

ALTHOUGH STILL AFLOAT, a houseboat, docked at the Jenny Wiley Boat Dock, was razed to deck level following a fire Saturday night which also damaged two other houseboats tied in adjoining slips.

Houseboat Lost In Sat. Fire; Two Damaged

One houseboat in the Jenny Wiley Boat Dock marina at Dewey Lake was practically destroyed by fire Saturday night and two others were damaged, one severely.

The boat owned by Johnny Gray burned to the deck with all its contents. Craft owned by Tex Keathley and Roger Colvin, moored on either side of the Gray boat, were damaged, Keathley's extensively.

The blaze was discovered around 9 p.m. and members of the Prestonsburg Fire Department surmised that the fire originated from an electrical appliance. An electric heater was pointed to as a likely culprit.

Firemen fought the blaze under difficult conditions. The lake was frozen and they depended upon their own auxiliary water supply, and when this was exhausted were obliged to run hose from the lower section of the marina to the gift shop-restaurant building, hundreds of feet away. They also fought the blaze in danger of explosions from both gasoline and propane stored on the boats.

54 Are Indicted By Grand Jury

This Town...That World

Read with considerable interest for reasons best known to myself of the discovery of a "memory pill" that works. Now if I could only remember its name.

Let one big snow come, and some of those birds that have been downright snooty this winter will come, hats in hands. Especially the chickadees.

Only 38 more days till Spring. Give me strength! And a fishing pole.

THE SOLUTION

Developing the argument that there's always a way, this fellow told the story of the family that from the oldest to the youngest was flat in bed, sick. They lived upstairs over the family store, and the doctor finally had to be called. He came (that was in the days when doctors made calls), checked temperatures, symptoms, and so on and liberally dosed the supine assemblage. "Well," he concluded, "if any of you get feeling worse, give me a ring and I'll come back."

"No way," the head of the house reminded him, "we're all bedfast and the phone's downstairs in the store, Doc."

"That's right," acknowledged the good doctor. "Tell you what—I'll call you."

Murder Charges Lodged Against Wright, Gibson

Two murder indictments and 52 others ranging the gamut of lesser offenses were reported by the grand jury of the Floyd circuit court last Thursday in its final report to Circuit Judge Hollie Conley.

The murder indictments—the first to be voted in more than a year—named Frank Gibson, of Garrett, for the slaying of his brother, Grover, and Terence Wright, of Printer, in the recent slaying of his wife, Barbara.

Gibson also was named on three first degree wanton endangerment charges in connection with the shooting into his brother's home. It was alleged that members of his brother's family were endangered by the shots.

The jury's final report, signed by Clarence R. Rice, foreman, listed theft and burglary offenses as "apparently becoming more common in the county," and suggested that "property-owners should take necessary measures to prevent this, and (that) offenders should be dealt with as strictly as justice will allow."

The jury also called for strict enforcement of the state mandatory automobile insurance law; pointed out that garbage collection and disposal remains a problem that officials and citizens should work to solve; that additional storage space is needed in the county jail in order to clear hallways of obstructions; the jail needs more lighting and that exposed wires there should be covered. The jury also noted that additional parking space is needed at the courthouse and that non-functional vehicles stored there should be removed.

The report commended Kentucky State Police and the Sheriff's department "for their diligent efforts in investigating crime and apprehending criminals" and praised staff and personnel of the Juvenile Detention Center "for their efficient operation and maintenance of that facility."

Other indictments reported, with a brief summary of allegations made to the grand jury, follow:

Power Lines Down Over Wide Area

A power outage was experienced over much of the county Tuesday evening when gusting winds blew lines down. Power company repairmen were working to restore power in areas from East Point, parts of Prestonsburg, and on to the Left and Right Beaver sections of the county.

A Kentucky Power Company spokesman said the outage was chiefly from Prestonsburg and on toward the Virginia line, adding that crews would be working all night in an effort to restore power to the affected areas.

A power line which was blown down on First Avenue was reported to have caused the blackout here, where power was restored after being off for about 1½ hours. The East Point area was without electricity for approximately an hour, while power had still not been restored in other parts of the county late Tuesday night.

Construction Bids Asked on Water Job

The fate of proposed water system improvements which will affect most of the southern section of the county will be decided here Feb. 26 when bids on the big construction project will be opened.

"If the bids are not within the amount of money allocated for it, the project could be lost," Bill H. Howard, superintendent of the Prestonsburg utilities system, said Monday.

A total of $4,200,000 in grants and loans has been earmarked for the work. Officials are hoping this will cover the cost, but the effects of inflation are feared.

Grants of $1 million each from the Economic Development Administration and the Appalachian Regional Commission, another of $500,000 from HUD and a loan of $1.7 million from FmHA will finance the project.

The work on which bids will be offered extends from Prestonsburg to Mare Creek and for bidding purposes has been split up into five contracts. These are:

Contract 17—Supplying and erecting two steel storage reservoirs, one of 750,000 gallons, the second of 310,000 gallons.

Contract 18—Approximately 9,450 feet of 12- and 14-inch water mains in Prestonsburg, with valves, hydrants and appurtenances.

Contract 19—Water mains of 8, 10 and 14 inches, with valves and hydrants, a distance of 24,300 feet.

Contract 20—Eight-inch water main from Allen to Mare Creek, a distance of approximately 34,500 feet.

Contract 21—A water treatment plant, tank foundations, altitude valve vault and booster pump station, all designed to expand the water plant here from 2 to 3 million gallons per day. Included in this contract item are a clear well, modification of the existing settling basin, a new flocculation basin, a new chemical feed building and waste sludge concentration facilities.

The extension of the system will supply Emma and other areas along the river to Allen, and the extension to Mare Creek will connect with the existing Sandy Valley system. That system procures its water supply from Pikeville but the system expansion starting here would provide an emergency source of supply.

The water system, if expanded and improved as planned, will be perhaps the most comprehensive in Eastern Kentucky. Planners say it will assure a water supply adequate to the domestic needs of all of the southern section of the county. This would include the Bull Creek-Water Gap and Abbott-Little Paint water districts and others that may be founded later.

Council's Plea For US 23 Aid Is Unanswered

U.S. 23, the main thoroughfare serving the city's northern end, is dangerous and worn and the failure of state highway officials to include it in their five-year road construction schedule was "an oversight," Councilman Estill Lee Carter told a meeting of Prestonsburg city council Monday.

The only Floyd road listed on the state schedule unveiled recently is the access road to the newly-constructed housing project at Cliff. Bridge replacements at Allen, German and Tram are also listed.

"The road is coming apart, from the (Bert Combs) bridge here to the Johnson county line," Carter said of U.S. 23. "We won't have it" unless it is reconstructed promptly, he predicted.

Population growth and commercial expansion on the lower end of the city make that section of the highway more dangerous than ever, said Carter, who added that it is already the scene of many traffic accidents. The city council has previously asked the state transportation department to widen

Perkins Says Martin Job Very Much Alive

The Beaver Creek channelization project is still "very much alive," Congressman Carl D. Perkins said this week, in response to a recent report that the project may be dead.

Some county officials here were reported as having serious doubts about the future of the stream project, in view of continuing difficulty in securing the needed right of way and the recent transfer of state funds from the channel to another Martin project.

$100,000 in flood abatement funds were transferred January 19 to the floodproofing of the town's proposed new water plant. The money was originally intended to reimburse the county for the cost of acquiring property for the channel improvement.

Diversion of the state funds, which had been requested by Congressman Perkins and Floyd Judge-Executive Bill Wells, in no way jeopardizes the federal funds committed to the project, Perkins insisted. Money for the work has been appropriated several times by Congress, he said, but federal law requires that local officials secure the necessary rights of way before the work can begin.

Survey Team Suggests Consolidation of Schools

Plans for rebuilding Floyd schools should include consolidation of two high schools and eight elementary schools, a state survey team has concluded.

The survey group investigates county schools every five years, setting priorities for future capital outlay and making other recommendations to local school boards. A report of the recently concluded survey here was presented to the Floyd Board of Education last Wednesday by Walton Luttrell, director of the Local School District Administrative Services Unit.

The state's recommendations "are not set in concrete" and are open for local comment for 60 days, Luttrell told the board. The local board may submit its own recommendations to the state if it finds the state analysis unacceptable, he said.

Floyd Schools Superintendent E. P. Grigsby, Jr. predicted this week the school board here may reject the state board's call for school consolidation, a proposal which has proved controversial in the past, and may propose a revised set of priorities.

In any event, the state recommendations "would take 20 years and a hundred million dollars" to implement, Grigsby cautioned.

