Gun charge leads to drug find

by JARRID DEATON
FEATURES WRITER

DWALE — A Dwale man was arrested on multiple drug charges last week after officers served an arrest warrant on a charge of receiving a stolen firearm.

Robert Lee Lafferty, 34, was charged with six counts of second-degree possession of a controlled substance and six counts of controlled substance prescription not in the proper container.

According to the police report, officers located pills in Lafferty's pockets after searching him while serving the arrest warrant on the stolen firearm charge.

Lafferty was transported to the Floyd County Detention Center on a $5,000 cash bond.

A motion by Lafferty's attorney, Jonathon Coomes, to reduce the $5,000 cash bond was overruled by District Court Judge James R. Allen.

WHEELWRIGHT — Though not official until the commission's next meeting, city officials in Wheelwright say they will rescind an ordinance passed last month to annex sections of Bypro just outside city limits.

Officials said Wednesday that a series of complaints from business owners who would be included in the annexation led them to decide to back away from the plan, which first started as discussion in November of last year.

The Tuesday meeting at which city leaders say the ordinance will be rescinded will begin at 6 p.m. at city hall.

The city commission passed the ordinance during its last meeting on Jan. 18, annexing sections of land just outside the city limits known commonly as Bypro.

A first reading of the ordinance took place in November and the city had no meetings during the month of December, resulting in the second reading and passage in January.

The areas that would have been incorporated into city included land and property along Route 306 leading out of the city that included the bowling alley, a clinic and a pharmacy.

In addition to incorporating this property into the city, the commission had also voted to annex areas beyond the bridge leading out of the city at the junction of Route 306 and Route 122.

Turning left at the bridge and onto Route 122, the city had hoped to expand its boundaries to include all businesses on the left side, which includes long-standing establishments such as the restaurant

DESERTED STREETS

A messy snowstorm Wednesday afternoon and evening left city streets more or less empty that night. The storm slickened roads and led to school being called off for the remainder of the week.

Man charged with assault, imprisonment

HI HAT — A Floyd County man was arrested this past week in connection to a complaint taken out against him dating back to November.

Jimmie D. Moore, of Hi Hat, was arrested on Feb. 3 and charged with fourth-degree assault and unlawful imprisonment.

The charges came following a complaint from a Hi Hat woman claiming that on Nov. 16, 2010, Moore "pushed, tried to suffocate and slung" her on the floor of the residence.

Following this, the victim alleges that Moore then restrained her in the home by locking her inside and then supposedly tearing loose the phone line.

It is not stated in the complaint or in Moore's arrest citation on file at the Floyd County Justice Center for how long Moore allegedly held the woman inside the home.

Moore pleaded innocent to both charges during his arraignment on Feb. 3 and his bond was set at $2,500 or 10 percent before he was jailed. There were also conditions that if he were to make bond that he stay at least 1,000 feet from the victim.

The next scheduled court appearance for Moore is set for June 20 when he will appear for a pretrial conference.

New truck aids God's Pantry in food delivery

PRESTONSBURG — God's Pantry Food Bank has for years provided food donations, totaling some 21 million pounds last year alone to more than 200,000 Kentucky residents, but has done so with the use of smaller trucks.

Tuesday and Wednesday, the use of several trucks and also the occasional hiring of other trucking companies ended, as the organization put to use its first 18-wheeler semi-truck to drop off food donations at the Prestonsburg distribution center.

The food dropped at the center will be given out to the county's food pantries over the next several weeks, organizers said, and totaled at about 30,000 pounds for the single load.

The purchase of the 18-wheeler was made possible through a grant of $250,000 from the United States Department of Agriculture Food and Nutrition Service, money which also

Hueysville man buys winning lottery ticket from coworker

HUEYSVILLE — A Hueysville man is $10,000 richer after selecting five out of the six numbers in the Kentucky Lottery's new game, Decades of Dollars, on Monday.

Dalton Howard, 55, purchased the winning ticket at Woody's Carryout in Hueysville.

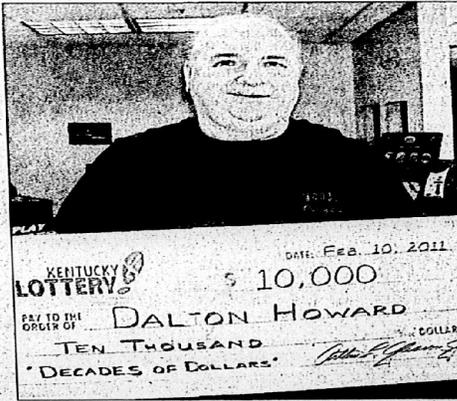

"It's still a shock," Howard said. "I played the old game, Win for Life, for years. The last winning number was 20 and I had 26. I could have won $250,000."

Howard already has plans for the cash, and he is keeping a level head about the influx of unexpected funds.

"I'm going to pay off some debts, that's for sure," Howard said.

Melissa Tackett, who owns Woody's Carryout and also works with Howard at Potter Medical Clinic, is happy to have sold the winning ticket.

Robinson Scholars Program seeking applicants

LEXINGTON — The University of Kentucky Robinson Scholars Program (RSP) is currently accepting applications for its Leadership Pool, a new initiative for the program's high school enrichment component. The application is only available online here and must be received by March 4.

To be eligible to apply for the program, applicants must be current high school freshmen who reside in the program's service region and the parents or guardians of students cannot hold four-year college degrees at the time of a student's accept-

Applications being accepted for Rogers Explorers program

Eighth-grade students looking to develop skills in leadership, science, math, and community service can build all of those skills and more—all in a college environment—in The Center for Rural Development's Rogers Explorers youth program this summer.

The Center is accepting applications through March 4 from current eight-grade students in your community and throughout its 42-county primary service area interested in becoming Rogers Explorers.

Rogers Explorers is an intensive three-day, two-night summer youth leadership program held on the campuses of Lindsey Wilson College in Columbia, the University of the Cumberlands in Williamsburg, and Eastern Kentucky University in Richmond.

"The Center for Rural Development partners with these three leading institutions to give middle school students a one-of-a-kind learning experience," Lonnie Lawson, president and CEO of The Center, said. "We show them what it is like to live and study on a college campus, and allow them to participate in hands-on activities related to science and math."

"Rogers Explorers also gives participants a chance to fine tune their leadership skills and develop a network of friends and resources throughout Southern and Eastern Kentucky," Lawson added.

