The group, which embarked yesterday morning from Pikeville, plans to join with others from around the country to continue to promote their platform for coal as the primary source of energy across the nation.
“We hope to get our message out right there in Washington where it can be heard the loudest,” said organizer Julie Wilson with Coal Operators and Associates.
The focus for some time has been to support coal mining and coal miners in the face of what Friends of Coal members and other supporters say have been “negative”

PRESTONSBURG — The Dewey Lake Horse Trail is officially open to the public after a ceremony held this past weekend at the German Bridge Campground in Prestonsburg.
First Lady Jane Beshear was in attendance for the event on Sept. 10, and many other local and state officials joined the 24-mile trail over the course of the weekend.
“The new trails will add another exciting activity to our growing list of adventure tourism opportunities for this region,” Beshear said. “This project, which is one more example of local, state, federal agencies and trail organizations working together, will boost tourism and achieve our goal of expanding recreational opportunities for Kentuckians and our guests.”
According to Denzil Allen, president of the Big Sandy Trail Riders Club, over 500 people and 336 horses were present at the event.
“It was a fun weekend for everyone involved,” Allen said. “We spent the weekend riding the new trails that have been officially leased to the Floyd County Fiscal Court. We want to get these trails on the national maps so people that come here don’t have to hunt one of us down for information.”
Allen said that future plans include constructing water and electrical hook-ups for camping trailers to allow campers and those who utilize the horse trail to enjoy a non-primitive experience if they choose to do so.
Secretary of Tourism Marcheta Sparrow also attended the event with Beshear.
“This should provide another boost for local tourism and encourage horseback riders to visit the area,” Sparrow said. “We appreciate the efforts of local government and trail groups to add to the hundreds of miles of trails that are open to”

“I feel like our board made a decision to protect the community during these tough economic times,” said Supt. Henry Webb. “They tried to do what was best for the community and for the kids.”
According to Webb, the new rate is among the lowest that the county has Visitors to Jenny Wiley, Buckhorn Lake and Pine Mountain can choose a weekend, stay at a state park lodge or cottage and arise early to enjoy one of these unique tours. Participants should bring their cameras — there should be great photography opportunities. The largest elk herds are located on privately owned lands that are normally closed to the public. This is one of the few opportunities available for the public to see the greatest number of elk.

The return of elk to the region is considered to be one of Kentucky's biggest wildlife management success stories. The animals, after being gone from the state for 150 years, were returned in 1997. They now number 11,000.

2010 dates: Sept. 18, 19, 25, 26 (Elk Night Sept. 18); Oct. 9, 10, 16, 17, 23, 24; Nov. 6, 13, 20; Dec. 4, 2011 dates: Jan. 15, 22, 23, 29 (Buffalo Night Jan. 22); Feb. 5, 12, 19, 26; March 5, 12.

Enjoy seeing these majestic animals during their rutting season. With sightings recorded on every tour over the last three years, guided elk viewing adventures have proven to be memorable wildlife-viewing experiences. Participants must register by calling 800-325-0058. Participation in the natural history program the evening prior to the trip is strongly recommended. Participants are also encouraged to bring binoculars, camera, water and snacks. The tour van leaves the park between 5:45 a.m. and 6:35 a.m., depending on the date, and usually returns to the park at around 10:30 a.m. Package price of $150 per couple ($110 per single) includes one night's lodging, dinner on night of arrival, bagged breakfast and transportation to and from the elk preserve the following morning. Stay the night before or after with package for an extra $45. The cost for the tour only is $20 and with a bagged breakfast it's $30. Call 1-800-325-0058 for reservations and information.

Our View

Protect the now, but build for then

Today's rally in our nation's capital should serve as a powerful reminder of the importance of coal to our national energy infrastructure and to the economy of greater Appalachia.

But that is only half of the picture. Nobody can dispute that Eastern Kentucky is dependent on coal for its livelihood or that additional restrictions on the industry will have a ripple effect felt negatively across the region. Regardless of what advancements are made in the realm of alternative energy production, it will likely remain that way for many years, probably for as long as any of us remain alive.

By the same token, the movement of history cannot be ignored. Just as it cannot be disputed that coal remains an integral part of our nation's economy now and for the foreseeable future, it is equally obvious that there will come a time when that is not the case.

