Correction

Court records incorrectly listed Delbert Conn as having been arrested on charges which were in turn published in the June 4 edition of The Times. It was actually Jonathan Niece who was charged with possession of marijuana and alcohol intoxication. Conn was the individual who posted bond for Niece following the arrest.

PIKEVILLE — Three of a group of Floyd County residents indicted on charges they staged a wreck four years ago in Prestonsburg were sentenced

Tuesday in federal court. Junior Little, 68, Dannie Lee Bentley, 58, and James Clarence Hall, 39, were sentenced in connection to the conspiracy in U.S. District Court in Pikeville. Little will serve 45 months and three years of supervised release, Bentley was sentenced to 24 months with three years supervised release, and Hall was given 21 months with three years supervised release. The three men were sentenced for agreeing to stage a wreck in Prestonsburg so they could collect thousands of dollars from automobile insurance companies. According to court documents, in 2006, Little, Bentley and Hall, along with six others, some of whom have already been sentenced,

Four arrested for burglary after residents arrested

by SHELDON COMPTON

PRESTONSBURG — In an odd turn of events, four people were taken into custody and charged with first-degree burglary and criminal mischief following a break-in of an apartment at Goble Roberts. The odd turn? The apartment was burglarized after the two people who resided there were likewise arrested.

Prestonsburg police officers did not specify why residents Zack Carroll and Leslie Russell were taken into custody, only saying that after that incident, a call came to their offices about a burglary at Dixie Apartments in Goble Roberts. When they arrived on scene, officers found the rear window broken out and the back door open. The apartment had been "ransacked," according to the police report, and it was believed by investigators that those responsible had been searching for drugs and money. The report said a cell phone and an undisclosed amount of cash had been taken and also that witnesses had been questioned at the scene. These interviews led to the arrest of Kyle Matt Crum, 18, of Prestonsburg, and Deana Maynard, 21, of Teaberry. Crum and Maynard were later

According to reports first appearing in the Lexington-Herald Leader, police say Nick Housinger, 54, of Auxier, was pulled over during a traffic stop in Louisiana while traveling along Interstate 12 in an 18-wheeler.

Louisiana State Police reported that during the stop, officers discovered a hidden compartment in the cab of the truck that was "stuffed" with 78 plastic bundles of marijuana.

Piarist School and Helping Hands Christian Missions repair homes in area

by NATASHA COLLINS

This summer, the Piarist School, in Martin, is hosting numerous groups of volunteers from all over the country who are coming to this area with one purpose in mind: to help the people of eastern Kentucky with emergency home repairs.

While the Outreach Program of the Piarist School exists to help people in our area, with home items and food or clothing needed, this program is one of the most special. Audrey Collins, the Director of the Piarist School Outreach Program says, "To see the work that these people do; to watch a family who is in such need of basic repairs on their home and who thought they'd never receive it, finally get these things free of charge makes everything we do worthwhile."

One group that The Piarist School has been working with for many years is Helping Hands Christian Missions, a group of Christian men, women and young adults dedicated to helping the less fortunate by providing assistance in home maintenance for persons unable to afford to have work done. These people consist of the elderly, low income and individuals with disabilities. Helping Hands Christian Missions come from Southern Indiana and work tirelessly to coordinate the numerous work projects for the volunteer groups to follow them. Their work does not stop when they leave a job completed behind them.

The group started in 1998 with several members making trips to Mexico to work for a Catholic Priest, Fr. John Tasto, to better the lives of the impoverished of his parish. They built houses and additions to the Seminary and although a very rewarding trip, the area became overcome with drug violence and the workers felt it was no longer safe to travel with the young adults to the area.

No longer being able to make this trip, they felt they still had a strong calling to do God's work with the less fortunate. This calling prompted them to start another mission group which has come to be called Helping Hands Christian Missions. After attending an appeal by Fr. Tom Carroll, the principal of the Piarist School in Washington, Indiana, they were made aware of the outreach work being done by the School in Appalachia and decided to become involved.

Unlike the first group, which was made up primarily of members of the Catholic faith, the new group is made up of Christians of all manner of denominations. Since its inception, Helping Hands Christian Missions has a great deal of experience in multiple areas, such as plumbing, electrical, bathroom rebuilds, roof repairs, drywall repairs, stairs building, porch repairs, door replacement, siding repair and replacement, handicapped ramps and many others. They have worked in southeastern Kentucky with the Piarist Outreach program providing many of these things to numerous families in need.

One of the things the families have an interesting way of raising money, they attend several different functions Statewide such as fairs, carnivals and festivals where they make and sell Kettle corn and Caramel Corn. This along with donations is how they are able to work with the Piarist School on such an amazing project.

The volunteers working with the Piarist School Outreach provide their own tools and supplies for the projects. When asked how they can afford to fund such projects, Helping Hands Christian Missions revealed that they have an interesting way of raising money. They attend several different functions Statewide such as fairs, carnivals and festivals where they make and sell Kettle corn and Caramel Corn. This along with donations is how they are able to work with the Piarist School on such an amazing project.

This year, the group returned to eastern Kentucky to help the Piarist Outreach in Wayland, Kentucky. After sitting a number of projects for consideration and evaluating the needs, they had returned to Indiana to discuss which projects would be best for them to handle. In the case of Vaughn and Lucille Moore of Wayland, the decision was based on need and not want.

The Moores were in great need of doors that locked, a porch that did not allow snakes to continuously climb through the floor and steps that could safely be maneuvered down. Their safety and security were the deciding factors.

Lucille and Vaughn were contacted by Audrey Collins earlier this year with questions regarding repairs they needed on their home. When they were told about the program, and that they were being considered for the project, Lucille said, "I was happy, but I knew I wasn't going to get anything free. We've always worked on our own." Lucille said they needed front steps, their porch repaired and doors that they could lock. The doors were a particular worry for them, because they can't get up and down quickly when someone had tried to get into their home twice before. Her husband Vaughn, in 5th stage kidney failure, was more disbelieving and told her, "Ain't nobody gonna do that for us. You hear so much that ain't true."

Lucille laughingly recalled she had replied, "Well, I ain't gonna lose nothing if they don't."