Applicants must have a strong interest in math and science. All activities are designed to be both educational and fun.

Dates for 2011 summer sessions of Rogers Explorers are as follows: June 5-7, Lindsey Wilson College; June 8-10, University of the Cumberlands; and July 20-22, Eastern Kentucky University.

"The Center is excited to see these young middle school students grow their leadership skills and develop their potential as the region's next generation of leaders," Lawson said. "Thanks to the partnerships we have established with our host colleges and universities, we are giving more and more students across our region an opportunity to become Rogers Explorers."

The program, coordinated and supervised by The Center, a nonprofit organization located in Somerset, Ky., is provided at no charge to students or their families.

For more information about the program or to download an application form, contact The Center at 606-677-6000 or visit www.centertech.com and click on the Rogers Explorers link to download an application. All applications must be mailed and postmarked by the March 4 deadline.

ance into the Leadership Pool. The Robinson Leadership Pool initiative is a new approach to selection for RSP. The Leadership Pool will admit 110 current high school freshmen. At least three students from each eligible county will be selected. Future Robinson Scholars will be selected from the Leadership Pool.

The program will select its first class in the Leadership Pool based on academic achievement, enrollment in the pre-college curriculum, involvement in extra-curricular and enrichment activities and participation in community service. Because the program's intent is to create college-going opportunities, family income is also considered in the selection process. Students selected into the Leadership Pool will be eligible to participate in academic enrichment programs provided by RSP. The new high school initiative will focus on college academic preparation, particularly in math and science and leadership development. Selection into the leadership pool does not guarantee receipt of a Robinson Scholarship, which is a full, four-year scholarship to UK. Currently, the program offers 29 scholarships, or one for each county in the service region. However, those who remain active in the Leadership Pool will greatly improve their chances to complete a bachelor's degree. The next class of Robinson Scholars will be selected from active Leadership Pool participants at the end of their junior year of high school. Those selected to receive the full scholarship to the University of Kentucky will illustrate the core values of the program which include pursuit of academic excellence, dedication to personal development and commitment to community service. The Robinson Scholars Program service area includes the following 29 counties: Bell, Breathitt, Carter, Clay, Elliott, Estill, Floyd, Harlan, Jackson, Johnson, Knott, Knox, Laurel, Lawrence, Lee, Leslie, Letcher, Magoffin, Martin, McCreary, Menifee, Morgan, Owalee, Perry, Pike, Powell, Rockcastle, Whitley and Wolfe.

The applications will be accepted through March 4, 2011. For further information contact Jeff Spradling, director, at (859) 257-5230 or via email at jspra2@uky.edu.

Our View Good for now, good for later

Floyd County has a lot to crow about, these days. Just a glance at the front page of Wednesday's paper will serve as a testament to that.

On one hand, the Betsy Layne High School boys' basketball team brought home the trophy from this year's All A playoffs — the first state championship any Floyd County team has won since Prestonsburg High School won the baseball playoffs in 1948.

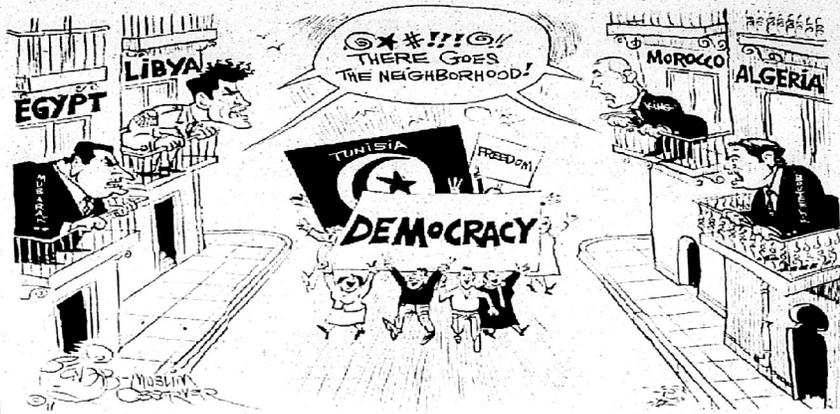

On the other hand, the Prestonsburg High School Dance Cats yet again won the 15th Region championship and will soon be headed to compete for a state title of their own.

This is obviously good news, and not just because winning is a good thing (which it is). No, this only goes to show that the youth of Floyd County are deeply committed to achieving excellence in whatever they pursue in their lives. That can only mean good things as these young men and women transition into adulthood and take the reins of power to shape our region.

It is also a reflection not only of their commitment and individual skills, but also of the community as a whole that supports them.

So, hats off, to the Bobcats and Dance Cats, and to Floyd County as a whole!

Beyond the Beltway

American history requires study, not plastic surgery

by DONALD KAUL
OtherWords

The N-word is perhaps the most powerful word in the English language. It carries 400 years of brutal American history that can strike with the force of a lash.

Nice people don't say it. F-bombs are soggy firecrackers compared to the explosive power of ... well, you know.

So it's easy to see why an educator and publisher in Alabama would choose to delete the word from a new edition of Huckleberry Finn, substituting "slave" in its stead.

Alan Gribben, a professor of English at Auburn University, said he was concerned Huck Finn had all but disappeared from high school reading lists — largely because of objections to That Word — and he was trying to put out an edition that would be more acceptable to school officials.

"I am by no means sanitizing Mark Twain," said Gribben, as the predictable waves of criticism began to roll over him. "I just had the idea to get us away from obsessing about this one word, and just let the stories stand alone."

With sympathy for Mr. Gribben, I happen to think that Mark Twain is our greatest writer and Huckleberry Finn his greatest book. But I would not relish the thought of standing before a high school class of white, African-American, Latino, and Asian kids and reading aloud passages that contained That Word.

And it would be hard to pick a passage that did not contain it. It is sprinkled throughout the book as copiously as commas, more than 200 times. You can teach around that, I suppose, but that's hard duty.

But isn't that why they pay high school teachers the big bucks? — OK, so maybe they don't make big bucks. They do, however, get paid. And if a teacher can't put the word in its proper context — as an artifact of another time — then he or she shouldn't teach it.

One of Twain's great contributions to our literature was that he wrote the way people actually talked. The N-word is the way they talked back then.

I suppose, judged by current standards, Twain was a racist. But by the standards of the time, he was not. He was what passed for a liberal in the South, and the thrust of his book is that whites and blacks share a common humanity that renders slavery an abomination.