Yes, coal remains important to Eastern Kentucky ... too important. Those of us who have spent our lives in this region know full well just how cyclical the industry can be, regardless of outside influence. Choosing to remain overly reliant on coal will only leave all of us at the mercy of the fluctuations of a fickle marketplace.

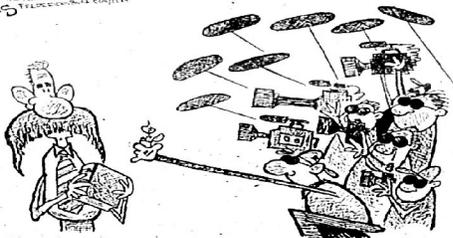

We have noted before that there is no reason why Eastern Kentucky could not be at the forefront alternative energy production, and coal companies would be well-positioned to lead such an effort, protecting their future and currying favor with federal regulators in the process.

While it is important for us to fight to preserve the status quo, we will not be doing ourselves any favors if, in our attempts to defend one industry, we lose sight of the need to grow others. Diversification of the region's economy is necessary during boom times and bust, and all the more so with coal facing an uncertain future.

So yes, continue to fight to preserve our region's livelihood. But at the same time, plan for a future that can survive independently.

International Day of Peace: A call for participation

by JOHN G. SHIBER, PhD

Next Tuesday, Sept. 21, is the International Day of Peace (Peace Day). It was established back in 1981 by members of the United Nations/UN General Assembly in the hope of strengthening the ideals of peace within and among all nations and peoples. They also wanted it to serve as a reminder that the UN is permanently committed to peace, above all interests or differences of any kind.

Millions of people worldwide commemorate Peace Day in big and small ways, ranging from private gatherings to public concerts and forums where hundreds of thousands participate. The beauty of it is that anyone anywhere can create a way to observe this day.

It can be as simple as lighting a candle or just sitting in silent meditation. Or it can involve getting your co-workers, organization, community or government engaged in a large event.

The entire UN system and many individuals, groups and organizations around the world engage in activities on Peace Day that contribute to ceasefires, end conflict, bridge cultural divides and create tolerance.

The 2010 International of Peace Day campaign slogan is Peace=Future. The math is easy. It focuses on activating world youth to engage in imaginative projects in sports, the arts, culture, religion, academics, etc... that are geared toward local or global peace efforts.

"This International Day comes with a challenge for young people everywhere," says U.N. Secretary-General, Ban Ki-moon. "Expand on your work to build peace. Share your plans and ideas, with creativity and passion. The world's concerns will soon be in your hands." In this spirit, the Secretary-General calls on them to tell him about their projects for peace. If a young person or group of youngsters you know develops a successful Peace Day activity let them write a story about what they did and send it to him (See: www.un.org/en/events/peace-day/2010/index.shtml).

As Mr. Ki-moon said, "Only in a peaceful environment will young people realize their full potential - and young people have the potential to start building that peaceful world today."

Sept. 21 is a day to reflect on what we can do in our lives to promote world peace and support those who devote their lives trying to achieve it. Don't underestimate the impact that we and millions of other people in the world can have when we come together on that day, even if only for the traditional minute of noisier silence.

Paul will defend Constitution

The recent attack propaganda by the liberal (or, if you prefer to label it, "progressive") news media and the Democratic candidate against pro-constitutional Senate candidate, Republican Rand Paul, reminds students of history of the tactics employed by the primary socialist of the World War II era. His most famous quote was, "If you tell a lie often enough, people will believe it." His name was Adolph Hitler.

We presently have a chance, quite possibly the last one, to turn our country around. If the voters can see through this maze of misinformation and select those candidates across this nation who understand the very critical situation which confronts America, we can begin to move our government back to the fine document which provided our people with the freedom to build the country which has given so many opportunities to seekers of the American dream.

For the past several years, some elected officials have scoffed at the United States Constitution. One president actually referred to it as, "It's just a piece of paper." Apparently, it interferes with the personal, selfish plans of the officials.

Originally authored by James Madison, the United States Constitution is the planet's most unique document, because of the liberty it gives to the individual states and to our people.

Let's elect the candidates who will work to return our government to the Constitution, the document that has been admired around the world. Dr. Rand Paul is one of those dedicated, knowledgeable individuals who will uphold our Constitution.

It doesn't matter how we are registered to vote — independent, Democrat or Republican — but it is of great importance that we recognize that this election is crucial to our future, as well as to future generations.