When Audrey showed up at the Moores' home to look at the needed repairs, Vaughn recalls that he was still skeptical. "They may be back. They may not," Lucille recalled thinking it was a miracle. "We had a skeleton key for our door. Anyone could get into it."

Audrey left the site and contacted Helping Hands Christian Missions with the work needed in the home. They returned to eastern Kentucky and stopped by to take stock of the job themselves. When they came knocking, the Moores were still skeptical that they would be considered for any repairs.

"I've never had any good luck. What we've done here, we've done on our own. Everything on this house came from other people. Our railings, boards. We've worked all our lives for what we got, and ain't nobody ever gave us anything for free. When they came, they left their home that day, the Moores forgot about the notion of having repairs done. According to Vaughn and Lucille, they went back to living like they always had."

Audrey recalls the look on Lucille's face when she returned to tell her that the group would be back shortly to begin work on her home. "She was so surprised. I remember that look on her face, because I've had it in the past." As the group returned and began unloading supplies in the yard around the Moores' home, Lucille was ecstatic.

"I just couldn't believe it I just kept thinking that I'd get the porch, but no porch. She recalls seeing the lumber for the porch and the stairs being unloaded, but the moment her new steel doors were unloaded, she clapped her hands and declared, "Are those mine?"

NWP not the death nail, but may be the beginning

Though the pro-coal interests in Appalachia are decrying the suspension of Nationwide Permit 21 — which expedited the permitting process for coal companies and allowed them to empty spoil into local waterways — as another nail in the coal industry's coffin courtesy of the Obama Administration, that's not quite the case.

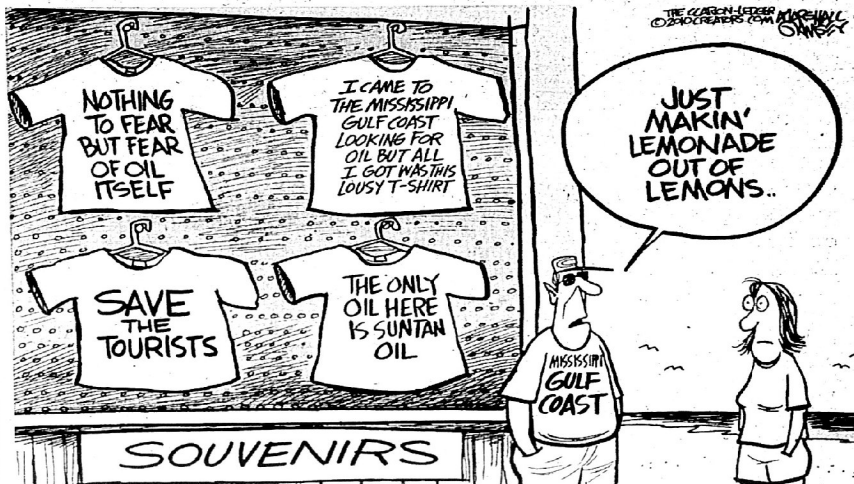

There is little doubt that President Obama has taken an anti-fossil fuel approach to the country's energy needs, and with the oil spill continuing to exacerbate the situation on the Gulf Coast there's a lot of justified anger at the oil industry. But this latest perceived salvo at the coal industry in the form of the NWP 21 suspension will not mean the end for the coal industry. It may not even prove to be a down payment on the coffin.

In years past, just as today, the coal industry faced a bevy of obstacles that those at the time said would spell doom for the mining of coal, including the Clean Water Act. But the coal industry, partly through its own innovation and the inception of advanced mining technology, adapted to fit the laws and continues to be a powerful economic driver in eastern Kentucky. The suspension of NWP 21 won't change that fact, and it won't spell doom for the coal industry. Coal miners will continue to run coal, and if the state and federal government will approve more "regular" permits, there shouldn't be any hiccup in coal production.

But that's the big question mark in the whole equation. There has been a large hold up of mining permits dating back to at least 2008. Without those new applications, companies can only continue to operate on existing permits, which in turn greatly limits their opportunities to keep mining coal. That's not a good thing in terms of continued employment. Though some may decry the weight the coal industry carries with the local economy, the truth is if this industry dies tomorrow we here in eastern Kentucky are in bad shape.

The suspension of NWP in and of itself won't kill the industry, and it may just do little good for the environment, but it may indeed be the first of many attacks on an industry that props up the local economy and employs thousands of people in central Appalachia. And based on past comments from the Obama Administration we can look to see more down the road. And that's not a good thing at all for most in eastern Kentucky.

House week in review

by REP. HUBERT COLLINS

Over half of the states, including Kentucky, saw their prison populations decline in 2009 after nearly 40 years of nonstop population growth, according to a recent Pew Center study.

But will these populations continue to decline, or is the 2009 dip what the Pew Center on the States' "Prison Count 2010" study says could just be a "temporary blip"?

Kentucky recently had one of the fastest growing prison populations in the nation and one in 35 Kentuckians under correctional control, according to a 2009 Pew nationwide study. To pay for its corrections system, Kentucky spent at least $521 million on corrections — 5.5 percent of the state's General Fund — including incarceration, probation and parole in fiscal year 2008.

The Pew Center Public Safety Project thinks Kentucky can spend less and still protect the public, said Pew researcher Richard Jerome who spoke to state lawmakers on the Interim Joint Committee on Judiciary in Glasgow in mid-June. And the Project plans to help Kentucky do so, at the state's written request submitted to the Project on June 3.

One thing Jerome has discovered about Kentucky, he said, is the state seems to prefer incarceration over probation and parole compared to other states. Another thing Jerome has found is the cost of incarceration per inmate in Kentucky is at least $50 more a day in public facilities and $46 more a day in private facilities than the $2.63 or less it costs to the state to probate or parole an offender.

"So, I think the question we should be asking is whether this increased spending is resulting in lower crime," said Jerome. "States are now finding that just is not the case," he said, adding that probation and parole might be a better fit for non-violent and/or drug offenders who he said can be better kept in the community.

The committee also heard a presentation on sex offender management strategies requested by the Justice and Public Safety Cabinet, and comments relating to the problems caused by failure to appear in court by out-of-state truck drivers. Todd Shipp, Assistant General Counsel with the state Transportation Cabinet, told lawmakers that Kentucky notifies a trucker's state of residency when a trucker fails to appear in Kentucky court for a moving violation that occurred in Kentucky.