Substituting "slave" for the N-word, as the new edition does, robs the book of much of its juice. It's the literary equivalent of putting a bra on the Venus de Milo.

It's a great book. Teach it by all means, but teach it well. And if you can't — don't.

The new Republican Congress faced a somewhat similar challenge as it began its work and, of course, failed it.

The Republican leadership in the House decided it would be a good idea to begin the session by reading the Constitution out loud, alternating Republicans and Democrats as readers. You would think that would be a fairly straightforward thing, right?

Wrong. One Republican freshman, Rep. Mike Fitzpatrick of Pennsylvania, failed to attend the swearing-in ceremony that morning, preferring to attend a fund-raiser instead. So while he was allowed to read a piece of the Constitution, he wasn't really a member of the House.

House Speaker John Boehner, ironically, is on record revealing how weak a grasp he's got on the Constitution. At a tea party rally in November 2009, he waved a copy of the Constitution and pledged to "stand here with our founding fathers, who wrote in the preamble 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.'" A crowd-pleasing moment, but that line happens to be in the Declaration of Independence.

Plus, during the House recital in January, GOP leaders deleted the part of the text that counted slaves as three-fifths of real (white) people. How sensitive.

Despite its role as a living document, the Constitution — like Huckleberry Finn — is in many ways a reflection of its time.

HB182 will destroy payday lending industry

An entire industry is under siege in Kentucky. Special interest groups are lobbying state lawmakers to pass House Bill 182, an ill-conceived and misguided piece of legislation that will destroy Kentucky's payday lending industry, while adding to the state's unemployment rolls and increasing the amount of unused retail space.

Payday lending stores provide a viable, legal product that Kentuckians want, need and use. Stores around the state and in our community provide customers access to short-term loans, that provide cash for emergencies, groceries, prescriptions, household supplies, school fees and discretionary spending.

HB182 will eliminate payday lending in Kentucky. The bill's strict mandates make it financially impossible for payday lenders to continue to provide a product used by nearly 200,000 Kentuckians a year. Without payday loans, Kentuckians will be forced to use more expensive alternates, such as unregulated internet loans, bounced check fees and bank overdraft charges.

If the legislation passes, more than 2,000 people who work in payday lending stores will be out of a job. More than 600 retail locations will close, increasing the amount of vacant commercial real estate across Kentucky and inflicting economic damage on landlords.

The state's economy will also lose. The payday lending industry provides $35 million in payroll, $20 million in rent, maintenance and utilities and $32.5 million in goods and services purchased from Kentucky vendors.

When cash is tight or when consumers need quick access to affordable cash, they turn to payday lenders.

HB182 is an assault on capitalism and free markets. The government should not dictate how people spend their money and how businesses operate.

Please call and oppose HB182, (800) 372-7181. Say, "No!"

ARE YOU SEARCHING FOR TRUTH AND THE MEANING OF LIFE?
This is what we're looking for too!
I know it will also work for you!

1. Hear the Word (Rom. 10:17)
2. Believe in Christ (John 8:24 / 14:31)
3. Turn from Sin (Luk. 13:3, Rom. 6:23-26)
4. Confess Christ (Acts 8:37, Matt. 10:32-33)
5. Be Baptized (Buried in Water) (Mark 16:16, Acts 22:47, Matt. 28:19-20)
6. Walk in Newness of Life (Rom. 6:23)

Wheelwright

Bypro Dairy Bar and the grocery store Hall's Market, as well as the more recently opened Dollar General Store.

Calls to business owners earlier this week for comment on the soon-to-be recalled ordinance were not returned.

Wheelwright Mayor Andy Akers said talks had started in November of annexing the property due in large part to the fact that many of the businesses and homes were already using the city's utilities and were being provided with limited police patrol and fire department protection.

Before deciding to back away from the annexation, Akers had said the city planned to bring other sections of land and property into the city limits, specifically the areas existing to the right just past the bridge along Routes 122. Had the annexation remained in place, businesses and home owners in the areas brought into the city limits would have been required to pay a city tax in addition to taxes already paid to the county.

Board workers get Apple certification

PRESTONSBURG — Three network technicians employed by the Floyd County Board of Education have been recognized as Apple Certified System Technicians after demonstrating a high level of knowledge and the ability to support Apple computers.

Randy Smith, Chris Shepherd and Jeremy Chaffins were three of 37 technicians in Kentucky to complete the training and achieve the rank of Apple Certified System Technicians.

"Technology has become another tool in education," said Supt. Henry Webb. "Having a knowledgeable technology team that is up to date on the increasing number of advances is vital to using this tool in educating kids. We commend them for their continued growth in their field."

According to information provided by the Floyd County Board of Education, the training program is offered through Datastream, which donates computers to local schools. The computers are also used by researchers at the University of Louisville's James Graham Brown Cancer Center to help combat the disease.

"People in Floyd County School District should be very proud of this personal accomplishment," said Biran Gupton, CEO of Datastream. "Not only does this help teachers and students, but it is a great example of Kentucky is developing a high-tech workforce reflective of opportunities in a 21st century workplace."

According to Datastream, the company, "Operates one of the largest managed computing grids in the world. By harnessing the untapped computing power sitting throughout Kentucky's K-12 schools and businesses, the Datastream computing grid allows researchers to access much needed computing capabilities to forward research and commercialization of ideas."

"This helps us take advantage of the latest and greatest technology for our students," said Randy Smith, lead network technician.

Across the school district, 1,415 computers have been installed as part of the Datastream program.

Senate signs off on Bible literacy bill

FRANKFORT — The Bible's role as a work of literature and in shaping historical events should be a course option for high school students, the Senate said in a 34-1 vote yesterday.

Senate Bill 56, sponsored by Sen. Joe Bowen, R-Owensboro, would direct the state Department of Education to develop a course curriculum around the Bible, which local school councils could then approve for teaching in their schools. The course could focus on the Old Testament, the New Testament, or a combination of the two.

"This bill ensures it will be about education, not indoctrination," Bowen said. Under the bill, students could use any translation of the Bible they choose. The course, Bowen said, would be designed not to preach to students or win them over to a single interpretation, but to help them understand the Bible's role in the arts and history.

The course, an elective option, would be classified under the social studies department. "The influence the Bible has had on our society and all of Western Civilization is not something we can evade," Bowen said.

The legislation now moves to the House for its consideration.