In order of priority, the state proposals for future capital outlay are as follows:

1. A new school to replace Allen grade school and to incorporate the Daniels Creek, Prater and Home Branch schools.
2. A new school to replace Garrett grade school.
3. A new school in the Prestonsburg area to relieve overcrowding at Clark and Prestonsburg grade schools and to incorporate the Auxier and Bonanza schools.

4. A new school to consolidate McDowell and Wheelwright high schools.

5. A four-classroom addition to McDowell grade school, to incorporate the Drift school.

6. Renovation of the present Wheelwright high school, to house Melvin grade school.

7. Replacement of Maytown grade school.

8. Renovation of Prestonsburg grade school.

9. An eight-classroom addition to the 1969 Betsy Layne grade school building and renovation of the 1948 structure, to relieve Harold grade school and incorporate the Spruce Pine school.

10. Renovation of Prestonsburg high school.

11. Renovation of Wayland grade school.

12. Addition of four classrooms and a cafeteria to Martin grade school.

13. Provision of an agriculture mechanics facility at Prestonsburg high school.

In addition, the state team recommended site improvements and upgrading of incandescent lighting at all permanent schools "at the discretion of the district as money becomes available."

According to the report, only 4.9 percent of school revenue in this district is derived from local sources, compared to a state average of 20.5 percent derived locally.

Costs per pupil are given as $21.46 for administration (compared with a state average of $37.30), $655.68 for instruction ($882.23), $25.52 for books and supplies ($35.94), and $95.97 for transportation ($118.96).

Some 53.14 percent of Floyd ninth graders complete high school (compared with 61.66 percent across the state), while 40.3 percent of high school graduates here enter college (39.8 percent).

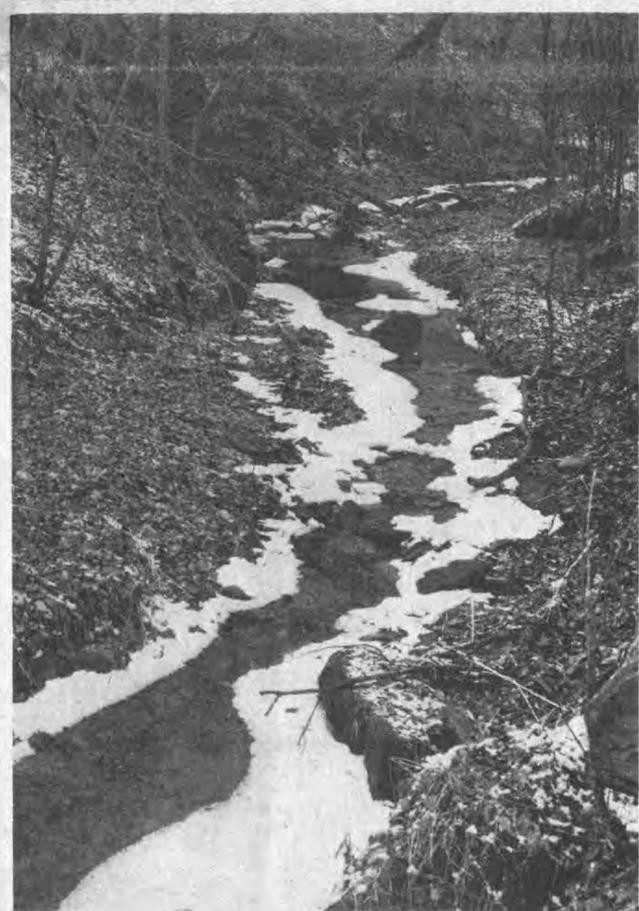

The percentage of Floyd students who are economically deprived is almost double the state average—63.3 percent here compared with 34.2 percent statewide.

All five high schools and 11 elementary schools have a "standard" accreditation, while two elementary schools (Allen and Maytown) have the lesser "basic" accreditation, and seven (Auxier, Bonanza, Daniels Creek, Drift, Home Branch, Prater and Spruce Pine), with fewer than eight teachers each, are listed as "approved" and are said to provide basic instruction.

Of the county's secondary-school buildings, only those at Allen Central and Garth Vocational are described as in good condition; the Betsy Layne high school building (soon to be replaced) is described as poor, and the remainder are called fair. Clark, McDowell, Osborne, and the J. M. Stumbo school buildings are said to be in good condition; Prater is described as fair to good; the remaining grade school buildings are generally described as fair, except for the one-room Daniels Creek school and the two-room Home Branch school, both said to be in poor condition.

Animation . . . Making Pictures Come to Life

If you wake up tomorrow morning and look out your window in time to see a 60-foot stalk of celery drive off in your neighbor's car with a dapper three-foot frog, you might consider taking two aspirin and spending the rest of the day in bed.

If, however, you happen to see the same sort of mild wackiness played out on your television screen, you might wonder instead how the tall vegetable got in the front seat with such celerity.

What you would be wondering about is the work of artists called animators who bring to life characters of the imagination—both to entertain and teach.

"That doesn't happen by waving a magic wand," says KET art director Ellsworth "Skip" Taylor. "Animation means 'to give life,'" he says, "and KET does that with a special animation camera that allows us to take individual drawings, still photos and models and photograph them in a sequence to give the illusion of movement."

KET's award-winning animators have given life to everything from one centimeter cubes that march off in a meter stick formation to measure the world on "Math Country" to clay figures that move and remold themselves while illustrating words for elementary school students on "Word Feathers."

In KET's newest instructional series, "Move, Look, Listen," sound, shape, line and light all come to life through animation.

According to Taylor, one thing that KET's animators do is save the network a great deal of money.

"To have an outside production firm make a ten-second opening sequence for a show like 'Kentucky Journal' would cost at least $10,000," he says. KET cuts costs dramatically by working with its own equipment and artists.

One thing that animators don't do is waste time.

"It's involved and concentrated work," says Terry Schoen who, along with Mike Griffith, a special effects wizard, and Rob Baggett, an expert in animation uses of three-dimensional model figures, is part of KET's animation team.

Schoen's speciality is cell animation, film making that takes its name from the transparent acetate sheets or "cells" upon which he draws and paints with special media inks. What Schoen does everyday is a measure of the expertise required of each of KET's animators.

When beginning to make the drawing for a cell-animated film, Schoen takes his cues from a storyboard: an outline of the story, characters and action. An animation storyboard is set up as a series of drawings that resembles a comic strip.

A character's movements are translated from the storyboard renderings into drawings of their beginning and end positions called "extremes." Schoen gets a good idea of where the action is going before he makes the drawings of the middle positions called "in-betweens." But he doesn't always know how long it will take before he finishes.

Schoen makes one drawing for each twelfth of a second of animated film to achieve a smooth animated movement. By this standard, just one minute of film requires the cell animator to make 720 separate drawings. That adds up to a staggering amount of work for an artist and a commitment to craft and precision which is just short of mind-boggling.

Schoen didn't start doing cell animation until his senior year in college. He was assigned a 20-second exercise, did some pencil drawings and ended up with a story three minutes long.

"My instructor at the Rochester Institute of Technology (R.I.T.) in New York was very interested in my work," he says. "He suggested I transfer my drawings onto cells which meant a whole new process."

Schoen worked at R.I.T. where he was able to use 16 mm animation equipment to put his cells on film. Once on film, Schoen's project excited his instructor even more. He suggested adding music. A film score class at Eastman School of Music agreed to compose and record the music.

"What started as a 20-second exercise has ended up as a three-minute film which I've been working on (on and off) for four or five years," the animator observes. "Last Thanksgiving I re-photographed the drawings in order to synchronize them with the music. It's a never-ending process."

According to art director Taylor, the results are worth the effort.

"Animation imparts a special vitality to any production," says Taylor. "It can also deliver a point to a viewer with a speed and economy that can't be duplicated by other means."

Nevertheless, Taylor marvels at the special tenacity of spirit necessary to meet the demands of the animator's craft.

"It takes a certain kind of inspired personality to do it," he says. "I know I don't have it. I'm more the Picasso type; I want to make my drawing, sit back, enjoy it and have a glass of wine."

No More Applicants Taken For Fuel Aid

The Department for Human Resources has stopped adding names to the list of low-income Kentuckians who want to apply for Home Energy Assistance Program benefits.

Officials of the department's Bureau for Social Insurance said today they have more than enough potential applicants to exhaust the federal funds available for winter heat cost assistance.

On Jan. 30 the department began accepting names of persons who want to apply for the benefits. At that time, approximately $2.3 million of the $24 million federal allocation was still undistributed. By the close of business Tuesday, local offices throughout the state had collected names of 16,811 potential applicants.

The bureau's field services director, Jim Roberts, said social insurance workers have started calling those people in to apply for benefits. "We started at the top of the list and will continue contacting people until every available dollar is distributed," he said.

Because the process must be carefully monitored to make sure the department takes only as many applications as it has money to honor, Roberts said, it may be as long as two weeks before the last potential applicants can be contacted.