"At that point, it is up to that state to take action," said Shipp, adding that the state often will when the violation involves alcohol.

Kentucky 43rd District Judge John Alexander explained that Kentucky law basically allows out-of-state truckers who commit certain traffic citations in the Commonwealth to avoid appearing in court because some offenses — driving too long, for example — are not considered moving violations under Kentucky law.

Judiciary Committee Co-Chair Rep. John Tilley, D-Hopkinsville, asked how Kentucky lawmakers can encourage better use of interstate compacts — compacts that require truckers with moving violations in Kentucky to return to the state and appear before Kentucky judges like Alexander.

Shipp told the committee that he thinks all parties can work together to fix the statute, but that might not entirely fix the problem. In his words: "... History serves when we start expanding things, we have other district judges who may not see things (the same way)."

The Judiciary Committee meeting was one of the first meetings of this year in the between-session period referred to as the "interim." We will have dozens of interim committee meetings through the end of 2010 to help us decide how to vote on pertinent legislation during the 2011 Regular Session starting in about six months. Every little bit of information is helpful as another session — and, likely, some hard legislative votes — rolls near.

Have a great summer, and I'll talk to you next week.

Sporting events, athletes share center stage once again

by RICK LENTLEY
TIMES COLUMNIST

Many of you probably remember my friend Dave Scott, the former sports editor of the Williamson Daily News. Dave and I were "competition" only in that we worked for different papers. Other than that, we shared about everything, from rolls of Spree to talent to scores.

Hey, it's been nearly 20 years. I'm sure the statute of limitations has passed by now.

But it was Dave who posted online at some point on Wednesday that ESPN's next "30 at 30" film should be called "June 23, 2010."

Last week the company debuted a fine documentary called "June 17, 1994" about the sporting events that took place that day. There was World Cup soccer, Junior Griffey facing David Cone in baseball, the Knicks playing the Rockets in the NBA Finals. Oh yeah, and that was the day of the world-famous O.J. chase through Los Angeles.

Dave's analogy goes one step further for me. On that day I was in Portsmouth, Ohio, covering the Opening Night of the second and final season of Kentucky Longridge baseball. Jason Blanton and I drove up for the game. The plans were to watch it and then drive to Lexington. The next day we would head on to Louisville to cover the Kentucky/Indiana basketball game.

Only Jason found out about the chase. We ended up staying in Portsmouth, which resulted in a desk clerk at a hotel being so wrapped up in the chase that she didn't ask our name or how we'd be paying. We didn't sign anything. She just tossed a key toward us on the counter, never taking her eyes off the television, and mumbled something about settling up in the morning.

Lucky for her she was dealing with two honest 20-somethings.

And then came Wednesday.

Look, I'm not going to pretend to be a huge soccer fan. And I'm not going to lie and say I watched the Americans play Wednesday or otherwise. I'm pretty sure I haven't watched a minute of it, other than highlights which have largely consisted of apparent bad calls by officials.

But I'm as American as the next guy, and always want to see our team win, so there you go. So on Wednesday when we went to lunch, we didn't listen to the game but monitored the score on my XM display. Or, should I say, the lack of score.

See that's the thing about soccer in this country. We like scoring. We like home runs, slam dunks, touchdown passes. We like fast breaks, and

by ERIC BRANCH
THE PRESS DEMOCRAT
(MCT)

SONOMA, Calif. — We already knew it was better to be lucky than good, but Jimmie Johnson showed us here Sunday that nothing tops being lucky and great.

Johnson, 34, the most dominant driver of his generation, benefited from an inexplicable late-race blunder from Marcos Ambrose and finally secured the first road-course victory of his career by winning the Toyota/Save Mart 350 at Infineon Raceway.

Johnson, who was foiled in several attempts to pass Ambrose in the race's later stages, ultimately didn't need to use his considerable skills to leapfrog the Australian, who was in pursuit of his first Sprint Cup win.

In contrast, it was the 51st victory of Johnson's career, moving him into ninth place on NASCAR's all-time list. And his latest win, he admitted, came complete with a ribbon and card.

"It was definitely a gift kind of handed to us," Johnson said.

Indeed, Ambrose stalled his car under caution with seven laps remaining, violating a NASCAR rule stipulating that drivers must maintain speed under a yellow flag. Ambrose turned his motor off in an effort to conserve fuel, but his car stalled as he was going uphill. Ambrose fought to restart his engine, six cars passed him by, as did any chance of his first Cup win in 63 starts.

"I'm disappointed," Ambrose said. "It's NASCAR's house and I'll always play by the rules. I don't agree with it. I don't like it. And that's only because I lost the race."

Johnson, the series' four-time defending champion, conceded Ambrose's error was likely necessary for him to reach the winner's circle. Johnson was pessimistic about his chances of passing Ambrose, a road course wizard who finished third at Sonoma last year and had the fastest lap in practice prior to Sunday's race.

Johnson had made a few attempts to pass Ambrose, who thwarted each move. Ambrose led 35 laps, including the last 15 prior to his gaffe.

"You can kind of count on mistakes with some guys, I just didn't really think that (Ambrose) would be the one to make a mistake," Johnson said. "I was going to push and do what I could. To see the mistake happen as it did was totally off the wall. I don't know if I've ever seen that eliminate a guy from winning a race."

The mistake gave Johnson the type of breakthrough win Ambrose was seeking.

Johnson has won at 17 of the 20 oval tracks on NASCAR's schedule, but he arrived in Sonoma winless at Infineon and Watkins Glen, Hendrick Motorsports' Johnson, in his ninth full season, had expected immediate success on the road given his extensive background in off-road racing as a teenager.

As a result, his 0-for-16 road-course record was both a surprise and a source of increasing annoyance.

In an effort to erase that hole on his resume, he competed in two Grand-Am events at Watkins Glen and Daytona this season. Two weeks ago, he juggled his schedule to get in road work at Watkins Glen in New York while competing the same weekend in the Cup race at Pocono Raceway in Pennsylvania.

"We put a lot of effort into it," said Chad Knaus, the crew chief of Johnson's team, Hendrick Motorsports. "Jimmie personally has put a lot of effort into upping his road-course-racing capabilities and he's done a great job."