Medicaid; higher ed funding bill clears House

FRANKFORT — A proposal to fill a $166.5 million hole in the fiscal year 2011 Medicaid budget and reallocate $18.9 million to higher education before July passed the House by an 80-19 vote today.

House Bill 305, sponsored by House budget committee Rick Rand, D-Bedford, now goes to the Senate for consideration.

Rand told the House that the funding fix under HB 305 would come from moving Medicaid money from fiscal year 2012 to this year's Medicaid budget, while postsecondary funds would be moved from fiscal year 2012 to this fiscal year's higher education budget. Neither move is expected by state budget officials to negatively impact the Medicaid or postsecondary education budgets in 2012.

"We have to give the administration and our governor who has to balance the budget... every tool possible to do that," Rand said.

Not passing HB 305 would force the state to reduce Medicaid by around $600 million over the next six months and lose some federal funding for postsecondary education, Rand said. Cuts in Medicaid reimbursement to hospitals and other health care providers would likely be required to balance the fiscal year 2011 Medicaid budget if the bill does not pass, he added.

The hole in the Medicaid budget was caused by a lack of anticipated enhanced Medicaid funding from the federal government. Rand said part of the $238 million received from the feds that was budgeted by lawmakers last year for the fiscal year 2011 Medicaid budget had to be directed to K-12 education.

State budget officials early last week assured lawmakers on the House budget committee that the reallocation of Medicaid and postsecondary education funds in HB 305 would not impact funds appropriated for other programs and needs included in the 2010-2012 state budget, enacted last year.

Rep. Stan Lee, R-Lexington, questioned the need for the bill when he said state revenue for the first seven months of this fiscal year is up $268 million.

"I think we need to be wary of moving money from one account to another to... hopefully get more federal dollars," said Lee.

HB 305 now goes to the full House for consideration.

Horizons Youth Services named top NJCA operator

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Horizons Youth Services (HYS), which operates the Carl D. Perkins Job Corps Center, has been named the National Job Corps Association Operator of the Year for 2010. Pete Calvo, president of HYS, accepted the award at the recent NJCA Policy Forum held Feb. 1-4 in Washington, D.C.

In selecting HYS for the highest honor presented to Job Corps operators by NJCA, the organization cited Horizons' efforts to chair two standing committees of the Association — Professional Development Committee and NJCA Green Committee, in which Horizons hosted a series of workshops educating Job Corps executive staff on systems development and led the nation on renewable energy and conservation initiatives.

"We at Horizons are delighted to receive this honor," Calvo said. "It is a reflection of Horizons' commitment to excellence in serving the students at our centers and ensuring that they have the education, training and life skills to succeed in today's competitive workplace."

This is the third consecutive year that HYS has been honored at the annual NJCA

Policy Forum. Last year, HYS was named the NJCA 2010 Most Responsive Member, and in 2009, HYS was honored as the NJCA Top Small Business Operator.

Besides the Perkins Job Corps Center, HYS operates the Muhlenberg Career Development Center in Greenville, Ky., and the Sacramento, Calif., Job Corps Center.

In addition to HYS being named the NJCA Top Operator for 2010, all three Horizons-operated centers were named NJCA 12-STAR centers. The STAR program recognizes Job Corps centers for outstanding achievement in educating the public, communities and elected officials about the value of the Job Corps program. Lisa Moore, the business and community liaison for Perkins Job Corps Center, accepted the award on behalf of the center.

The mission of the NJCA is to unite the Job Corps community through activities and services that strengthen the program for the benefit of students, staff and employers.

For additional information about the Carl D. Perkins Job Corps Center, please contact Lisa Moore at moore.lisa@jobcorps.org.

Rebels down Jenkins

Allen Central freshman guard Jenkins leads three-game skid

 SPORTS EDITOR

JENKINS — The Allen Central Rebels made themselves right at home on road in Letcher County Tuesday night. Allen Central junior guard Braxton Tackett tossed in a game-high 31 points to lead the Rebels past Jenkins, 64-53.

With the win, Allen Central stopped a three-game losing streak.

Allen Central edged Jenkins 12-11 in the opening quarter then proceeded to stretch its lead out to double digits. The Rebels led 31-20 at intermission.

Remaining out in front in the second half, Allen Central led 44-30 at the conclusion of the third quarter.

Tackett led a group of six Allen Central scorers. Freshman-guard Junior Handhoe tossed in seven points while senior forward-center Donovan Salyer and junior forward Tyla Cole scored

Big shoutout to Junior Newsome and his Bobcats

by RICK BENTLEY
 TIMES COLUMNIST

I'm about to say something that may seem controversial at first, but hear me out. Or, should I say, read me out. On the surface, this will seem like a complete slap in the face to several people, but it certainly isn't intended that way.

I just want to pat someone on the back, and I'm not a good enough writer to know how to do this without it seeming like I'm ripping on someone else.

But when the time came for a state basketball championship to finally come to Floyd County, it couldn't have happened to a better guy than Junior Newsome. Junior guided an improbable team from Betsy Layne to the All "A" Classic state title last week in Richmond, making it three straight years the small-school crown has belonged to the often down-trodden 15th Region.

I've always liked Junior, always respected him, and enjoyed covering his teams long ago. Heck, when I went to Millard I played against teams coached by Junior Newsome. In fact, Junior had won both of his 15th Region titles before I entered high school.

And last Sunday, there he was, smiling his smile and hugging his assistants and watching his boys dog pile right in the middle of the floor at McBrayer Arena.

Priceless. When I heard a couple of years ago that he was returning to the Betsy Layne bench, I thought two things. First, I thought, what the heck is he thinking? Second, however, was good for him. And good for them.

Let's face it: Betsy Layne isn't the most celebrated school in the region. It sits up on a hill just off U.S. 23 and plays its games down the hill, up the highway and across the road at the D.W. Howard Memorial Gym, a dome so old I played in it in junior high and so fascinatingly constructed that when I played there I could never hear what my coaches were saying from the sideline.

Normally, I expect, it wasn't something terribly

BETSY LAYNE — Fresh off of winning the All "A" Classic state championship, Betsy Layne didn't suffer a letdown Monday night in a 58th District/Floyd County Conference matchup versus Allen Central. The Bobcats held Allen Central to single digits in each quarter and overcame a cold-shooting stretch in the second quarter to defeat the visiting Rebels 47-31 at the Dome.

Betsy Layne won despite shooting only 36.6 percent (15-of-41) from the field. The Bobcats were 13-of-22 from the free throw line.