Southern States Meet Slated At May Lodge

Members of Southern Cooperative's local board and committee members, agricultural workers and retail agency managers will attend a regional board meeting at Jenny Wiley State Park.

Also attending the meeting will be a number of guest young farmers from this area. Registration will begin at 6:30 p.m.

Jere Cannon, of Flemingsburg, a member of the Southern States 15-man board of directors, will preside at the meeting. Featured at the session will be a presentation entitled, "The Future and You," by R. W. Bryan, who heads a two man management team that will attend the session. H. B. Manuel, manager of Retail Operations, the other team member, will discuss cooperative principles. Ken Burgess, of Huntington, W. Va., a regional manager for the cooperative, will report on the cooperative's operations during the first six months of the 1980-'81 fiscal year.

NOTICE OF FILING OF MERGER APPLICATION

Notice is hereby given that, pursuant to the provisions of Section 546.2 of the Rules and Regulations for the Federal Savings and Loan System, First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Pikeville, Pikeville, Kentucky, into United Federal Savings and Loan Association, Prestonsburg, Kentucky, have filed an application with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board for permission to merge. The name of the resulting association would be United Federal Savings and Loan Association, Prestonsburg, Kentucky. United Federal Savings and Loan Association, Prestonsburg, Kentucky, intends to have its home office at 19 South Lake Drive, Prestonsburg, and to maintain its present branch office at State Route 80 and State Route 160, Hindman. The home office of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Pikeville, Pikeville, Kentucky, will be retained as a branch office of United Federal Savings and Loan Association, Prestonsburg, Kentucky at 110 Caroline Avenue, Pikeville.

Anyone may write in favor or in protest of the application. Your comments may discuss, but are limited to the applicant's record of performance in helping to meet the credit needs of their local communities. Four copies must be sent to the Supervisory Agent, Federal Home Loan Bank of Cincinnati, 2500 DuBois Tower, Cincinnati, Ohio, 45201, within 10 days from the last date of publication.

Anyone sending a substantial protest may request an oral argument on the application as set forth in Section 543.2(f) of the Federal Regulations. For a protest to be considered substantial, it must be written, received on time, and contain at least the following:

- 1) a summary of the reasons for the protest;
- 2) the specific matters objected to in the application or in the applicant's community service record;
- 3) facts, including any relevant economic or financial information, which support the protest; and
- 4) any adverse effects on your organization or community which may result from approval of the application.

You may look at the application and all comments filed at the Federal Home Loan Bank of Cincinnati, unless any such materials are exempt by law from public disclosure. If you have any questions concerning these procedures, contact the Federal Home Loan Bank of Cincinnati.

★ Cancer Hopeline

Q—My physician has said I should have chemotherapy. I've heard that chemotherapy is only used for incurable cases and that its side effects are worse than cancer. What are the real facts?

A—Chemotherapy is frequently recommended prior to, instead of, or following surgery or radiotherapy. Often patients or their families panic because they mistakenly believe some of the common myths about chemotherapy. You have mentioned two of them.

Myth No. 1: Chemotherapy is the treatment of last resort.

For years Chemotherapy Foundation members and supporters have been aware that early chemotherapy can provide a complete cure for some cancers, but we must remember that the general public is not always aware of this. Some people still believe that chemotherapy is offered only when all else has failed, and the suggestion of chemotherapy treatment makes them think they are at "the end of the road." Health professionals and an informed public, aware that this myth is prevalent, need to be on guard when patients and families become mistakenly pessimistic about prognosis. (Example: Betty Ford and Edward Kennedy, Jr., have been chemotherapy beneficiaries for several years.)

Myth No. 2: The side effects are worse than the disease.

The media often talk of the side effects of chemotherapy while omitting the explanation that some patients never experience any, and most people find the side effects tolerable and temporary. Side effects are certainly not worse than the disease. Unfortunately, this myth persists even among health professionals, but most patients and families will agree that side effects are a fair "trade-off" for increased disease-free survival and, certainly, for cure.

sites except for John M. Stumbo fail to meet state regulations as to size. Driveways and loading areas are described as inadequate at Allen, Auxier, Garrett, Harold, Home Branch, Maytown, Prater, Spruce Pine and Wayland grade schools, where buses have to load and unload on the roadside, and at Melvin, where buses have to back up on the school grounds.

In its sole note of praise, the 59-page report describes the county bus garage at Garth as "neat and orderly arranged," adding that "the Floyd County Board along with (Transportation Supervisor) Fred Turner should be commended for their part in properly caring for this facility."

Speaking for a Wayland PTA delegation, Phyllis Honshell asked that music be added to the curriculum there next year. Supt. Grigsby replied that reducing the number of special instruction units (including art, music, physical education and guidance) had been "the No.1 recommendation" of state officials during the school district's financial squeeze two years ago and urged the delegation to seek legislative change in the way smaller schools are funded.

In response to a request last month by Dr. J. D. Adams, school board member, for information on school drug education programs, Asst. Supt. Ron Hager described three such programs, and Kathy Hatfield, of the McDowell PTA, submitted another for consideration by the board.

An upward revision in the income allowed families of children receiving free meals and reduced-rate meals has been announced by the Department of Agriculture, it was said. Children in a family of four may receive free school meals and free milk if the family income is under $10,270 and may receive reduced-price meals if the family income is under $15,490.

The board voted a resolution of appreciation to B. F. Reed, of Drift, for his support to Floyd schools. Reed recently made a donation of corporate stock to McDowell High School.

Hired by the board were: Shirline Hamilton, at Wheelwright High School as foreign language and homebound teacher; Josephine Hopson, half-time kindergarten teacher at Auxier Elementary; Illa Branham, half-time kindergarten teacher at Wayland Elementary; Betty Gibson, Headstart teacher at Stumbo school; Wilma Cavins, emergency substitute teacher; and Ina Hensley, teacher aide for Maytown special education class.

Gary Dale Hamilton, regular bus driver, and Gene Lafferty, Myrna Williams, Paul David Salyer, William Thomas Harris, Joe Raymond Miller, Jr. and Elige Thompson, substitute bus drivers.

Brenda Howell and Darlene Adkins, substitute cooks at McDowell; Georgetta Gibson, regular cook at Wayland; Elige Thompson, janitor at Prestonsburg Elementary; Diana Stevens, janitor at Home Branch; and Gene Conn, maintenance worker.

and upgrade the road, specifying the addition of a turning lane and highway dividers.

Residents of the upper reaches of Mays Branch are about evenly divided on the question of whether that section should be annexed to Prestonsburg, the council was advised. Fred Meece and Greg Stumbo, Mays Branch residents who favor the move, asked the council to annex only the properties of those who agree to it. Some council members, however, expressed concern that this might leave isolated pockets of that hollow permanently outside the city limits. The matter will be discussed again at the next council meeting.

The city will insist that the F. S. Vanhose Company keep open both lanes of the road in front of its West Prestonsburg yard. C. R. Hatton and Jack Carter, whose coal tippie is reached by trucks travelling that road, and several residents of the area had complained that trucks unloading at the lumber yard habitually blocked traffic.

Attorneys for the company said their client would "make every possible effort to keep at least one lane of travel open," a compromise rejected by the council.

"Speed bumps" will be installed on Riverside Drive following a petition by residents there. Jackie and Gloria Sizemore, who organized the petition, said residents in 23 of the 28 houses on the street had signed it. The speed bumps are needed "to reduce speeding and splashing of water and very reckless driving," according to the petition.

The state of Massachusetts adopted the first minimum wage act for women and children in 1912, according to the U.S. Department of Labor publication.

overtones of a domestic tragedy: Ephraim and Samantha had raised and married off their nine children when she decided her on-going poor health was about to lead her through death's door. With measured words and sweetened tones of resignation, she tried to prepare Ephraim for the expected separation.

"Eph, we've had many good times, and some that were pretty hard."

"Yes, Mandy, we did."

"You've always needed a woman around the house."

"That's right, Mandy, and you have worked good and steady."

"I want you to get another one, Eph, and do it real soon after I'm gone."

"Aw, Mandy, we don't need to talk about things like that now."

"Yes, we do. You've got a good home here for that next woman."

"You kept a good house, Mandy."

"All the furnishings she will need are already right here, and I want her to use them."

"That's nice of you, Mandy."

"She can drive my old car around."

"Yes, dear."

"And even use my golf clubs."

"No, Mandy, I reckon not. She's left-handed."

"As soon as the county gets the rights of way, the federal construction money will be there," he said.

Securing easements along the four-and-a-half miles of Beaver Creek to be rechanneled is the responsibility of the Martin city administration in the case of property lying within the city limits, and of the Floyd fiscal court otherwise.