There are few items Johnson lacks on his resume, but Sunday's win put to rest any doubts about his all-around driving chops. The winningest drivers on road courses are Jeff Gordon (nine wins) and Tony Stewart (seven), the only other active drivers besides Johnson with multiple Cup championships.

Johnson, however, said he wasn't motivated to further burnish his legacy.

Rather, he was burning to finally experience the success he expected to enjoy long ago.

"To come into the Cup Series and not have success early irritated me," Johnson said. "That's why today is so special to us, why it has meant so much."

Events

slams and throwing the bomb. We like scoring so much it's even slang for sex.

And 90 minutes into Wednesday's all-important game, we were staring right in the face our second scoreless tie in three first-round matches.

But one of the many odd things about soccer is penalty time. If time is stopped during soccer, the clock continues to run. I'm not sure why. Maybe in the beginning they didn't have enough people there to actually have someone to stop it when need be. I don't get it. But that's the case.

So even though they were 90 minutes in, they kept playing. And in the end, the best soccer player in America scored on a deflected shot and the US will advance and play again tomorrow.

Excitement, right there. But in the end, that goal wouldn't even be the biggest story of the day, thanks to an opening-round matchup at Wimbledon.

Now here's another sport I don't follow too closely. But Wimbledon is like The Masters in golf. At some point, I start tuning in to see how things are going. That point usually doesn't involve the first week.

On Wednesday, I paid attention to the Opening Round contest between American John Isner and Frenchman Nicolas Mahut. I've seen pretty good tennis. When John Kitchen was our coach at Pikeville College, we watched as the Bears made it all the way to the national semifinals before being eliminated with some officiating that would make World Cup stripes blush.

But in this contest, between two guys I admittedly had never heard of, was something to see. Then complicate that with the fact that it started on Tuesday and was continuing into Thursday and you see the interest.

And just like that day some 16 summers ago, Wednesday had a big local story as well. It was the day we said goodbye to Randy Jones.

I was blessed to know Randy for much of my life, and because of my relationship with East Kentucky Broadcasting, was honored to appear on his "a.m. asylum" on occasion.

On mornings I spent in the studios of EKB, after I'd recorded my stuff I'd often just go sit in Randy's studio and watch him work.

While songs or spots were playing we'd talk about the events of the day, songs we liked or last night's scores. We had a lot in common.

The Bible tells us that God won't put more on us than we can handle. I thought this week that God must have an incredible amount of faith in Paulette Jones. In the last five months, she lost her beloved father, her oldest son and now her husband.

I can't imagine how she feels. But I hope she feels the loving arms of an entire town and county and mountain region around her today. We loved Randy Jones, his unmistakable voice, his jovial personality, his magical charm.

I'll miss my friend. I'll miss his love and support and friendship. But in the end, what we'll all miss is the impact he had on his community, the giving nature and the passion with which he loved us.

Randy is realizing the rest of his innumerable labors today. Lord knows he's very deserving.

JR Motorsports providing primary placement in five Nationwide Series races

COLUMBUS LEDGER-ENQUIRER (MCT)

COLUMBUS, Ga. — NASCAR driver Dale Earnhardt Jr. was recently in Columbus for a few days filming television commercials for Realtree, the world's leading camouflage designer, marketer and licensor. That's not where his support of the local company's new lifestyle apparel line, Realtree Outfitters, ends.

JR Motorsports, the management company and racing operation for Earnhardt, has agreed to a partnership with Delta Apparel to promote the Realtree Outfitters licensed brand. Realtree Outfitters will receive primary placement on the No. 88 Chevrolet in five NASCAR Nationwide Series events this year.

The complete schedule for the Delta Apparel/Realtree Outfitters-sponsored races includes New Hampshire Motor Speedway on Saturday, Iowa Speedway on July 31, Bristol Motor Speedway on Aug. 20, Dover International Speedway on Sept. 25 and Gateway International Raceway on Oct. 23.

Earnhardt will be behind the wheel at Bristol while Elliott Sadler will drive at New Hampshire and Dover. Drivers for Iowa and Gateway are still to be determined.

"Both Dale Jr. and Elliott truly love the outdoors and both have spent time hunting and fishing with us over the years," said Realtree President Bill Jordan who hosts Bill Jordan's Realtree Outdoors on ESPN. "We could not be more pleased to have these two drivers behind the wheel of the Realtree Outfitters, Chevrolet."

In a news release, Earnhardt said, "I think this partnership with Delta Apparel and Realtree Outfitters is something we're announcing now but it started a long time ago just on mutual friendship. Realtree has been in the sport a long time because there is a common interest in racing and hunting. NASCAR fans wear Realtree camo."

"I used to go hunting with junior's dad (Dale Earnhardt) so I guess it's come full circle," Jordan said. The commercials filmed here also feature Jordan's son, Tyler, and NASCAR driver Martin Truex Jr. Jordan called them, "pretty funny."

While Realtree's camouflage apparel has been on hunters for more than 20 years, Jordan said he wants to see Realtree Outfitters casual wear on people not when hunting or fishing but when hanging out at the mall, at a casual party or at a NASCAR event.

The Realtree logo will appear on shorts, hats, sweat-shirts and T-shirts featuring pictures of hunting and fishing related scenes. Jordan likes to call the theme, "deer, ducks and dogs."

"We've got some great graphic designs," Jordan said. He said the casual wear should start appearing in stores in July.

The product will be in many stores. Two that Jordan mentioned were Dick's Sporting Goods and Academy Sports and Outdoors.

He believes the NASCAR connection will help. "You know all eyes are going to be on that No. 88 car," he said.

"Our licensing agreement with Realtree has opened significant new markets for our lifestyle T-shirts, caps and other apparel items, both the outdoor and NASCAR places in a very short time frame," said Robert W. Humphreys, CEO of Delta Apparel.

Tug Valley Bass Anglers holds fourth tournament

TIMES STAFF REPORT

MOREHEAD — On June 20, the Tug Valley Bass Anglers held its fourth tournament on Cave Run Lake. A total of 27 anglers competed in the event.

Cave Run Lake was about six inches above normal pool, and the water was dropping. Rain the week before had raised the lake about one foot above normal. The water was still in good shape with a temperature in the 80s. The water was stained to clear on the entire lake.