Senior leadership paced the Bobcats in the district/conference contest. Derek Tackett tossed in a game-high 14 points, Casey Adkins scored 13 and reigning All "A" Classic MVP Nathan Martin added 10 for the Bobcats.

Adkins was very active on the boards, grabbing a game-high 10 rebounds. Tackett rounded up seven rebounds for the Bobcats, which claimed 31 total catoms.

Betsy Layne thrived in the opening quarter, outscoring Floyd County foe Allen Central 19-5. The Rebels, battling back, limited Betsy Layne to a few points in the second quarter. Allen Central outscored Betsy Layne 13-3 in the second quarter, leaving the Bobcats to lead 22-18.

HI HAT — Senior forward Shannon Turner poured in a game-high 38 points as South Floyd defeated longtime 15th Region rival

SHANNON TURNER

Paintsville 77-74 Monday night at Raider Arena.

Turner, hot from start to finish, drained 13 of 16 shots. He was six-of-seven from three-point range.

South Floyd shot 63.6 percent (28-of-44) from the field while making seven-of-13 three-point field goal attempts. The Raiders were 14-of-28 from the foul line.

Turner helped host South Floyd secure an early lead. South Floyd established an early advantage in the opening quarter, outscoring Paintsville 22-12. The Raiders were able to add to their lead in the second quarter.

complimentary. I was far from a great basketball player.

But Junior Newsome has taken a lot of guys like me, who were not built for basketball and who weren't particularly good at it, and won a lot of basketball games in that old dome. I'm sure he's not too far from coaching some kid whose grandfather is a former player.

Here, my friends, is a fact. William Newsome Jr. was a coaching legend a long time before he won the state championship on Sunday. In fact, he didn't need any more titles or crowns or nets for that. He earned his legend long ago.

That said, I'm sure he'll take it. These young men probably a third his age, did something for him that no other player or team has been able to give him. They gave him Kentucky's ultimate prize, or one of them. They gave him a state championship.

In 1987, when Clay County won the state championship, Bobby Keith gave one of the best speeches ever delivered by a coach anywhere. After the title, Bobby said the title wasn't just for Manchester and Clay County, it was for every kid who grew up in the mountains and dreamed of playing in the state tournament. It was for every kid who dreamed of taking the last-second shot on the hoop in his back yard, and winning the title for his school.

That is no longer a dream for Junior Newsome, his staff or the players on the 2011 Betsy Layne Bobcats. It became a reality last Sunday afternoon in Richmond, in front of a throng of blue-clad Bobcats, some of which probably go to Prestonsburg or South Floyd or Allen Central or a school from a neighboring county.

A title is no longer a pipe dream for Betsy Layne. Last Sunday, it became a reality. And that's not an insult to anybody from the mountains. Another one of ours has gone down and gotten it done. They did it for them, to be sure. They also did it for us.

Once again, the 15th Region is a champion. Long live Junior Newsome and the 2011 Betsy Layne Bobcats.

MOVIES FROM THE BLACK LAGOON

'Man-Thing'

by TOM DOTY
TIMES COLUMNIST

A shuffling mass of mud, roots and leaves menaces the people of a backwater town in this horror flick that should be familiar to fans of Marvel Comics.

The success of Marvel's "Spiderman" films led to an open season on their catalogue, which resulted in this terror tale that sprouted from Marvel's horror line of comics.

Tom Doty
Times Columnist

These titles flourished in the early 1970s and featured titles like "Werewolf By Night" and "Brother Voodoo." This boom in horror comics has already been raided once (for the "Blade" films which came from the "Tomb of Dracula" series). Now we get the saga of a swamp creature hell-bent on stopping the industrialization of its environment.

The story begins with a new sheriff arriving in the bayou town of Bywater, so-called because it is on the water. Sheriff Williams soon realizes he has stepped into a powder keg. The locals are ready to rumble with the Schist Company, which has planted an oilrig in a sacred part of the swamp and is busy pumping out petrol. Williams is drawn to the feisty third-grade teacher who is leading the protests, but that might be because she looks more like a Penthouse Pet than a grammar school instructor.

Meanwhile, there is a shaman on the loose and the Schist family is convinced that this backwater wizard is responsible for several missing persons, including the former sheriff. Williams decides to search the swamp himself when he gets word that the Schists have enlisted the aid of a pair of gator-hunting brothers that would make the family from the "Chainsaw Massacre" films look downright presentable by comparison.

Meanwhile, there are plenty of attacks that cause great damage to the company's property, as well as casualties amongst the cast. We only get glimpses of the creature, but that is rectified during the finale. The last reel features plenty of the muck monster as it impales, stabs and shreds the cast like so much fixings at a Shoney's buffet.

This is a decent time-waster, as long as you expect that it isn't "Citizen Kane." The revenge motif may be old, but having a walking salad lay on the punishment is a new twist.

The creature effects are pretty good, as is the gore, which gets messier with each death.

The cast is serviceable but there is one major problem — they are all from New Zealand. I have no problem with companies saving money by shooting there. It's a scenic area and it looks great on film. The actors, however, couldn't do a southern American accent if their careers depended on it. They are all good at emoting but their twang lacks that "thing."

Best line: "What did you do to my deputy? Where is the rest of him?"

Miranda Lambert to perform in Pikeville

by JARRID DEATON
FEATURES WRITER

PIKEVILLE — Miranda Lambert, the Country Music Association Female Vocalist of the Year, will perform in concert at the East Kentucky Expo Center in Pikeville, March 25.

According to information provided by Lambert's management, "All of Miranda's success has left her with an overwhelming sense of responsibility to deliver a live show even better than the one she was already known for. Country fans will witness that commitment as Lambert hits the road with her Revolution Tour."

Lambert has been nominated for the Entertainer of the Year Award by the Academy of Country Music, and is also nominated for other awards, including the Vocal Event of the Year with Sheryl Crow and Loretta Lynn for a cover of Lynn's classic "Coal Miner's Daughter." Lambert is also nominated for Top Female Vocalist, Single Record of the Year and Song of the Year, and two nominations for Video of the Year.

"Having that Texas club circuit experience at an early age and also touring with some of the best in the business for several years, I know what it takes to bring it every night and give fans more than their money's worth," Lambert said.

The concert will also feature Justin Moore and Josh Kelley, two young musicians who are making a name for themselves in the competitive world of country music.