The Army Corps of Engineers, which would be responsible for the channeling, pressed the county recently to document progress on the property acquisition. While a Martin engineer is said to have been hired recently to prepare maps of the area, and condemnation suits have been filed by the county attorney in the past, property acquisition for the project has long been at a standstill, a fact noted somewhat pointedly by a Corps official last month.

Congressman Perkins said this week Corps officials had assured him that, while federal funds intended for the channel job have since been transferred to other Corps purposes, the construction money would be restored to the Beaver Creek account as soon as rights of way are acquired. "I intend to keep on pressing for completion of the project," Perkins said.

Estimated to cost $3.3 million when money for it was first appropriated in 1968, the project cost is now reckoned to be $9 to $10 million.

Hueysville Resident Hospitalized After Train-Truck Crash

Arthur Hughes, 30, of Hueysville, was struck and seriously injured at 4:30 a.m. last Wednesday when his truck slid on ice at the railway crossing at the junction of KY 80 and KY 7 at Hueysville into the path of a train.

He reportedly suffered a broken pelvis and nose and fractured vertebrae. Hughes was taken to Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin, and from there was transferred Tuesday to Veterans' Hospital, Lexington. A report received here says he apparently attempted to jump from his truck but, instead, was knocked beneath it, and both he and the vehicle were dragged some distance by the train. He was enroute to work at the time of the accident.

The injured man was quoted by his wife as saying the train gave no warning signal, but the trainmen contend that the whistle was blown.

Malpractice Suit Thrown Out Here

A 1978 malpractice suit brought by a Pikeville woman against Prestonsburg physician Dr. Rondall Leslie was dismissed in circuit court here last Friday.

Gypsy Helen McPeek, who had fallen and broken her hip the previous year while a patient at Mountain Manor Nursing Home, claimed that neither Dr. Leslie nor the nursing home staff had provided proper care when informed of her injury. She claimed $600,000 in damages.

In dismissing the suit, Circuit Judge Hollie Conley ruled the case had no demonstrable basis in fact.

The nursing home, named as co-defendant in the suit, reportedly agreed to a $1500 settlement with McPeek, without admitting any liability, however.

Honored by Kiwanis International

Hubbard C. Francis, of Prestonsburg, immediate past governor of the Kentucky-Tennessee Kiwanis District, has been named a Distinguished Governor of Kiwanis. The recognition came at the mid-winter meeting of the Kiwanis International board of trustees in Chicago. Francis headed the Kentucky-Tennessee Kiwanis District from October 1, 1979 through September 30, 1980. He was one of 22 who received the recognition.

The Distinguished Governor program was established by the Kiwanis International board of trustees in 1970 to provide recognition for those governors whose exceptional leadership resulted in outstanding performance by their districts. To be recognized as a Distinguished Governor, the individual must meet or surpass rigid criteria for achievement in growth, administration, programming and community service. There are 43 Kiwanis Districts throughout the world.

The 22 Distinguished Governors recognized this year will be honored in special ceremonies on the stage at the 66th annual convention of Kiwanis International in New Orleans' Superdome in late June. Each will receive a Distinguished Governor's ring. Their wives will receive matching silver charms.

Governors achieving Distinguished Governor status this year represent the Kiwanis districts of Alabama,

Australia, Benelus-France-Monaco, Carolinas, Florida, Georgia, Illinois-Eastern Iowa, Italy-Malta, Kentucky-Tennessee, Louisiana-Mississippi-West Tennessee, Michigan, Minnesota-Dakotas, Montana, Nebraska-Iowa, New York, Norden, Philippine Luzon, Rocky Mountain, Southwest, Switzerland-Liechtenstein, Utah-Idaho and West Virginia.

New Health Facility Early Round Winner

Mud Creek could have a new health clinic by the end of this year if plans for it meet the approval of a state licensing agency next month.

The facility, proposed for a site on KY 979 near John Hall Branch, would replace a clinic presently operated out of a house on Mink Branch.

The proposal to replace the facility, at an estimated cost of $650,000, received favorable recommendation from the East Kentucky Health Systems Agency in Lexington last week and is now scheduled to go before the state Certificate of Need and Licensure Board on March 18. Also to be considered is a request by Big Sandy Health Care Inc., operator of the clinic, to have its license upgraded from ambulatory to primary care.

If the certificate of need is granted, groundbreaking for the clinic could take place by mid-June and construction could be completed by December, Roger Marshall, Big Sandy Health Care executive-director, said this week.

Statement By Barkley

The charges before the Personnel Board are neither serious nor true. The charges do not, in fact, include any of the matters which have been making such good reading in the press.

I am not charged with touching, pinching, dirty talk, or looking. I am not charged with crawling under a desk to look up dresses. I am not charged with sending notes or even with sexual discrimination.

Fair people would not have even bothered to take up everyone's time with such trivial nonsense.

The only worry is given to me by my attorney. He can't figure out who is judge and who is prosecutor. He advises me that apparently the Constitution and the Statutes and the Rule of Law have been thrown out the window. He advises me that no fair hearing is now possible and that I have already been effectively tried and convicted and that there is no effective remedy.

My attorney advises me that he is not adequately trained or prepared to fight in a political circus without regard to elementary fairness and decency.

My attorney says that he has tried to obtain the necessary records and evidence through the Open Records Law and Freedom of Information Act and been refused. He says that while "you may enjoy fighting in the dark with your hands tied, I don't."

Well, I don't. But Frankfort is a very strange place. If the good Lord descended on Frankfort today, Secretary Welch would bug the chariot, Commissioner Robinson would charge him with discrimination against his angels, his travel expenses would be investigated, and General Beshear would find it all legal.

ALBEN W. BARKLEY, II Commissioner of Agriculture

More About Martin

With 1.5 million dollars and a new water system at stake, I see no reason Mayor Hall refused to attend the Jan. 8, 1981 city council meeting. At the regular monthly meeting the day before Mayor Hall refused to call the meeting to order, saying he lacked enough present for a quorum. Wrong!

Kentucky law (KRS-86.070) states that in Martin's case three councilmen plus the mayor is a quorum. With all the important issues on the agenda, why didn't he go ahead? Present were Joe Everage, J. R. Key and David Chaffins; not present was Phil Jenkins due to a doctor appointment in Lexington, Bobby Dings and Alan Whicker who both had to work.

With all the present news coverage about Iran, American hostages, etc., I feel the people of Martin are political hostages over Mayor Hall's petty bickering with the councilmen.

As to the Mayor's "ship of fools" statement in the Jan. 14 issue of The Floyd County Times, I think this just serves to let people outside of Martin know what more and more people find out every day—our Mayor let us down again.

KEN PETERS Martin, Ky.

A Letter Back Home

I am interested in the fate of the Old Style mining operation that is trying to get going in Prestonsburg. It sounds to me like a real good deal for the town and for the people who live there. I think it is a known fact that the tourist industry is one of the main sources of income for Kentucky and that the more advertising you get, the more tourists you get. Look at Plains Georgia as an example. Before Carter was elected, who knew where Plains Georgia was or what it was? I probably would have thought it was an Air Force base or something. My message to the city council of Prestonsburg is to go with the times. If you are going to grow, you have to learn to manage the growing pains. One of the photographers here at the newspaper where I work keeps bugging me to let him know when the operation is going to begin. He is one of the top photographers in the country, and his wife writes. I think they want to do a picture story about the mining operation and about Prestonsburg itself. Who knows what could happen with something like that.

I have always had a special place in my heart for Prestonsburg and the people who live there. I was born in Floyd county and so was my wife and oldest son. We moved to Ohio about 13 years ago. We still try to make a trip back two or three times a year, just to renew our memories of the hills. It seems like it is more difficult to come back now. Our three children are in school and they are very much involved in the activities that are afforded for children in school. Jeff, 14-year-old, and Scarlett, our 12-year-old, are both in the gifted and talented program that the city school system provides. Shasta, our 9-year-old, is in the third grade. We are also very much committed to our church work. We are members of the Southside Christian Fellowship.

I always say that every good man should be aware of three important things in life—when to speak up, when to stand up, and when to shut up. So I will.

Judge Asks Second School for Drivers

District Judge Harold Stumbo said last week that he has asked the Department of Transportation to establish a second state traffic school in this county and has suggested that it be located at McDowell.

Judge Stumbo wrote, in part: "From Wheelwright to Prestonsburg (where the only traffic school in the county now is located) is approximately 50 miles, and part of the road is narrow and dangerous. I am sure that I can obtain the high school auditorium at McDowell for this school. This location would be convenient for drivers residing on Highway 80, KY 122 and in the Big Mud area, since there are access roads from both directions. This would also be consistent with the energy situation."

(Traffic schools are maintained under the law requiring drivers charged with traffic offenses to attend classes in lieu of surrendering their drivers' licenses.)