Weather for the tournament was good with sunny skies and light winds. The air temperature on the other hand was not so good with temperatures in the mid 90's and a heat index approaching 100 degrees.

The fish were in their summer patterns. Most of the fish were shallow in the morning before the sun got bright. The fish in the grass stayed shallow all day. Fish that were using wood as cover were around 10-12 feet deep.

The main pattern for the tournament was to fish top water baits early while the fish were up and active. Then as the sun got bright, fish cover was either grass or wood in 5 to 12 feet of water. Crawfish imitations and plastic worms were best for the fish in the cover. As usual, the bite slowed down considerably the brighter the sun got.

The top finishers were as follows: 1st: Mo (5 fish), 7.83 lbs.; 2nd: Joe Collins (5 fish), 6.71 lbs.; 3rd: Gary Varney (5 fish), 6.58 lbs.; 4th: Lynn Fields (5 fish), 6.00 lbs.; 5th: Steve Ramey (5 fish), 5.31 lbs.

6th: Kevin Runyon (5 fish), 5.17 lbs.; 7th: Greg Maynard (5 fish), 3.98 lbs.; 8th: Keith Pacific (5 fish), 3.68 lbs.; 9th: Bryan Fields (5 fish), 3.35 lbs.; 10th: Johnny Webb (5 fish), 3.31 lbs.

Rays repeat in KGA Father-Child Championship

Walters duo finishes third

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LOUISVILLE — Mickey and Michael Ray may not have the overall lead in titles for the KGA (Kentucky Golf Association) Father-Child Championship) but they must be very close. The Somers team has had their name engraved on the trophy several times in the past few years and did so again here in 2010 at the Big Springs Country Club & Polo Fields Golf & Country Club.

Elmo and J.R. Greer from London mounted a charge to the top but came up four strokes short. Pikeville's Bruce and Jack Walters were one more shot behind them.

Other flight winners included Horace and Chris

Brown; Ken and Matt Smith; Shane and Austin Bosermer; Jeff and Ashleigh Howerton; and Gene and Sammi Smith.

Danville Country Club hosted the first Father-Son Championship back in 1970. The initial format was Four Ball and has been under the guidance of KGA since then.

'Deliver Us from Evil'

Five ordinary men transform into a quintet of bay-stabbing jerks when they stumble across a small fortune in this excellent thriller that benefits from tight scripting and a talented cast.

We open with a long shot of six men on a hike. It's a bold choice as the audience feels like they are eavesdropping on a rather mundane vacation. It's obvious the men are in no hurry and their banter reveals that they are somewhat unfamiliar with each other. The point may be that you never really know anybody, but who cares as this is a thriller that wastes little time getting to the good stuff.

The group is eventually revealed in close-up and we meet the players. Their guide/leader is Dixie. He's a rugged mountaineer who enjoys the simple lifestyle and has no ambitions to ever be rich.

His hikers, however, are another matter. They are:

■ Cowboy, a thrice-divorced businessman who is paying three-quarters of his earnings in alimony

■ Dennis, an accountant with an eye on Wall Street but not a whole lot of investment capital.

■ Zaburki, a middle-aged,

INFLATION, CIRCA 1924

The record isn't at hand, but the price of gasoline must have been of some concern, back in 1924—it may have been 15 or 20 cents a gallon. Ken Peters, of Martin, has supplied us with paragraphs from newspapers of that day, 56 years ago, which indicate as much.

For example, The Marion Star wrote: "If the price of gasoline keeps going up, it may prove cheaper to buy shoes."...And the Cincinnati Enquirer, same year: "If the price of gasoline goes much higher, our silk-shirted laborers may have to go to work to support their cars."...And the Athens, Ga. Daily News: "Dollar (a gallon) gasoline would at least relieve the congestion in the emergency wards."

CHANCE OR RISK?

There was a time when I would buy a chance on anything, waste my last dime on a punchboard, trying for a prize which I never won. Now I've merely registered for a chance at a Cincinnati Reds Week-End, and, since they're so lousy they embarrass themselves as well as the rest of us, it would be my luck to win. That's a chance—or risk—I should not have taken.

DINNER DIVA

Cherish your children

Indulge me for a moment, will you? Today's column is more about food for the soul, then for the tummy.

Years ago, I was watching TV and I saw a commercial for diapers. I don't remember the entire context of it, but they showed a little baby in the crib, then later, he's a toddler learning to use his pull up diapers and go potty like a big boy.

I almost got teary over that commercial! I don't know what it was about that ad that landed so hard in my heart. After sleeping on it all night, I realized exactly what it was.

I spent a good portion of my children's childhoods wishing it away. Instead of cherishing the moments, I would say to myself, "This is so hard. It will be so much easier when they're older."

My children are there now at 18 and 20 years old. They're close in age, 21 months apart. When they were little, I had double everything: stroller, car seats, diapers, you name it. Their babyhoods were a blur—I was nursing one and trying to keep another happy. I was tired, stressed out and wanted motherhood to be easy and perfect—like it is in magazines. The reality was quite the opposite—I was overwhelmed and spent an inordinate amount of time looking ahead instead of loving their sweet heads. "When they are older, THEN I will fill in the blank."

Why am I telling you this? Because I have guilt and regret and can't move forward? No, because I

Q I am in my early 50's, and I have suddenly been getting pimples again. I thought only teenagers got major acne break-outs. I take good care of my skin, eat right and get plenty of rest. What can be causing this? Should I see my family doctor?

A It sounds like you may have developed a condition called acne rosacea. This is caused by an inflammation of the skin, and it affects about 15 million adults. Rosacea most commonly occurs in fair-skinned women between the ages of 30 and 60.

This disorder does not seriously impact one's overall health, and it certainly is not life-threatening. However, because rosacea primarily affects skin on the face, it can be very upsetting as a cosmetic concern. After all, most of us consider acne break-outs to be a problem of early youth. While men are less likely to develop this condition than women, when men do get rosacea, it is usually more severe.

Although rosacea tends to only flare up periodically, it is a chronic condition. Typically symptoms start with general facial flushing. This flushing can be brought on by spicy foods, alcohol, menopause, exercise, hot baths and some types of medications. Some physicians call this phase of the disease "pre-rosacea."