Tickets for the concert go on-sale today at the Appalachian Wireless Box Office and all Ticketmaster outlets. For more information, visit <http://www.eastkyexpo.com>.

Food moods

Food may play a bigger role than just making you grumpy if you're hungry. Sometimes just the smell of a turkey roasting can trigger childhood memories of Thanksgiving or the smell of homemade bread might bring a picture of your grandmother to mind. But did you know the foods you crave could be directly related to how you're feeling?

Recent research shows what many of us knew all along: Our moods dictate what we eat. Here's a few examples. Do any of these sound familiar to you?

* If you crave tough foods, like meat, or hard and crunchy foods, you could be feeling angry.

* If you crave sugars, you could be feeling depressed.

* If you crave soft and sweet foods, like ice cream, you could be feeling anxious.

* If you crave salty foods, you could be stressed.

* If you crave bulky, fill-you-up foods, like crackers and pasta, you could be feeling lonely and sexually frustrated.

* If you crave anything and everything, you could be feeling jealous.

Not everyone will be the same, but recognizing your emotional eating triggers can help you make healthy choices when emotions seem to be ruling you. If you know you turn to a bowl of ice cream every time you are feeling anxious, you can recognize the craving for what it is... just a simply craving.

Helmets prevent head injuries year round

Are winter sports safer than summer sports? I ask this because you don't see many people wearing helmets when they ski, ice skate or snowmobile. My husband says he doesn't need a helmet when he skis because the snow cushions his falls, which are not very frequent.

Over 4 million people in the United States go to the emergency room each year as a result of all kinds of sports and recreational activities. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, an estimated 1.7 million of these emergency visits result from sports-related traumatic brain injury. While most of these individuals are treated and released, around 275,000 require hospitalization, and more than 50,000 die. So, even what seems to be a relatively minor injury should be assessed by a physician to determine the extent of the damage.

Data on traumatic brain injury shows that boys are twice as likely as girls to sustain this type of injury. While motor vehicle accidents are the leading cause of traumatic brain injuries, sports and recreational activities are not far behind as a significant cause.

TBIs occur any time there is a significant blow to the head. They can be open wounds, which are less common, or the much more common closed head injuries. Closed head types of traumatic brain injury are graded as mild, moderate or severe and are more commonly called concussions. Motor vehicle accidents are the most common cause of TBI. The symptoms can include headache, dizziness, nausea, and a lack of coordination. Amnesia, disorientation and confusion can also occur.

Once a person has had a concussion, he or she is at an increased risk for a second one. There is a growing body of evidence that repeated injuries over time can cause permanent neurological damage. If there are repeated mild head injuries over a short period of time, he results can be fatal. This is called second impact syndrome. This occurs when here has been inadequate time for the brain to heal from a previous concussion.

Children are more likely to have head injuries because they are more active than adults, but there has been a steady rise in the number of adult TBIs over the last 20 years. Older people can have a more difficult recovery from a traumatic brain injury than a child, and the short- and long-term consequences can be more profound in an older adult.

Just as skiers wear eye protection to prevent eye damage, they need to wear helmets for head protection. This is true in almost any sport, summer or winter, that has the potential of falls or collisions. Snow is not enough to cushion a head when it comes to falls during skiing. Your husband, along with all skiers, skateboarders and bicyclists, among others, should wear a helmet.

Salome's Stars

Weekly Horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Time is on your side in the early part of the week. But anything left undone by midweek will need to be put into rush mode. The weekend offers choices for you and some special.

TAURUS (April 30 to May 20) Finally getting credit for a contribution is nice for all you idea-generating Ferdinands and Fernandas. But don't sit on your laurels under the cork tree. Use it as a first step to a bigger opportunity.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Despite the progress made, a hint of doubt might set in. That's OK. You need to stop and consider not only what you're doing but also how you are doing. Make adjustments where needed.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The dreamer is dominant in the Moon Child's aspect, but a dollop of hard-headed practicality is coming up fast and jockeying for space. The challenge is to make room for both modes.

LEO (July 23 to August 21) It's a good week for Leos and Leonas to start assessing what they've done and what they plan to do. Moving to a new environment -- home or job-related -- is a possibility for some Cats.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The week calls for Virgos to make tough decisions, but in a way that leaves the door open for changes. Ask for advice from someone who has been in the position you're in now.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Disappointments are never easy to take, but you have the ability to learn from them and go on to success. Meanwhile, continue to build up your contacts. You'll need them soon.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Things might still be going much too slowly to suit you. But you need the time to make sure they're going in the right direction. It's easier to make a course correction now rather than later.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Showing some temperament at the way things are going is one way of getting your point across. Just don't overdo it, or you risk turning away more-moderate supporters.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Things could change more quickly this week than you like. But don't let yourself most likely find that you're up to the challenges. The weekend offers much-needed relaxation.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Big challenge coming up? Uncross those fingers and believe that you're going to do well. And keep in mind that so many people have faith in your ability to succeed.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Testing the waters is a good way of learning about an opportunity before plunging right in. Ask more questions and be alert to any attempts to avoid giving complete answers.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for making people -- and animals, too -- feel special and loved.

Diva

Usually cravings don't last more than a few minutes, especially if you can get your mind on something else. Using food as an emotional crutch or filler only mask what is really going on with your feelings. Some other things you can turn to are a journal, drink some water, exercise, listen to some good music, work on a craft or hobby, read a good book... the possibilities are as long as your imagination. By feeding our souls with things other than food we strengthen our self-control and our physical and mental health.

by TOM DOTY TIMES COLUMNIST

Horror, on all levels, prevailed this week as films mined social issues to come up with stories that should chill you to the bone.

"I Spit on Your Grave" -- Might as well get the turkey out of the way first. The original film was a brutal "Death Wish"-like tale that found a shy woman turning into a force for vengeance, after being assaulted by four goons. This remake doesn't do anything new here and just seems to exist in order to make money off of fans of the original. Lay off this pitch and horror movies may have to start getting original again.

"For Colored Girls" -- Anyone who has seen this play will probably hate the movie. This piece works better as a series of monologues from African-American women who are living on the less-than-sunny side of the street. The film version pads out the monologues into full stories and misses the mark. If they ever bring this back to the stage, then see it, but avoid this.