Hattie will continue Jackie's legacy

Hattie Owens is the most qualified candidate for District 2 magistrate. Not only did she work alongside her late husband, Jackie, and the county road crew, she is also aware of many infrastructure problems already affecting the county, like clean water, sewer, county roads and bridges. During Jackie's tenure as magistrate, Hattie would be aware of the problems and help him take care of the situations as quickly as possible.

Several times, members of our family passed away, and I called Jackie about fixing a road for a cemetery. It was usually taken care of the next morning. Hattie will continue this tradition.

Because of the untimely death of her husband, she will not be listed on your ballot for District 2 magistrate. In order to vote for Hattie Owens, you must write in "Hattie Owens" in the write-in slot.

Anyone having problems doing the write-in process should ask a poll worker for help.

Assistance for July flood tops $14.3 million

LEXINGTON — Areas of Kentucky struck by severe storms, flooding and mudslides in July are showing signs of recovery.

To date, more than $14.3 million has been approved in federal disaster assistance grants and loans for homeowners, renters and business owners. Of that figure, more than $6.2 million has gone to meet housing needs in Pike County, the first county designated for Individual Assistance.

Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), Kentucky Division of Emergency Management (KYEM) and U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) officials have been working together since President Obama's July 23 disaster declaration, which came two days after Governor Beshear requested federal help.

"As cleanup continues and lives are being rebuilt, FEMA, other federal agencies, state and local governments, community and faith-based groups and voluntary agencies will continue to do all that we can to help Kentuckians on their road to recovery," Federal Coordinating Officer Terry L. Quarles said.

FEMA Community Relations specialists have been on the ground, going door to door in Pike County since July 25. They also served Carter, Lewis, Madison, Mason and Rowan neighborhoods when those counties were added to the disaster declaration.

By the time their outreach mission ends today, Community Relations teams will have visited more than 4,500 homes, 1,000 businesses, 170 community-based organizations and 217 faith-based organizations.

"Those numbers are just indicators of the populations served in the counties affected by the disaster," KYEM Director John W. Heltzel said. "There is a force multiplier effect to consider when a visit to one church can mean 200 people heard the announcement about disaster assistance."

Kentuckians also listened to the mitigation message of how to rebuild safer and stronger to lessen the impact of the next severe weather event. FEMA Mitigation specialists staffed displays at Lowe's in Pikeville and Farmers True Value Hardware in Grayson, Carter County for several weeks. They also participated in community meetings and special events, including "Flood Relief for Kids" at the Expo Center in Pikeville and the Carter County Fair.

In all, mitigation specialists talked with more than 8,000 people and distributed nearly 14,000 pieces of literature. Publications available ranged from technical rebuilding manuals to the field handouts with information on how to make a family disaster plan or get a pet ready in an emergency.

"With our mitigation outreach we hope we can better prepare for, and perhaps prevent, similar devastating impacts. Kentuckians in the future, State Hazard Mitigation Officer Leslie Mahoney said.

Mitigation experts and Community Relations teams also supported state-federal Disaster Recovery Centers located in areas where Kentuckians affected by the disaster could get in-person help with FEMA registration and SBA loan applications. The two remaining centers in Pike County will be open 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday until Sept. 17.

FEMA voluntary agency liaisons have been working with Kentucky counterparts and community groups to establish a Long Term Recovery Committee in Pike County to help with needs not met through federal and state disaster programs. The committee also is continuing to build on a public-private housing collaboration in Pikeville that can serve as a model for other communities devastated by disaster.

Federally funded assistance programs also available to help Kentuckians recover include Disaster Unemployment Assistance, Crisis Counseling and Disaster Legal Services.

Following are highlights of disaster financial assistance to individuals through Thursday, Sept. 9:

- More than $8.5 million in Housing Assistance grants from FEMA's Individuals and Households Program for temporary housing and home repairs.

- Nearly $806,000 in Other Needs Assistance, a joint state-federal program that helps homeowners and renters replace personal property and to help meet medical, dental, funeral, transportation and other serious disaster-related needs not covered by insurance or other federal, state and charitable aid programs.

- More than $5 million in U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) low-interest disaster loans. These loans are available to homeowners and renters as well as businesses and non-profit organizations of all sizes.

- More than 2,400 people have registered with FEMA for state and federal disaster assistance.
- Nearly 2,200 damaged homes have been inspected by FEMA.
- 2,850 residents have visited Disaster Recovery Centers operated jointly by FEMA and the Commonwealth of Kentucky, with support from SBA.