Hunt Indictment Mentions Floyd Business Men

Two Floyd men were named in connection with the indictment of former Democratic Party Chairman Howard "Sonny" Hunt, Jr. handed down by a special federal grand jury in Lexington this week.

Hunt was indicted Wednesday on 22 counts of extortion, mail fraud, signing false income-tax returns and conspiring to defraud. He is said to have been involved in a widespread kickback scheme, in which he allegedly used his political influence to obtain money from people doing business with the state during the 1975-79 administration of former Gov. Julian Carroll.

According to the indictment, Hunt received some of the money himself and directed distribution of the rest to his younger son, Alan Hunt, and to various businesses. The state's workers' compensation policy with the Wombwell Insurance Agency in Lexington is said to have been a major source of the money in the alleged scheme.

A secret fund totaling $848,000 was generated from Wombwell's commissions and paid out at Hunt's direction, according to an FBI news release. From this fund, Hunt is said to have directed $77,500 to the Snodgrass Insurance Agency, in Allen, "all of which funds were immediately passed along by Ronald Snodgrass to Charles J. McNally who, in turn, passed along $8000 of these funds to Alan P. Hunt."

McNally, president of East Kentucky Auto Parts and chairman of the Prestonsburg Utilities Commission, is a Carroll appointee to the board of the state Registry of Election Finance.

He is also mentioned in the indictment in connection with the creation, in 1975, of Seton Investments, Inc., a corporation allegedly formed for the purposes of disguising money paid by Hunt to former Cabinet Secretary James E. Gray, acting as a vehicle for passing along money to Alan Hunt, and buying real estate that could be used for the convenience and benefit of Gray and Hunt.

McNally allegedly agreed to serve as Seton Investments' sole recorded stockholder.

According to the indictment, the company received $200,000 from the Wombwell insurance-commission fund, out of which $38,500 was passed along to Alan Hunt, a Lexington condominium was bought "for the use of Michelle Johnson (a state Racing Commission employee) and James E. Gray," and a car and Florida condominium were bought "for the use of Ann Shirley Brooks (a state Parks Department employee during the Carroll administration) and the defendant ... Hunt."

No charge is made in the indictment against either Snodgrass or McNally, and neither man chose to comment on the allegations this week.

Two Mud Creek Men Jailed After Break

Timmy Mullins, 24, and Odell Frasure, 21, both of Galveston, have been charged with third degree burglary in connection with a burglary and shooting incident Jan. 27, at Mullins High School, Pike county.

State Trooper Phillip Yates said Frasure sustained two shotgun pellet wounds about 3 a.m. Tuesday while he and Mullins were in the Mullins school. One pellet penetrated Frasure's shoulder and the other struck him in the neck, police said.

Frasure was shot, Yates said, by nightwatchman Eugene Senter who also serves as a Pike county deputy sheriff.

Frasure was taken to Pikeville Methodist Hospital where he received treatment for his wounds, then was jailed.

Mullins was arrested Jan. 29 as he was being released from Our Lady of the Way Hospital at Martin where he had been receiving treatment for a broken elbow, arm and wrist.

Two Suffer Burns In Justell Fire

In a fire which destroyed a home at Justell around 3 a.m., Sunday, Raymond Goble and his nine-months-old son, Raymond, Jr., were burned.

The father suffered severe back burns and was transferred Monday from the Highlands Regional Medical Center here to a Lexington hospital. The child, who was burned about his forehead, was dismissed Monday from the hospital.

How To Keep Your Car's Cool

With the cost of automobiles and auto repairs increasing sharply, drivers should learn how to take better care of their cars. One good place to start is with the cooling system.

The cooling system is primarily responsible for maintaining the engine's best operating temperature. It helps keep your engine from freezing up in the winter and carries away excess heat year round to prevent your engine from boiling over.

A good coolant in the cooling system should do much more than keep your engine from overheating or freezing up. It has inhibitors that fight rust and corrosion—problems which cause clogged engine and radiator passages and eventually destroy the efficiency of the cooling system. To keep your coolant in good condition and in the right quantity, here's what to check:

When the engine is cold, the coolant level should be about three inches below the radiator neck on crossflow radiators and one inch below the filler neck on downflow radiators. If your car has a coolant recovery reservoir, the coolant level should be checked with the engine both hot and cold to make sure it's working properly. The reservoir level should be lower when the engine cools down.

To sample the coolant for corrosion, run the engine until it's warm enough to circulate the coolant (when the hose leading to the radiator begins to feel warm). Be sure that the engine doesn't get too hot. If it does, wait for it to cool down and never remove the pressure cap when the engine is hot. You can draw the coolant sample from the radiator filler neck or from the radiator draincock.

If your coolant is rusty brown in color, if it has lost color, or if there are traces of sediment in the sample, these are signs that your coolant hasn't been changed frequently enough and that corrosion is already at work in the cooling system.

The following checklist is for all cooling system trouble spots with some solutions to the problems:

- Temperature warning light goes on—check coolant level and fill to proper level with 50/50 coolant mixture;
- Engine boils over—inspect pressure cap for seal defects; if problem continues, have service station pressure-test cooling systems for leakage;
- Rust and/or sediment in coolant sample—flush cooling system and fill with fresh 50/50 coolant mixture;
- Engine overheating—tighten leaking gaskets;
- Wet spots or stains at hose connections, radiator, coolant pump, gaskets and connections—tighten leaking gaskets; use sealer or have radiator repaired; replace pump; pressure-test cooling system to detect further leakage;

- Spongy or swollen hoses—replace hoses;
- Very hard hoses; hoses swollen or cracked around hose clamps; low coolant level—replace frozen or bent clamps and be sure to retighten them one month after installation;
- Heater delivers cool air; engine heats up too slowly—check thermostat; replace if hung open;
- Engine overheats very quickly—have thermostat checked for opening point or replace it;
- Cracks or fraying on inside of belt—check fan belt and other drive belts and replace those that are worn; (car may overheat due to slippage of belt);
- Coolant overflows through overflow pipe—check pressure cap and replace if necessary; check for clogged radiator by inspecting tube openings inside filler neck;
- Engine overheats; sludge or rust visible through radiator filter neck—clean with heavy-duty cooling system cleaner or have radiator cleaned by radiator repair shop;
- Warning light goes on; engine overheats—have temperature control fan drive RPMs checked; replace if excessive slippage is found.

You didn't have to wait for the first freeze to think about anti-freeze for your car, by the way. In these days of auto air conditioners, anti-pollution devices, automatic transmissions, and increased engine cooling loads, cars have higher operating temperatures. Anti-freeze (more properly called coolant) now performs heavy duty year round for your car's cooling system.

Change the coolant once a year in order to insure the best performance. The process is simple: drain the present fluid from the system; flush the system with water or a chemical cleaner and neutralizer; check hoses and drive belts for weakness or wear and replace them if needed; and add antifreeze and water in 50-50 mix.

Many motorists use a "permanent" antifreeze. Keep in mind that it won't last forever; it gets its name from the protection it offers in hot weather as well as cold. Its main ingredient is ethylene glycol, which raises the solution's boiling point in addition to lowering its freezing point. A methyl alcohol antifreeze will reduce the freezing point even more than the ethylene glycol solution, but methyl alcohol will lower the boiling point too and is likely to boil away if used in most newer cars. Powdered mixes are not recommended because they contain salts and may damage the engine.

H&R BLOCK TAX TEST

Question No. 1

It is too late to claim a deduction or credit overlooked on a 1977 tax return.

True False

If you know about amending a tax return, you probably know the answer. If you don't, maybe you need H&R Block. Because H&R Block knows tax laws that you might not know, you can amend a tax return for overlooked deductions and credits up to three years after the filing deadline. So the answer to the question is FALSE.

WIN Program Finds 284,000 Jobs

The Work Incentive (WIN) program helped 284,000 welfare applicants and recipients get jobs last year, saving about $966 million in Federal funds—more than double the cost of the program.

Funding for WIN in fiscal year 1980 was $365 million. The total reduction in Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) grants for fiscal 1980 was $632.4 million. There were additional estimated savings of $131 million in Food Stamps and $203 million in Medicaid health services.

Half of the new job holders earned enough so they and their families could leave welfare altogether. Welfare payments to the other new workers were reduced.

More than 70 percent of the new workers were women, of whom two-thirds were between ages 30 and 45, and half were white. About half of the women's jobs were in clerical, sales, and service work. Their average starting wage was $3.58 an hour.

Of the men who got jobs, two-thirds were white, and the same proportion were in their 20's. Starting pay for the men averaged $4.60 an hour.

WIN provides job search assistance, job training, and supportive services such as child care and employment counseling. The program requires that all over 16 who apply for or receive AFDC register for WIN unless exempt because of illness, age, or small children to care for.