"Riot" -- Action flicks don't get much better than this 1970s gem that finally arrives on DVD. Jim Brown and Gene Hackman star as a pair of inmates who incite a riot in order to facilitate their escape from a maximum-security prison. The final 30 minutes are an exercise in how to stage a suspense flick, as the riot complicates their plans and divides the men who started it. Great stuff, with a heroic turn by Brown, who is well matched by the insidious Hackman.

"Your Soul to Take" -- The good news is that Wes Craven has already filmed "Scream 4." The bad news is that this one probably won't hold a candle to it. The story follows seven teens who are turning 16, but someone is killing them and they were all born the same summer that a serial killer threatened their town. Now he appears to be back and after them. Great idea, lousy execution, unless you're supposed to root for the bad guy.

Next week there will be some real terror when you see the American education system through the lens of "Waiting for Superman."

FAMILY FEATURES

Sweets on a stick are the perfect treat. There's a pop for all seasons, all reasons. For parties, desserts, everyday and special occasions, pops are tops! They can be as simple as classic cake ball pops crumbled cake mixed with icing; their shaped into balls and dipped into melted candy. Or, create hundreds of other pop shapes and flavors from cake, brownies, cookies and crispy cereal treats. These recipes are only the beginning. "Pop! Sweets on a Stick™," a new book from Wilton, features 112 pages packed with pops. Visit www.wilton.com to order the book, pops supplies, find recipes and much more. Pop to it!

Basic Cake Ball Pops

- 1 box (about 18 ounces) cake mix
- 1 box (about 3.4 ounces) instant pudding mix
- 4 eggs
- 1 cup water
- 1/3 cup vegetable oil
- 1/2 cup Creamy White Decorator Icing

1 bag (14 ounces) Candy Melts Lollipop Sticks

Preheat oven to 350°F. Spray two 8-inch or 9-inch round pans or one 13 x 9 x 2-inch sheet pan with vegetable pan spray.

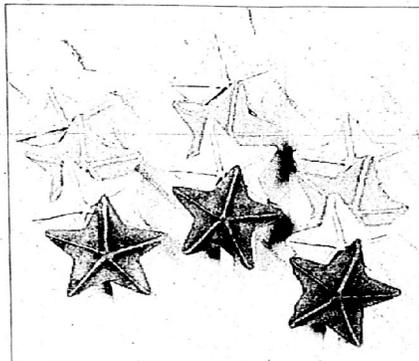

In large bowl, combine cake mix, pudding mix, eggs, water and oil; beat at medium speed with electric mixer 2 minutes. Pour into prepared pans.

Bake 30 to 35 minutes for round pans; 35 to 40 minutes for sheet pan, or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pans 10 minutes; remove from pans to cooling grid and cool completely. Divide cake in half; freeze one half for future use.

In large bowl, use hands to crumble cake until no large chunks remain. Add icing; mix with fingers until well combined. Form mixture into balls. Chill in refrigerator at least 2 hours.

Melt Candy Melts according to package directions. Dip sticks into melted Candy Melts and insert into cake balls; let set. Wait until candy is completely firm before dipping the pops completely in melted Candy Melts.

- Yields 48 tablespoons
- Makes 48 — 1-tablespoon sized cake ball pops (each about 1 1/4-inch diameter)
- Makes 24 — 2-tablespoon sized cake ball pops (each about 1 1/2-inch diameter)
- Makes 16 — 3-tablespoon sized cake ball pops (each about 1 3/4-inch diameter)

The Stars Are Aligned

The Stars Are Aligned

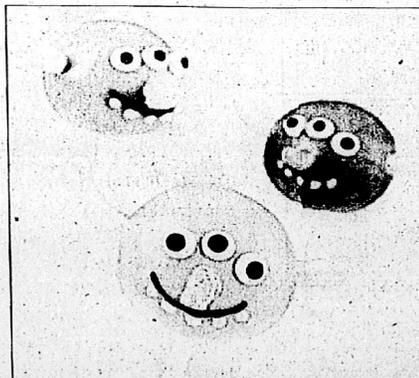

Each serves 1

- 1 box (18 ounces) yellow cake mix
- Eggs, water and vegetable oil to make mix
- Cookie Treat Sticks
- Yellow, Blue, Orange, Green* and Red Candy Melts

Preheat oven to 350°F. Spray Silicone Star Pops Mold with vegetable pan spray. In large bowl, prepare cake mix following package instructions. Pour into prepared mold supported by cookie stick, filling cavities 2/3 full; insert sticks. Bake 16 to 21 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in mold 20 minutes; remove from mold to cooling grid and cool completely.

Melt Candy Melts in disposable decorating bags. Cut tip of bag and pipe top, bottom and middle stars with melted candy; let set. Pipe remaining 2 stars; let set. Pipe outline details using melted candy. *Mix green and yellow candy for green shown in photo.

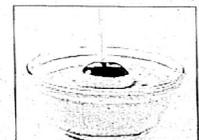

Try Trifocals!

Tri-Dipping

Create a rainbow effect with 3 layers of color! Works with any trio of Candy Melt colors, or try light, medium and dark shades of the same color. Lighten Candy Melt colors by adding melted White Candy Melts.

1. Start with a pop that has already been completely candy dipped and chilled as your base color. Dip pop 2/3 deep in second color of melted Candy Melts. Tap and chill until set.

2. Dip pop 1/3 deep in third Candy Melt color. Tap to remove excess.

3. Place pop on parchment-covered cake board and chill until firm.

Triple Dippers

Each serves 1

- Medium Cake Ball Pops
- Dark Cocoa, White and any favorite color Candy Melts, melted
- Candy Color Set (optional)

Dip cake ball pops completely in melted cocoa or white candy; place in Decorating Stand and chill until firm. Create 2 shades of each candy color by adding more or less. White Candy Melts, or using Candy Colors. Dip pops in lightest candy shade, covering bottom 2/3; chill until firm. Dip pops in darkest candy shade, covering bottom 1/3; chill until firm.

Cocoa Kabobs

Try Trifocals!

Each serves 1

- Medium Cake Ball Pops
- White, Red, Orange and Green Candy Melts, melted
- Garden Candy Color Set (black used)
- Candy Eyeballs, spice drops, banana-shaped hard candies

Dip cake balls in melted candy. Place in Decorating Stand; chill until firm. With pointed knife, cut small holes in sides of cake balls for ears. Insert banana candy, securing with melted candy. Cut small piece of spice drop and shape for nose. Attach nose and eyes with melted candy. Pipe black tinted candy mouth, let set. Pipe white candy dot teeth.