The deadline to register for assistance is Sept. 21. The FEMA toll-free registration number is 800-621-FEMA (3362) or TTY 800-462-7585. Registration is also possible online at www.DisasterAssistance.gov.

Rogers announces Congressional Award District Committee for southeastern Kentucky

HAZARD — U.S. Rep. Hal Rogers has appointed eight community leaders from Southern and Eastern Kentucky to serve on Kentucky's Fifth District Congressional Award District Committee. The Congressional Award recognizes students who are active in their communities and helps them achieve goals they set to better themselves and the world around them. From public service, personal development, physical fitness and exploration, this prestigious program recognizes our youth for all their hard work and gives them the tools they need to succeed in life. "I am honored to be part of the Congressional Award program and I am grateful for each and every member serving on this District Committee," said Rogers. "As coaches, teachers, mentors and more, these eight individuals are an inspiration to our students and will help them to achieve their dreams. When our young people know that they have the support of those around them, there is no limit to what they can achieve. I want to encourage each and every student throughout Southeastern Kentucky to participate in this program. The strength of our region is from our people, and I for one want to ensure that our future leaders are recognized for their hard work and have every opportunity available to them." The Congressional Award was created by Congress in order to promote and recognize initiative, service and achievement in America's youth. The Congressional Award provides a unique opportunity for young people to set and achieve personally challenging goals that build character and foster community service, personal development, and citizenship. All students are encouraged to participate and can register online at www.congressionaward.org. The Congressional Award District Committee is made up of individuals

Students throughout the region are already active in sports teams, PRIDE and UNITE youth programs, volunteerism and more. It is the goal of the District Committee to reach out to these students and give them the opportunity to be recognized for all that they are currently doing within their communities. which will be announced next month. "It is an honor to receive the award," Penix said. "It was a student nomination. By being nominated by a student, I feel like it is even more of an honor." All 24 teachers will be honored at a ceremony in Frankfort at the Capitol on Oct. 19. Representatives of the Kentucky Department of Education, the office of Gov. Steve Beshear and Ashland Inc. will be at the ceremony to recognize the Kentucky elementary, middle and high school Teachers of the Year. From the group of three finalists, the Kentucky Teacher of the Year will be selected and will represent Kentucky in the National Teacher of the Year competition.

Ashland will present cash awards to the 24 teachers at the ceremony, and the three finalists will receive custom-designed glassware commemorating their accomplishments. The 24 teachers will be honored at a special luncheon on Oct. 19. Judging was conducted in August by a blue-ribbon panel of veteran educators. Applications included teaching philosophies, teaching experience and involvement in communities as well as letters of recommendation from peers, students, parents, administrators and others. Since 1988, more than $600,000 has been awarded to approximately 400 Kentucky teachers from grades K-12.

However, less taxable property was available for the 2010-11 tax year, meaning that taxes would have had to have been to be raised in order to generate the same revenue. According to KRS 132.010, "In no event shall the compensating tax rate be a rate which, when applied to the total current year assessment of all classes of taxable property, produce an amount of revenue less than was produced in the preceding year from all classes of taxable property." The tax rate for motor vehicle and watercraft was set last week at 55.4 cents per $100, which is the same rate as last year.

This started the long process of meetings with the Army Corps and the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife. # Time runs out on final drive as Bears fall to KWC

TIMES STAFF REPORT

OWENSBORO - After the first offensive set of the second half, Kentucky Wesleyan College posted a 34-13 lead and appeared ready to cruise past Pikeville College at Steele Stadium on Saturday night. But the guests had other ideas.

Kentucky Wesleyan (1-1) got a four-touchdown performance from senior quarterback Chris Owen, who threw for 335 yards in the win on 25-of-39 in the air.

two of the touchdowns, scoring on plays of five and eight yards. The other scoring pass was to junior Axel Rivas and covered 13 yards.

Pikeville (0-2), however, offset it on the scoreboard if not the numbers from Hoskins, who threw three touchdown passes and ran for another.

In the end, the difference in the game was a pair of Matt Wilson field goals, a 21-yarder to open scoring in the middle of the first period and the other from 30 yards, out with 6:05 left in the third.

Trailing 34-21, Hoskins led the Bears on a seven-play, 87-yard drive that ended on an eight-yard keeper. Sophomore Mike Heise's PAT made it 34-28 with 9:56 left.