WIN is not typical of the mainstream labor force. Of the 1.5 million registrants as of Sept. 30, 1980, three-fourths were women, almost 40 percent were black, just over 10 percent were Hispanic, and less than half had finished high school. In the labor force, by contrast, 43 percent were women, 12 percent were minority group members, and 76 percent had finished high school.

To open up more jobs for WIN registrants and AFDC recipients, tax laws permit employers who hire them to claim a federal income tax credit. This amounts to 50 percent of first year wages up to $6,000 paid to an employee in a trade or business, and 25 percent of second year wages up to $6,000. Employers of household employees may claim a tax credit of 35 percent of the first $6,000 for one year only.

For further information on the WIN program or the WIN/Welfare Tax Credit, contact a local office of the WIN program or the state employment security agency, also called "Job Service."

WIN is jointly administered by the Departments of Labor and Health and Human Services.

Get Set To Party

Almost everyone enjoys a good party. And almost everyone defines a good party as one that someone else is giving. However, there comes a time when—either through choice or necessity—you must assume the role of partygiver. If your time is now, rest easy. There are really only two criteria for giving a successful party today—a budget and a telephone to call on the proper assistance.

When you couple that with the desire to create a pleasurable event for yourself and others, along with wanting to occupy the center of your own carefully planned stage, you are 9/10s of the way to being the star of the show.

In this article we'll give you the other 1/10 you need to complete the production—the information and guidelines for planning your soiree or swimming party, a simple, intimate evening or an elegant ball.

According to Harry D. Oppenheimer, the most important element is organization. Mr. Oppenheimer is Chairman of the Board of HDO Productions, specialists in the rental of party tents. "First, establish a plan. That means select a date, define your budget, envision what you want, and buy a notebook. Jot down your guest list and the names of caterers, hotels and country clubs, florists, rental firms, restaurants—all professional resources your friends have relied upon in the past to give parties you enjoyed," Oppenheimer advises. "If you don't have any suggested suppliers, check the yellow pages in these categories and write down names that seem appealing."

Set Your Site

Consider having the party at a commercial establishment such as the country club, a hotel, or restaurant? You will have to select a room and proceed with their catering representative. A commercial setting often has convenience but lacks personalized charm. While there may be no room rental, taxes and gratuities add as much as 20 percent to the total bill. A charge per bottle may also be added, pushing the price of a drink up. Ask about the specifics.

At home, you have two options: inside and outside. Both offer the added hospitality of inviting guests into your environment, sharing with them more than food and beverage. "If the household is not large enough to comfortably handle your guest list, or you cringe at the thought of cigarette burns and chocolate mousse in the carpet, consider a party tent in the backyard or garden," suggests Oppenheimer.

"In calling tent rental suppliers, you will need to let them know the number of guests and the party format. They will suggest a size and should offer a price. Again, be certain to ask what the price includes and what additional options you have—flooring, heating, lighting, dance floors, decorations. Inquire about references, the quality of their tents, and what color tents are available. You want a tent that creates a bright, festive atmosphere."

For a cocktail buffet, plan on seating about one-half of the guests with enough comfortable room for the rest. Arrange the buffet opposite the bar traffic. This avoids congestion and facilitates socializing. Add a few hot, single-fork dishes to standard cocktail party fare. Anything that requires a knife or that has bones can be difficult to manage along with cocktails and conversation.

At a sit-down dinner, it goes without saying that you had better plan on seating the entire guest list, preferably at small tables of four or six. In addition, you need adequate service space between tables. Dinner should be preceded by a short cocktail hour in another part of the party site. Don't overlook offering a few edibles for this, but just to whet the appetite, not sate it. The menu can be as simple or as elaborate as you like, but don't "overfeed."

Catering Your Needs

Know what you're talking about when you call caterers about your ideas for the affair. Define the type of party—cocktail, buffet, sit-down dinner—the proposed date and time, menu preferences and restrictions, and the number of people anticipated. All prices will be on a per person basis and your caterer will need to know if there is a limitation or price range to be considered. It's the caterer's business to be creative and make suggestions. Encourage him.

As you get references from suppliers, don't be hesitant to check them. Be certain to ask what service was provided. It doesn't help if the reference is glowing because they spent $100 per person. Who couldn't do a fantastic party with that budget?

The total package from a caterer, in addition to food, may include serving and kitchen personnel, bartenders, butlers, chefs, tables, chairs, linens, china, flatware, and glassware. Find out what is included in the estimated price and what portion represents charges for these additional services. Does price include gratuities and tax?

While the caterer may include personnel in his estimate, check with firms that specialize in this service and are listed under party planning services in the yellow pages. Compare costs. It may or may not be less expensive. Remember, though, personnel supplied by the caterer are upholding the reputation of the caterer.

The caterer may supply the bartender, but you generally must supply the liquor. You can arrange for liquor on consignment from a local shop that delivers. This permits you to return any unopened bottles for a refund. If you set up more than one bar, close them one at a time, transferring opened bottles to the remaining bar.

A basic liquor ratio for a party bar is 5-5-3-2-1 (scotch, vodka, gin, bourbon, rum). Add Campari, Dubonnet, vermouth, and wine for a more complete bar. Don't forget garnishes—lemons, limes, dry soda, tonic water, ginger-ale, and cola.

In your phone interview of florists, don't forget to tell them your favorite colors, a party theme if you have one, and the kind of arrangement/decorations you have in mind, including the number and size of tables. Get a suggested itemization of what they think you need and the price. As with caterers, encourage their creativity. It helps you determine if you like their ideas and will have confidence in them. Let them know if you're considering a party tent, as some florists may be inexperienced in decorating for the outdoors.

Every time you call a supplier, ask them for suggestions. Ask the caterer for the names of good florists and tent companies, etc. You may discover some that you had not included in your initial list.

Finally, you must decide what combination of options and expenses will create the best event. Here is where your tastes and personality come into play and you create an event that is you! Inform each major supplier—caterer, tent, florist—that you have selected them based on the suggestions and prices they quoted. Be certain to restate specifics, extras, and all of the other things you wrote in your party book. Finalize plans by inviting each to your home for a complete assessment of the event planning and to sign contracts. Again, if conditions or promises are verbalized, ask that they be included in the contract.

Inform each supplier who the others are so that they may coordinate efforts. You don't want the florist showing up before the tent does. There should be a master timetable for the arrival, set-up, operation, clean-up, and removal so the day of the party you will be able to enjoy your mounting sense of excitement as you supervise the final set-up.

Send out invitations about one month in advance of the party. If sent less than two weeks prior to the party, an invitation should be followed by a phone call. Invitations extended less than a week in advance should be by phone only. Don't forget to give guests all the vital information—time, date, place, your phone number, theme, costume suggestions if appropriate, type of party.

In your conversations with the caterer, the date should be set for confirming a final number of guests. Don't forget to let him know and add a 10 percent contingency if the caterer does not.

If gratuities are not included in the caterer's fee, consider a five to ten dollar tip per person if you have been pleased with the service.

While the party is still fresh in your mind, make notes in your notebook on what worked well, what you would omit the next time, and your general observations, reactions, and criticisms. Not only will you have had a marvelous party, but you now have a complete party planning guide and reference book for your next event.

Hazel Minerva Tackett

Mrs. Hazel Minerva Tackett, the first woman to serve as county judge in this county, died Wednesday, Jan. 28, at Riverview Manor Nursing Home after a long illness. She was 84 years old.

Mrs. Tackett was born January 18, 1897 at McRoberts, the daughter of the late Granville Pearl and Atha Ritter Combs Wallen. Her husband, former County Attorney Joseph Patterson Tackett, Sr., preceded her in death in 1971. It was in the 1930's that Mrs. Tackett was appointed county judge by Governor Ruby Laffoon. She was a member of the Rebekahs and was a member of the Highland Avenue Free Will Baptist Church.

Surviving are four sons, Joseph P. Tackett, Jr., of Prestonsburg, Eddie Eugene Tackett and Judge Charles M. Tackett, both of Lexington, and Kenneth Bernard Tackett, of Frankfort; one daughter, Mrs. Mildred Ryan, of Allen; one brother, Lloyd Wallen, of Ecorse, Mich.; two sisters, Mrs. Ollie Tolliver, of Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. Alpha Crace, of Jenkins. Fourteen grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren also survive.

Funeral services were conducted at 11 a.m. Jan. 30, in the chapel of Floyd Funeral Home by the Revs. Clifford Austin and Earl Waugh. Burial was made in the Richmond Memorial cemetery.

IN MEMORIAM

Albert Holbrook and Clara Adams were married June 21, 1933 on Middle Creek, in Floyd county. We lived most of our lives in Michigan and had five sons and one daughter. One boy, who was born July 3, 1940, died at the age of nine months on April 9, 1941.