The next symptoms to emerge include small red bumps on the nose, cheeks and face; visible blood vessels on the cheeks and nose; and general sensitivity of the skin. At this point, rosacea is often referred to as either vascular rosacea or inflammatory rosacea. Additionally, rosacea can cause dryness, redness and burning of the eyes. This is called ocular rosacea.

No one is sure what the cause of rosacea is, but some suspect that bacteria in the hair follicles may play a role in the development of this disease.

Because the condition tends to come and go, it often takes quite a while for people to become concerned enough to seek medical attention. However, I would advise you to see a doctor right away. An early diagnosis is important, since getting treatment started early in the disease process can prevent lasting damage to the skin.

Initial treatment for vascular or inflammatory rosacea typically involves a combination of oral and topical antibiotics. Oral antibiotics are also used for ocular rosacea.

Occasionally, a severe case of rosacea can create a build-up of tissue on or around the nose, which is referred to as a rhinophyma. The result is a ruddy, enlarged nose and rosy cheeks, similar to the look of classic comedian W.C. Fields. Sometimes this swelling creates bumps of skin on the nose, as well. There are surgical methods to remove this excess skin.

The best way to manage this chronic condition is simply to protect your skin from environmental and chemical irritants. Use sunscreen, cover your face in the winter to prevent wind damage and avoid skin products that contain alcohol or seem to irritate your skin. Use moisturizer to soothe and protect the skin between flare-ups. As with any chronic condition, work with your family physician to manage the symptoms.

finally realized that even if I did wish away too much time when they were babies, now that they have gone away to school, I thoroughly cherish each moment that I have with them. Oh sure, there are times that they're rotten and need straightening out, but I am not trying to tell you that life becomes perfect when you're looking wistfully back on their childhoods. The root of all discontent however, is expecting perfect out of anyone (child or adult) or any situation. I am thankful I learned that while they were still home.

Here's a way to put this important lesson into practice: instead of constantly trying to correct and PERFECT your children's table manners, consciously try to have a dinner table that welcomes the stories about your son's day, your daughter's dreams and laugh together! My heart's memory book is filled with memories from those kind of interactions and (thankfully) not the guilt of nagging at them constantly.

My children grew quickly and were gone before I knew it. One thing that really helped me enjoy them and love them each day was breaking bread each night together at the table. Having dinner together not only blesses those at the table, but it blesses the hands that make it.

Wherever you are in your journey as a mother, you can begin to cherish your babies now—no matter what age, even if they have children of their own! You are still a mother and you still have moments (God willing) left to cherish. The past is one thing we can do nothing about, but we have today!

Take a moment today, and look at your children's faces and understand that they are there in your care by Divine appointment. It is no accident that God gave you that child or those children. They were hand selected to belong to your family—no one else's. What a gift!

So tonight, when you are gathered 'round your family dinner table, thank God for giving you each child even if you can see their tonsils with mouths full of spaghetti. Treasure your sweet children and love them like there is no tomorrow. They are gifts to be cherished at each meal, with each moment.

That snide remark might shake those Rebs out of their slump. Seems that they went on a 10-game winning streak last year after I had declared them hopeless.

THEN AND NOW

Some years ago we struggled with linotypes, tramp printers and all the other uncertainties of the trade. Time was when the deadline shifted from week to week; it all depended on our good or bad fortune. Things at one stage got so bad that the late Ed Arnold ribbed me about "that tri-weekly of yours—try to get out week, and get out the next."

Now, we're at the mercy of a computer. Pretty modern, we'd say. But far from perfect. In fact, an esoteric contraption such as this could get us in such a fix that it wouldn't be a matter of wondering when, but if, we would print.

Salome's Stars Weekly Horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you don't like to change plans once they're set, once again, you might find that doing so can make a big difference in your favor. Family matters dominate the weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You continue to get encouragement for your proposals, including some support from unlikely sources. Use this positive flow to move forward with your plans. Good luck.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Family matters are dominant this week. It's a good time to be with those you love. It's also a good time to contact and reunite with loved ones with whom you've lost touch.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Be careful not to allow differences of opinion to create unpleasant feelings, especially in the workplace. A neutral observer could check out the situation and suggest a resolution.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) While the Lion's Den is the center of attention this week, with family matters dominating much of your time, workplace issues are also important. Try to find a balance between them.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)

The future of a new relationship could depend on how much the usually impatient-to-get-things-done Virgo is willing to stop pushing and let things happen naturally.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Worry over a loved one's well-being is eased with good news from a sympathetic source. Your continued show of love and support is important. Stay with it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time to consider mending fences with someone you wish was back in your life. Forget about blame, and focus on the good things you once shared.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good week to start researching information regarding whatever changes you're considering, whether it involves a new home, a new location or a new job.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A long-anticipated job opportunity could turn out to be less than you expected. But appearances might be deceiving. Check it out before you decide it's not for you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Good news: Adapting to a new situation might come more easily than you expected. You can look for continued support from colleagues who appreciate your contributions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Someone you care for might need more reassurance from the typically "unemotional" Pisces. Go ahead. Open up, and you might be surprised at what you find when you do.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are a romantic at heart, although you can be amazingly practical when you need to be.

KIM'S KORNER

You are your Father's child

by KIM LITTLE FRASURE

How many of us have heard the statement, "Like father like son?"

Some take on their father's DNA through physical appearances and some through mannerisms, temperament, belief and skill.

There are daughters who also share their father's DNA in major ways. Especially our youngest, Tiffany. For those of you who have seen her, she looks exactly like her Daddy, has a temperament like him and even enjoys a lot of the same things her Daddy does. I'm sure some of you ladies reading this today can relate.

Yes, certain characteristics can be passed down from our parents, grandparents and even great-grandparents.

After reading "It's Your Time" by Joel Osteen recently, the enlightenment of DNA bounced off the pages and became one of those a-ha moments followed by a big THANK YOU, JESUS!

The Almighty Father knew each of us before our mothers and fathers had an inkling we would be born into their lives.

Scripture tells us, "We have been made in the image of the Almighty God." Oh, do you know what that means?

That means we not only have our parents' DNA running through our bodies BUT, praise God, we have HIS spiritual DNA in us!

W h o o o - h o o o !

Halleluiah!