A score late in the third period and another early in the fourth brought the Beags back within a touchdown, but their final three drives were unable to produce an offense and the Panthers escaped with a 34-28 win.

Pikeville's final opportunity to win the game began at their own 13-yard line with 3:28 to play. The Bears ran 11 plays and converted two fourth-down opportunities before standing third-and-eight at the Wesleyan 39 with only eight seconds left.

Hoskins' run was the only one of eight touchdowns in the game that came on the ground.

Sophomore quarterback Trevor Hoskins tossed a 191-yard touchdown to junior Cliff Thomas as the horn sounded to end the game.

Pikeville outgained the Panthers 420 yards to 354, thanks largely to a huge rushing attack that finished with 229 yards on 41 carries (5.6 yards per carry). The Bears were led by junior tailback B.J. Iverson, who had 21 carries for 151 yards.

Defensively, the Bears were led by true freshman Larry West with eight tackles (six solos). Freshman Jade Haddix had six solo tackles in the loss.

The teams were often bogged down by excessive penalties. In the game, they combined to be flagged 25 times for a total of 256 yards.

Hoskins will return to action a week from Saturday when they playing their home opener, entertaining Shorter College at 1:30 p.m. at the W.C. Hambley Athletics Complex.

EVERYBODY'S SCIENCE

Why reading at the table is actually good for you

by SANDY MILLER HAYS
AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH SERVICE

Chances are, you grew up hearing, "No reading at the table! Sit right along with 'Don't cross your eyes, they'll get stuck that way.'"

Now that we're grown-ups, we've probably admitted to ourselves that at least some of what Mom said was right, and we might even have laid a few of those sayings on our own kids (and perhaps even grandkids). But today I'm going to get crosswise of Mom and give you some contrary advice: Please do read at the table — especially the breakfast table!

See that box of breakfast cereal sitting there? Flip it over to the side panel that has the nutrition information label — and no, I have no idea why they have to use such microscopic type — and run your eyes down the list of vitamins. Probably well down the list, you'll hopefully see "folic acid" — and if you're lucky, it'll show the percentage of the recommended daily amount of folic acid in a single serving of that cereal as 100 percent. If folic acid isn't there at all ... well, you might want to rethink your breakfast cereal preference.

What's so great about folic acid? It's the form we're most likely to get, in our store-bought foods, of folate, a Key B vitamin. While all the B vitamins nourish the brain, folate is shaping up into something of a super star.

An Agricultural Research Service (ARS) nutritionist in California has been working on studies of the role B vitamins may play in preventing decline in brain function. Those studies are part of a much bigger, multi-year investigation called the Sacramento (Calif.) Area Latino Study on Aging, or "SALSA." SALSA began in 1996 and has attracted nearly 1,800 Hispanic seniors, ages 60 to 101 years, as volunteers. The nutritionist says these studies are needed because so many studies until now on B vitamins have given inconsistent or conflicting results.

In this recent study, an analysis of volunteers' blood samples showed that lower levels of folate were associated with symptoms of dementia and poor brain function, also called "cognitive decline," as determined by standard tests of memory and other factors. Even more alarming, these impairments were detectable even though less than 1 percent of the volunteers were actually deficient in folate!

In women — but not in men — low levels of folate were associated with symptoms of depression. In fact, the female volunteers whose plasma folate levels were in the lowest third were more than twice as likely to have symptoms of depression as volunteers in the highest third. That gives researchers new evidence of an association between lower blood folate and depression, and we've known for a while that depression can affect brain function.

Based on this new information, it sounds like a bowl of cereal as a mid-afternoon snack isn't so eccentric after all — in fact, quite the opposite!

Just not to cereal, but still want do your brain a favor? Chow down on some blueberries instead, ARS researchers say.

In tests with laboratory mice, that single dietary change allowed mice with a genetic tendency toward Alzheimer's disease to perform as well as healthy mice in maze tests. The researchers studied mice that carried a genetic mutation for promoting increased amounts of amyloid beta in the brain. That's a protein molecule that builds up neurotic plaques, the "hardening of the brain" seen in Alzheimer's disease.

For the study, beginning with mice at four months of age, which is the

ROGERS SCHOLARS

WKU to begin offering scholarship to program graduates

Western Kentucky University is the newest partner to join a growing list of colleges and universities in Kentucky and Tennessee offering scholarship opportunities to graduates of The Center for Rural Development's Rogers Scholars summer youth leadership program.