My husband, Albert, has been gone 22 years, passing away on Feb. 10, 1959. He was dear to his family. We know our love is gone but is heaven's gain. He told us all he was going to his new home where we would meet him, some day. Gone but not forgotten.

Written by his wife,
CLARA HOLBROOK SCHMIDT

Hershel McCarty

Hershel McCarty, 62, died Wednesday, Feb. 4, at his home at Wheelwright.

A son of the late George and Goldia Mae Castle McCarty, of Thealka, he was born April 17, 1918. A retired coal miner and veteran of World War II, he is survived by his wife, Ida Mae Adams.

Other survivors include two daughters, Melissa Shepherd, of Wheelwright and Linda Patton, of McDowell; a sister, Hermalee Perry, of West Virginia, two step-sisters, Grace Mullins, of Prestonsburg, and Nellie Harris, of Columbus, O., and two grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted Friday, February 6 at noon, at the First Baptist Church of Wheelwright. Full military honor services were accorded at the graveside. Burial was made in the Buckingham cemetery under the direction of the Merion Funeral Chapel.

Funeral services were conducted Monday at the Unglesby Funeral Home, Franklin, O., and burial was in the Springboro cemetery.

Blood Center Has Record Week Here

The Prestonsburg Station of the Central Kentucky Blood Center had a record week, Jan. 26-31, thanks to the efforts of the Prestonsburg Kiwanis and many willing blood donors. A total of 41 pints was collected.

For the Prestonsburg Station to provide an adequate blood supply for residents of this area, it must do this well each day it is open, a spokesman said this week. The station depends quite heavily on the blood donations of groups such as the local National Guard, the Kiwanis and others.

This week, employees of South Central Bell in Prestonsburg and Paintsville are rolling up their sleeves and donating at the station. Their donor groups protect the complete blood needs of each employee's immediate family.

In future weeks, other groups such as the Floyd County Firefighters will be helping the station collect the donors it needs to provide a safe supply of blood for hospitalized patients in this area. The station is located on the second floor of the Municipal Building here. Tuesdays from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Thursdays, 12 to 8 p.m.; Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Signup For Seeding Practices Under Way

Many farmers are taking advantage of the benefits of the Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP) by applying for cost-sharing on spring seeding practices through the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

Through ACP, ASCS will pay 75% of the cost for seed, seedbed preparation and necessary fertilizer and lime (determined by a soil test) for the establishing or renovation of permanent vegetative cover.

Farmers who may be interested in seeding their pastures or meadowland must file an application with ASCS prior to beginning work on the practice. The Floyd County ASCS office location at 105 Court St., Prestonsburg, Phone 886-2802. The final seeding date for spring will be April 30.

Allen Central Girls No. 4 After Defeating Belfry Squad

Buckie Hall (facing camera), of the Allen Central Lady Rebs, scrambles for the ball with Belfry's Pam Scott in Saturday night's hard-fought contest.

After defeating Belfry's girls, a team that had ranked No. 1 in the 15th Region, the Allen Central Rebelettes, undefeated for the season and winners of 27 consecutive games, won a spot in the Top Ten basketball teams in the state this week.

The Associated Press rated the Floyd girls No. 5. They are the state's winningest girls' high school team. The Lady Rebs' victory over Belfry was achieved Saturday night on the Belfry floor, where the regional girls' tourney will be held later.

The ACHS squad won 28 games last season while losing six but failed to get past Sheldon Clark in the semi-finals of the 15th Regional. This year's team includes four starters from last year's team.

They have never made it to the state tournament, but their coach, Judy Eversole, thinks this may be the year.

The Clark County girls were listed first in the AP ratings, Louisville Mercy second, Pulaski County third and Western Hills fourth.

The Courier-Journal's Litkenhous ratings already had Allen Central No. 4 in the standings.

Scoring in the Belfry game: Allen Central (56)—Kristi Frye 5, Kim Shepherd 12, Trena Hensley 14, Buckie Hall 11, Jelenda Howard 12 and Della Scarberry 2.

Belfry (53)—Janice Towles 21, Tammy Dearfield 6, Terry Blackburn 20, Pam Scott 2, Sonya White 2, Kathy Spinks 2.

Old Style Mine Bid for Permit Wins One Round

Whether or not Prestonsburg is ever celebrated as "the home of the nation's only pony mine"—a prospect once promoted by the mine's intended operator—the opening of the mine appears likely following a recent recommendation by a hearing officer for the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection (DNREP).

Amid some fanfare, Donald J. "Dootney" Horn, president of the Old Style Mining Company, announced his intention over a year ago of re-opening a deep mine off KY 1428, in the vicinity of the Ball Alley curve, using pit ponies and shovels reminiscent of the days before the advent of mechanized mining.

Apart from financial considerations, which Horn said favored a return to the older mining methods, the potential of such a mine for generating tourists here was touted as an added reason for the venture.

Prestonsburg city officials were not impressed. In view of traffic and environmental problems created when the mine was faced up two years ago, the city brought action to protest the issuance of a mining permit for the site.

At a hearing on the city's objections January 6 this year, City Attorney Paul P. Burchett argued that the proximity of the mine to KY 1428 would generate mud and dust and create a traffic hazard on the highway.

Horn argued in response that, since no further surface disturbance is necessary at the site and since the mine's loading area has since been surfaced with recycled asphalt, there is no reason to suppose that problems previously associated with the mine operation will be repeated.

Only three trucks would be loaded daily, a flagman would be available to direct their entry onto the highway, loading would be scheduled only for off-peak traffic periods, and the mine entrance is visible from the highway for at least 300 feet in both directions, Horn contended.

Hearing Officer J. Gregg Clendenin was apparently persuaded by the argument. Horn "demonstrated that each and every hazard created by the prior operation has been taken into account and will not be created by the present operation," he reported.

"A preponderance of the evidence demonstrated that the operation would not, if operated as planned, pose a hazard to public safety or to a public road, and that other relevant interests of the public could be or would be protected," Clendenin concluded.

The hearing officer recommended, accordingly, that consideration of the company's mining permit application "continue without regard to the objections raised by the city," but that any permit should be issued on condition that the precautionary measures noted by the operator be implemented, and that water quality be monitored and quality standards enforced. An order to that effect has been prepared for the signature of DNREP Secretary Jackie Swigart.

Wrestlers Watch Blood Pressure

Leaping Lanny (seated) and Ric McCord, well-known professional wrestlers in the area, were on hand last Friday to take advantage of a free blood pressure clinic held at Martin City Hall. The clinic was sponsored by the Floyd County Chapter of the American Heart Association and the Martin Fire Department.

Body of Cline Exhumed

The body of 18-year-old Allen Lee Cline, of Martin county, who was ruled a drowning victim at Dewey Lake last summer, has been exhumed and taken to a Louisville pathologist for an autopsy.

The autopsy was requested by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Cline. Although the youth's death was ruled the result of accidental drowning, the parents have been conducting a private investigation and believe that there was foul play.

NAME OMITTED IN LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS

The name of Carl Mitchell was inadvertently omitted from a listing of those who contributed to the John M. Stumbo Elementary School majorettes. His contribution is greatly appreciated by the majorettes, their parents and directors, as are those of all others who have helped in any way.

Dowell Observes Safety Week

More than 6500 Dowell employees nationwide will devote an entire work day to the discussion of safety and participation in safety-oriented activities during the week of February 8. This special effort is part of Dowell's third annual National Safety Week.

"Safety is always foremost in the minds of Dowell employees," comments C. R. Whitten, district manager for Dowell's Prestonsburg district. "Our motto is 'If it can't be done safely, don't do it,' and we live by that motto."

As a result of this attention to safety Dowell employees and have achieved one of the best safety records in the oil and gas industry—in fact, in 1980 the employees of the division completed the safest year in Dowell's history.

Most people think heart disease happens only in the elderly.

It happens in children as well. Things like rheumatic heart disease and congenital heart defects. Each year, nearly one million Americans of all ages die of heart disease and stroke. And 20,000 of them die from childhood heart diseases.

The American Heart Association is fighting to reduce early death and disability from heart disease and stroke with research, professional and public education, and community service programs.

But more needs to be done.

You can help us save young lives by sending your dollars today to your local Heart Association, listed in your telephone directory.

James Slovik, 25, of Prestonsburg, was graduated recently from the United States Border Patrol Academy at Glyco, Georgia, and will perform duties as a patrol agent in the El Centro, California Border patrol Sector.

Patrol Agent Slovik was a member of the 143rd Session of the Border Patrol Academy and successfully completed the course in immigration and nationality law and regulation, Spanish language, duties and authority to act, court procedures, constitutional rights, physical training, and other studies involving the duties of patrol officers.