Each serves 1

- Small and Medium Cake Balls,* not on sticks
- Light Cocoa and White Candy Melts, melted
- Turtle Crunch, Cookies 'N Cream Crunch, toasted coconut, chopped nuts, mini chocolate chips
- 11 3/4-inch Lollipop Sticks

Dip cake ball pops in melted candy. Roll in various toppings. Let set on parchment-covered cake board. Use melted candy in disposable decorating bag to pipe a ring of candy about 4 inches from end of stick; chill until firm, then overpipe. Place sticks on parchment-covered cake board until firm. Slide four cake balls onto prepared sticks, alternating sizes. *2 cake balls each size per kabob.

Talk Cars

Dear Tom and Ray:
I travel with a guide dog. When we're in our own car (driven by my husband, not by me or the dog), I have a harness that the seat belt slips through and we buckle the dog in the back seat. However, when I'm riding with someone else, I don't have a harness, and the dog sits in front of me on the floor (I sit in the front passenger seat). My question is: If the air bag goes off, will the dog be injured? Many thanks for your help/opinions. — Laura

TOM: Not only might the dog be injured by a deploying air bag, Laura, but YOU might be injured too, if the dog is thrown become a projectile. And coming over the front seat, a 75-pound Labrador retriever can snap your neck.

RAY: So there's clearly nothing safer, in your case, than harnessing the dog in the back seat. Even though it involves some inconvenience, I would encourage you to buckle the dog in back, even when you're in someone else's car.

TOM: If the harness you have now is too bulky to take with you, or is attached semipermanently to your own car, have a look online. We found some that are pretty simple and lightweight, so you could carry one in your purse or backpack. And some appear to be light enough that the dog can wear it all day if necessary, and it just clips onto the seatbelt when you're in the car.

RAY: We don't know of any real testing that's been done with animals and cars with air bags. I'm sure the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration already has its hands full trying to save two-legged knuckleheads like us. But if anyone out there has any real data that can provide a better answer for Laura, please drop us a line via our website, www.cartalk.com.

This guy lucked out

Dear Tom and Ray:
I recently drove about a thousand miles without my oil cap. It's a 2005 Toyota Sequoia, and I was off-road for about 10 days at the same time. When I got home, no oil cap! (Human error all the way.) I checked the oil, and it was good all the way to the "full" mark, and there's no oil on top of the engine, or even on the underside of the hood. As I drove, I didn't see any drop in oil pressure or hear any weird mechanical sounds, so I'm wondering what damage (if any) I might have done to the engine, driving all that way without a cap. I am changing the oil and filter today. Thanks for your answer, and yes, it is the first time I've ever done that, and the last! — Steve RAY: You are one lucky fellow, Steve. Mostly because of the particular car you own.

TOM: On most cars these days, the oil cap is right on top of one of the valve covers. When the cap is off with the engine running, the oil blasts out of there like the last feeding blasts out of an infant who's been tossed into the air repeatedly by his father.

RAY: You would have noticed that right away, because the oil spews everywhere, including onto the hot exhaust manifold, where it immediately starts to smoke. It's a complete and utter mess. How do we know? We've done it at the shop!

TOM: And if you actually drive around with the cap off on those cars, you easily could lose enough oil to damage the engine. You can lose half of your oil that way in a matter of hours.

RAY: On your vehicle, I believe the oil fill is down between the cylinder heads, which is a less lubricated part of the engine, and it's not where the cam shafts are churning up the oil and tossing it everywhere. That's why little to no oil was lost.

TOM: And it's unlikely that anything got into the oil fill when you were driving off-road. You'd have to be extremely unlucky to have a piece of debris come up from the road and go precisely into that hole. It'd be like winning a game of quarters at 50 feet.

RAY: Even if anything did get into the oil fill, it either would sit at the bottom of the pan and get drained out during your next oil change, or it would be caught by the oil screen or oil filter.

TOM: So this appears to be your lucky week, Steve. You might want to go out and buy a few lottery tickets.

Rosacea reddens nose and cheeks

DEAR DR. DONOHUE:
The tip of my husband's nose and his cheeks have become noticeably red this past year. People ask me -- half kidding, half serious -- if he's been drinking heavily. He doesn't touch alcohol. This doesn't bother him, but it bothers me. What is this? — N.D.

ANSWER: The probable culprit is rosacea (rose-A-she-ah). It starts as a reddening of the nose and cheeks, and sometimes can affect the forehead. The skin also develops webs of tiny blood vessels. Pimples -- which look much like acne -- break out. The final stage, which should never be reached these days, is the bulbous nose of W.C. Fields.

Rosacea is common. Fair-skinned people with light hair are the most susceptible. So are those who blush easily. The actual cause is a bit unclear. Some believe the skin mite Demodex is involved. It lives in hair follicles. But people without rosacea also have the mite, so a cause and effect is not certain.

People with rosacea often have eye involvement, something that's often overlooked but needs consideration. The eyes feel gritty and might burn. They, too, can become red.

Rosacea isn't a curable condition, but it is highly treatable. Your husband ought to steer clear of spicy foods, sunlight and extremes of heat and cold. That he doesn't drink alcohol is in his favor.

Metronidazole cream, gel or lotion, or Azelac (azelaic acid) cream can bring gratifying results. Over-the-counter benzoyl peroxide often works for an acne breakout. Sometimes oral metronidazole or an oral antibiotic is added to the program.

You or your husband would do well to contact the National Rosacea Society, which can provide you with informative literature and keep you abreast of the latest changes in treatment. The society's website is www.rosacea.org, and its phone number is 888-NC-BLUSH.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE:
Is it possible to have had a heart attack and not know it?

I am a 59-year-old man and had my first-ever EKG this past week. The doctor tells me I had a heart attack. I have never had anything that felt like a heart attack. I don't smoke and never have. Heart attacks don't run in my family. My mother and father are alive at 85. I weigh 155 pounds and have been discharged from the Army, more than 35 years ago. Could this be a mistake? — R.S.

ANSWER: As many as 20 percent of heart attacks are silent, producing no pain or other symptoms. Those attacks are discovered when an EKG happens to be taken at a later date. It's also true that the pattern of an old heart attack without one ever having occurred.

If you want to settle the matter, consult a cardiologist. It's probably the wise thing to do.

The booklet on heart attacks explains why they happen and how to recognize them. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue -- No. 102W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.