WKU President Dr. Gary A. Ransdell joined Lonnie Lawson, president and CEO of The Center, and U.S. Congressman Harold "Hal" Rogers (KY-05) Sept. 10 at The Center in Somerset to announce that the university will offer scholarships to rising high school juniors from across Southern and Eastern Kentucky who become Rogers Scholars graduates.

"We are very pleased to support the Rogers Scholars program by providing up to five scholarships for participants who wish to attend WKU," Ransdell said. "Participants in this program exhibit the traits we look for in future WKU students, including skills in leadership, technology, entrepreneurship and community service. We have a wonderful example in Lindsey Westerfield, a 2001 Rogers Scholar and 2007 and 2010 WKU graduate who now coordinates recruiting for the WKU Honors College."

The scholarships will be made available to qualified applicants who graduate from a one-week summer session of Rogers Scholars held on the campus of The Center. During the summer of 2010, a record 73 students graduated from the program, which focuses on building leadership and entrepreneurial skills in participants as the region's next generation of leaders. This was the largest class to graduate from Rogers Scholars in the history of the 12-year program.

Named in honor of Rogers, Rogers Scholars — The Center's flagship youth program — was developed in 1998 as an action step toward meeting Rogers' goal that "no young person should have to leave home to find his or her future."

"These scholarships truly bring the dream of the Rogers Scholars program full circle," said Rogers. "Our students face more challenges and more competition today, so we must remain committed to offering them every possible resource close to home. Thanks to schools like Western Kentucky University, the extra efforts of our region's best and brightest students are being rewarded in a way that will add to their success. A competitive workforce starts with a well-educated generation."

"I applaud President Ransdell and Western Kentucky University for making a commitment to the youth of Southern and Eastern Kentucky through the Rogers Scholars youth leadership program,

"Lawson said. "The scholarships awarded by Western Kentucky University will provide a great incentive for the region's youth to continue their education in the place where they call home."

Jessica Melton, who coordinates The Center's Rogers Scholars program, said the commitment from the university represents a significant investment in the future leaders of Southern and Eastern Kentucky.

"The goal of Rogers Scholars program is to challenge our students to use their skills and talents to make their home communities and this region a better place to live," Melton, associate director of leadership and training, said. "The Center shares Congressman Rogers' vision that we can change this region if we can keep some of the brightest and most talented students in Kentucky."

Rogers Scholars emphasizes technological skills development and fosters an entrepreneurial spirit, leadership, and commitment to rural Kentucky.

During the last 12 years, 732 high school students across Southern and Eastern Kentucky have graduated from Rogers Scholars and been eligible to apply for scholarship opportunities, valued at $7.2 million, from 14 participating colleges and universities in Kentucky, and one university in Tennessee.

Students from Allen Elementary recently visited the National Science Center's Mobile Discovery Unit. Housed in a 18-wheeler, the mobile center travels across the country presenting programs designed to show young people that studying science and math is fun as well as essential to their future.

equivalent of early adulthood in humans, half of the brain-plaques mice ate a diet that included blueberry extract for eight months. The other brain-plaques mice ate a standard diet, as did a group of mice which didn't have the amyloid-plaque mutation. When the mice were 12 months old - the equivalent of middle age in humans - all the groups were tested for their performance in a maze. The brain-plaques mice that ate the blueberry extract did just as well as the healthy mice, and they did much better than the brain-plaques mice that didn't eat the blueberry extract. So, come to think of it, when you settle down with your bowl of breakfast cereal as a snack, you might want to toss a few blueberries in there as well!

IF YOU THINK A BICYCLE WRECK IS NO BIG DEAL, THE NEXT TIME YOU ARE IN YOUR CAR GOING 30 MPH, STRIP DOWN TO YOUR UNDERWEAR AND JUMP OUT

Cyclists are not a nuisance, an obstacle or in your way. In Kentucky, bicycles have the same rights to use roads and highways as cars and trucks. But keep in mind that cyclists are at greater risk of injury or death in the event of a wreck. That is why it is important to use caution and courtesy when you encounter a bicycle. Pass them only when it is clear, give them a few extra feet when passing, and never do anything to startle a cyclist, such as blowing your horn, passing too close or yelling at them.