People, no matter what DNA we have inherited from our mothers and fathers, we have inherited the Jehovah Jireh's DNA and He is the Lord, our Provider, and in our genes right now this moment we have His favor, His wisdom, His strength, His talent, and His ability.

He created us to be the head not the tail. He created us with genes of favor, strength, wisdom, talent and ability. And as Joel says, "He preprogrammed us!"

Sometimes it takes years for some of our characteristics or mannerisms to surface from our parents' DNA. For instance, who would've ever thought my girls would have liked bluegrass like their father, not me, but they inherited his love for all types of music, down to even the elevator stuff at times. While their good ol' Momma seems to be stuck in the 1970s tunes and loves her oldies but goodies.

Just as some of our parents' DNA lays dormant inside us for years until it comes to surface, we allow God's DNA to lay dormant within us until we wake up and begin to activate on Faith!

Some have had parents they would prefer to escape. Some parents chose not to be parents at all.

Some passed on such heartache and turmoil the brain simply pushes (or tries anyway) those memories so far back wishing for a point of no return. Yet, those same parents passed down their DNA.

Some truly believe their upbringing was so horrendous and painful that they will never be able to escape it, but don't think you have reached your limits in life and you are destined to live with pain, heartache, and underserving of love. Don't you dare think your life is meant for suffering, struggles, turmoil and strife.

For your body carries another DNA and, oh boy, does it outweigh!

You have the Almighty Father's DNA, running inside you and He created you with everything you need!

God put a blessing on each of us! Every single one of us!

We may have lived a life without parents speaking faith into us; we may see our lives full of defeat, wrong mind-sets, additions, or even punching bags for someone who lived to hurt us.

And even though we may be tempted to think, they messed my life up and now I have to deal with all these issues.

We must let go of that mind-set and know that the Almighty Father has preprogrammed us!

Know that His DNA runs inside you!

Osteen said we must take on the attitude: I am a child of the Most High King; my parents may not have given me what I needed. Other people may have tried to push me down. My circumstances may not have worked out, BUT that will not stop me. For I know I have the DNA of the Almighty Father, the creator of the universe and I have everything I need.

God's DNA over rules and over rides any negative DNA that has ever run through our bodies.

We have His Strength, We have His Joy, We have His Wisdom, and we are destined for love, peace, joy and prosperity!

We can overcome any obstacle, negative seed that planted its nasty little self inside us. We cannot continue to water it and let it grow. No, we've got to drown it in the Blood of Jesus!

Lord Jesus, I ask that every good thing every good DNA that you have placed inside us will come to fulfillment.

Every gift, every talent, every dream, every desire, will come to pass.

I ask that those reading this will fulfill Your purpose, Father. That they will fulfill your God-given destiny and become all You have created them to be. I ask Lord Jesus they will overcome every obstacle that has tried to hinder or harm them in any way.

I ask in Your Precious & Holy Name Father that every stronghold in their lives be broken off them this day.

I ask Jesus that the negative things in their families for generations will no longer affect them.

Lord I pray that joy, peace and success and prosperity take root in their lives today. I pray the DNA of the Almighty God will spring forth in each of our lives in a greater way.

Lord Jesus I Praise You and thank You Father and claim this prayer for each of us - In Jesus' Name - Amen!

'Til next week.

Hubby's not neutral on wife's neutral-shift practice

by TOM and RAY MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:
With all the news about uncontrolled acceleration, my wife has decided that she wants to be prepared in case it ever happens to her. We know the proper thing to do is shift the automatic transmission into neutral. To get practice in this maneuver, she has been slipping the car into neutral while she's driving. She'll put it in neutral while traveling at speed, and then let the car slow down a bit, then pop it back into gear and keep going. I know this is a good thing for her to know, but it's starting to drive me nuts. Is it OK for the transmission? It's coming close to an argument for us. Can you tell me if what she's doing is OK? — Mike

TOM: Is she doing it five times during every trip to the convenience store? That may be grounds for a domestic dispute.

RAY: But if she's doing it only occasionally, just forget about it. It's not going to do any damage to the transmission.

TOM: If it is a very frequent occurrence, then you need to appeal to her on both humanitarian and safety grounds.

RAY: On the safety side, you don't want her to be so focused on unintended acceleration that someday she'll be practicing her coasting in neutral when she suddenly needs to accelerate to get out of the way of another vehicle.

TOM: Right. You never know what kind of accident you may be involved in, so you don't want to be so obsessed with one kind that you inadvertently increase the likelihood of another.

RAY: And on humanitarian grounds, you'll just have to tell her that it's driving you ape-dung. Suggest to her that perhaps her "shift to neutral" practice could safely be reduced to, say, once a month. Like a fire drill, you want to do it often enough that you know how to respond in an actual emergency, but not so often that you're spending half your life outside, shivering in your pajamas. Good luck, Mike.

Post-repair diagnostics charge is bogus

Dear Tom and Ray:
We recently took our 2001 VW Jetta to the dealer because the Check Engine light was on. After guessing at the solution (something about the code was vague), they charged us $280 for diagnostics and to replace the air filter and spark plugs. They also wanted $65 to run a "post-repair diagnostic check"; I refused, as it seems to me this should be part of any repair. They prominently noted my refusal on the repair bill. We checked up the car after the repair shop had closed. The Check Engine light was still on, and the car ran worse than before. The next morning, they wanted to charge us $118 for another diagnostic. I would have ranted and raved, but my saintly wife used guile to get them to back off. So my question is, Should I ever pay for a "post-repair diagnostic" or is this just a pure rip-off? — Craig

RAY: Our customers do our post-repair diagnostics for us, Craig. They drive out of the garage, and if we see a wheel fall off, then we know we didn't fix it. TOM: You did the same thing, Craig. And I'd have to agree with you, that determining whether you fixed the problem is part of the repair process. So that's not a reasonable charge.

RAY: My guess is that they scanned the car's computer and got a vague code, like "engine misfire." That doesn't always tell you exactly what's wrong. It gives you a good clue about where to look, but often you have to take it from there.

TOM: So they took a reasonable guess with the spark plugs (not sure about the air filter — maybe they were having a special?), but the spark plugs didn't fix it. What they should have done next is take out the spark plugs (unless you clearly needed new ones anyway), take them off your bill and start trying some other things, like coils, plug wires or a crank angle sensor.

