need a higher power (Holy Spirit) to release us unto perfect freedom through THE DOOR, that is Jesus Christ, Our Saviour, Redeemer and Sanctifier. If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed. John 8:36.