RAY: If we had been working on your car, that's what we would have done (after we sold you a rug shampoo and a platinum-tipped pine-tree air freshener). And if we eventually fixed the car, we would have charged you for 100 percent of the diagnostic time.

because that was time we spent making educated guesses, installing and removing parts, and trying to solve your problem. That's only fair.

TOM: But we would have charged you only for the actual parts that fixed the car. The rest would have gone back on the shelf.

RAY: If you want to put this in the best possible light, Craig, maybe these guys were heading in that same direction. Maybe they're just guilty of having an awful presentation.

TOM: I doubt it. I think they were trying to overcharge him. They didn't solve the problem, and they needed to do more diagnostic work. But they should have just said that, and offered to take back any unnecessary parts. They need to learn that honesty is always the best policy.

RAY: Right. Especially once you get caught.

Rental Central

by TOM DOTY
TIMES COLUMNIST

Renters were 4-for-4 this week if they selected a film from this week's offerings, which included an outstanding effort from about every genre.

■ "Green Zone" — Action fans will have a field day with this effort from the director of "The Bourne Supremacy." Matt Damon stars here (not as Bourne) as a weapons inspector in Iraq before the outbreak of the war. He starts to suspect that the intelligence he's getting is false when every weapons cache turns out to be abandoned. Thrills, drama, and some good action bits ensue.

■ "The Last Station" — Good drama should also include a little humor, and this biographical picture gets the formula right. Christopher Plummer stars here as Russian novelist Leo Tolstoy in an account of his last days. The fine cast gets additional heft from Helen Mirren (aging very gracefully) and Paul Giamatti. Funny and poignant.

■ "She's Out of My League" — Sure, there are soporific moments in this formula comedy, but there are also some sharp observations on how we often let peer pressure steer our fate. Jay Baruchel ("Tropic Thunder") stars as an airport security guard who falls for a bombshell of a babe but must then question the good thing he has when everyone around him acts like it'll never last. A few of the jokes here aim low, but this comedy has a brain and often rises to the level of its stars.

■ "Death Race 2000" — Sci-fi fans will dig this reissue of Roger Corman's cult classic that mixed high-octane road rage with colorful costumes, tricked-out cars and social satire. The film finds earth struggling with population woes in the near future when a road race finds colorful personalities scoring points by running over as many civilians as possible while heading for the next leg. Inspired genius from Paul Bartel ("Eating Raoul"). A great cast includes David Carradine and Sylvester Stallone as the chief racers, but the best bits in this edition are the copious extras. You get interviews with most everybody as well as segments on the cars, costumes and performers.

Next week brings us a remake of a George Romero classic ("The Crazies") and John Cusack in "Hot Tub Time Machine."

more important question becomes how do you define survival when the living pretty much wish they were dead?

The ensemble acting is what makes this thriller cook. George Kennedy stars as Cowboy and he's awfully good at being bad. He gets to play against type as well. He was usually the good guy in just about every disaster movie of the 1970s. Jan-Michael Vincent is also good here as the Nick. He is about the closest thing to a goof guy that the film allows.

This premiered on the ABC Movie of the Week in 1973 and has since disappeared for the most part. It shows up on TBS once in awhile or you can find it on DVD-R at ioffer.com. Those of you who like to download flicks might find it at hulu.com.

Strange ... but true

■ It was multitalented

Robert Anton Wilson — he was, at various times in his life, a novelist, essayist, psychologist, editor, philosopher, playwright and mystic — who made the following observation: "It only takes 20 years for a liberal to become a conservative without changing a single idea."

■ The U.S. Department of Agriculture recently released its study on the costs of raising a child. Those who have children may not be surprised to learn that the average two-parent, middle-income family spends a whopping $222,360 on the child through the age of 17 — and that figure, of course, doesn't include the cost of a college education.

■ The blue whale is the largest animal known to have ever existed. The marine mammal is so large, in fact, that a grown man could swim through its largest blood vessels.

■ The company known as Ulysse Nardin, based in Switzerland, is known for its line of luxury watches. They've recently expanded their offerings, though, so the next time you're in the market for a cell phone, you might want to check out their version of Google's Android model. You also might want to check your bank account; this gold-plated piece of technology will retail for $50,000.

■ Here's a sign of our increasingly cluttered lives:

When the National Association of Professional Organizers was formed, in 1985, it had five members. Today there are more than 4,000 registered organizers with the group.

■ According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, those who hold the most dangerous job in America aren't firefighters or police officers; they're taxi drivers, with 22.7 homicides for every 100,000 workers each year.

middle-income worker who dreams of quitting his factory job to sip umbrella lade drinks on a beach somewhere.

■ Nick, a 20-something guy coming off a divorce that proved his marriage wasn't strong enough to ride out some financial setbacks.

■ Fleming, the father of Nick, who has gone into hock in order to make sure his son had a college education.

The guys are about to make camp when Cowboy thinks he has spotted a parachute alighting in the distance. Dixie assures him that he probably saw a bird, but the group starts to drift towards Cowboy's interpretation when a radio broadcast reveals that a manhunt is currently underway for a thief who hijacked an aircraft and made good his escape via parachute.

They decide to aid in the search and actually stumble across a skittish hiker who takes off like a rabbit. Cowboy opts to live up to his nickname and promptly shoots the guy.

There is a brief shock when victim's backpack turns out to be chock full of camping gear, but they soon discover that he does have the missing loot. They don't waste much time rationalizing why they are entitled to the money.

Dixie senses where this is going and decides to use a shortcut to get them back to civilization. Unfortunately, the new path is also more dangerous, as evidenced by Dixie's fatal fall from a mountain ledge.

They say the "Lord's Prayer" (hence the title) and decide to keep the money. Nick and his dad need some convincing but they wisely decide to not make any waves.

Nature appears to have an opinion, too, and soon the cast is dropping like flies as the elements join forces with their hasty judgments to insure that nobody forgets that blood was spilled for this money.

This leads to some gripping drama as the men soon find themselves acting out of character. One example is how they quickly douse their campfire when an airplane is overhead despite the fact that it's freezing out.

They become consumed with how to spend the money, so much that they neglect their survival instincts at their own peril. Only two of these guys will survive this ordeal, but the