Before his appointment to the border patrol, Slovik was a civil engineering technician for the Soil Conservation Service in Floyd, Martin, and Pike counties.

Exhibit Traces History Of Presidential Election

"Ballots and Bandwagons," a new exhibit in the Old Capitol at Frankfort, traces the history of U.S. presidential elections from George Washington to Jimmy Carter.

This unique collection contains approximately 20,000 pieces of political memorabilia and includes autographs of all the presidents, most vice-presidents, first ladies, assassins and major party nominees.

The exhibit displays several varieties of Washington inaugural buttons. "While little is known about them, the buttons date from Washington's inauguration in 1789, where he is said to have worn a similar set," said Bill Long, curator of the Old Capitol.

Among the highlights of the exhibit are a diary kept by the wife of Union General and presidential candidate George C. McClellan and a letter from a young Jacqueline Kennedy.

Thousands of buttons are exhibited, including many classics of the past which have never been displayed publicly. Campaign tokens, badges and mechanical pins for the 19th century appear, along with coins used to advertise the candidacies of Andrew Jackson, Winfield Scott and Henry Clay.

Among the other interesting objects to be seen are torchlights once carried in political parades of the 19th century, a multicolored campaign lantern from 1888, campaign hats and glassware relating to American presidential campaign history from 1789 to 1976.

"Ballots and Bandwagons" is owned by "Cap" Hershey and Paul Perlin. The Hillbrook collection is named for the collectors' farm, Hillbrook, located near Lexington.

Perlin has spent several years collecting the numerous autographs, buttons and assorted political memorabilia.

This unique exhibit will be on display through June. Teachers who are planning tours for students are asked to schedule their visits in advance, by contacting Bill Long, Kentucky Historical Society, at (502) 564-3016.

The society's museums are open daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on Sundays from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Unemployed Rises in Area

County-by-county labor force estimates released last week by the Department for Human Resources indicate that the eastern and south central areas of Kentucky continue to post the state's highest unemployment rates.

The 34-county eastern Kentucky area had a December unemployment rate of 10.1 percent, compared to 9.2 percent the month before. The 17 south central area counties averaged 9.7 percent unemployment in December, up from November's rate of 9.2 percent.

The department's chief labor market analyst, Robert MacDonald, attributes the high rates to a downturn in the lumber, wood products and apparel industries.

Unemployment in the Bluegrass area remained at the lowest level in the state. The area's December rate was 5.8 percent.

In the Lexington metropolitan area, unemployment went up only one-tenth of a percentage point from November to December, from 4.3 percent to 4.4 percent. The rate represents 7,850 people out of work.

Unemployment in the Louisville metro area increased by 2,068 persons from mid-November to mid-December, causing the area's rate to jump by 0.5 percentage points to 8.3 percent.

The state unemployment rate for the last month of 1980 was 8.6 percent, up 0.6 percentage points from the month before. The national rate for December was 6.9 percent.

Unemployment in the eastern Kentucky area increased from 28,272 persons in mid-November to 30,767 in mid-December. The area's jobless rate leaped 0.9 of a percentage point to 10.1 percent. The highest jobless rate of the area leaped 0.9 of a percentage point to 10.1 percent. The highest jobless rate in the area, 18.2 percent, was recorded by Carter county. Martin county had the lowest area rate, 4.6 percent. Floyd county's was 9.6 percent. Its unemployment totalled 1397.

The unemployment percentages in Eastern Kentucky counties:

- Bath, 15.1%; Bell, 9.7; Boyd, 9; Breathitt, 10.3; Carter, 18.2; Clay, 11.9; Elliott, 9.4; Floyd, 9.6; Greenup, 6.6; Harlan, 9.5; Jackson, 13.7; Johnson, 9.9; Knott, 14.4; Knox, 10.4; Laurel, 8.5; Lawrence, 12.9; Lee, 16.4; Leslie, 7.3; Letcher, 14.1; McCreary, 15.3; Magoffin, 14.5; Martin, 4.6; Menifee, 15.1; Montgomery, 9.7; Morgan, 12; Owsley, 13.2; Perry, 9.9; Pike, 6.6; Pulaski, 10.1; Rockcastle, 11.3; Rowan, 7.7; Wayne, 9.6; Whitley, 13.3; Wolfe, 16.4.

Displaced Homemakers Benefit from Program

The Displaced Homemaker Program at Prestonsburg Community College is designed to assist those persons who have become the head of the household as a result of a death or disability of the spouse, divorce or separation. Often, the "new" head of the household is ill-prepared to meet the demands of the family. The person usually has little or no job skills or self-confidence. These factors can result in many problems for the displaced homemaker.

The Displaced Homemaker Program is funded through CETA (Concentrated Employment Training Act). This funding allows displaced homemakers participants to receive classroom training in a desired field of interest and need, work experience, or actual job placement. Every plan is individualized for the participant. Counseling, testing, and remedial training are also available through this program.

Presently 12 participants are enrolled in various classroom training fields. Many others have gone through counseling and testing sessions or have obtained their GED's.

Those interested in learning more about the program should contact the Displaced Homemaker Program at Prestonsburg Community College or call Patty McKenzie at 886-3863.

Dog Virus Merits Caution, Vets Say

Local dog owners should be aware that immediate veterinary care can increase chances of recovery from a highly contagious intestinal disease that can be a killer when left untreated, veterinarians advise.

The disease, called canine parvovirus, is characterized by vomiting, severe diarrhea, normal to high temperature and dehydration. Onset of symptoms is sudden, but is usually preceded by the dog acting sluggish and having loss of appetite for a day or two. An alert dog owner can increase chances of survival greatly by taking the dog to a veterinarian at the first sign of distress.

Pet owners are advised to have the dog vaccinated as soon as possible. Until a dog is immunized, contact with other dogs and with dog feces should be minimized. Dogs should be kept in good health. Dogs with worms or other health problems are likely to be more severely affected, according to veterinarians.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of Parthena Gayheart would express appreciation to all who helped in any way during her recent passing. Thanks for the food, flowers, the time spent with the family, and other expressions of sympathy; to the McDowell Hospital, the nursing staff, and a special thanks to Dr. Mary Hall. We would also thank the ministers of the Regular Baptist Church for their comforting words and the Hall Funeral Home for its efficient service.

New Findings in Labrador Revise View of Early Man

By MADELEINE JACOBS
Smithsonian News Service

Labrador. The name itself conjures up visions of a remote and desolate land—barren, frigid, isolated. For nearly 10 months of the year, this peninsula on the northeastern tip of the North American continent lies locked in a deep freeze, its 800 mile coastline choked with massive pack ice. Even in July, at the height of the all-too-brief summer, bone-chilling storms strike without warning along the narrow strip of coastal tundra.

Today, Labrador is one of the last wilderness areas in North America. Its southern interior is a trackless expanse of spruce and bog, giving way in the north to lichens, stunted shrubs, rocky plateaus and forbidding mountains. Its population of Eskimos (Inuit), Indians and European-Canadians numbers less than 12,000; most of the country is deserted completely. There are no permanent settlements along more than a third of its northern coastline, an area rich in largely untapped natural resources—caribou, sea mammals, salmon, cod and other fish.

But it was not always so, according to Dr. William W. Fitzhugh, an anthropologist at the Smithsonian's Museum of Natural History in Washington, D.C.

After 12 years of painstaking research in Labrador, Fitzhugh and his colleagues have concluded that this rugged, inhospitable land was continuously and successfully occupied for nearly 7,000 years by Indian cultures and for 4,000 years by Eskimo cultures.

The discovery of these hardy peoples is causing anthropologists to rethink their notions of primitive man and his life on the North American continent. For these well-adapted cultures lived not only in the slightly warmer southern regions of Labrador but, in the case of the Eskimos, all the way to the northernmost tip, a mere 300 miles below the Arctic Circle. Moreover, during a trip in the north last summer, Fitzhugh uncovered the remains of a large Indian settlement which is totally unlike any found previously in Labrador and which, he says, "represents a breakthrough in our understanding of far northeast Indian cultures."

The history of human occupation in Labrador as pieced together by Fitzhugh is a testament to endurance and adaptability.

"It all comes down to a question of the relationship between man and his environment," he says. "Our findings mean we have to re-evaluate our traditional view of how early cultures adapted to so-called 'marginal' environments. The research also has practical implications for people living today, both in Labrador and other harsh locales."

When Fitzhugh began his research in 1968, anthropologists generally assumed that very few early cultures inhabited the northern Canadian Maritime Provinces for any significant length of time; those that did live there were considered to be culturally inferior to other groups living farther north or south of those provinces.

Fitzhugh believed these assumptions could be tested properly only by carrying out a full-scale, regional survey of all potential settlement areas along the coast. Of key interest to him was the boundary between the forest (the normal domain of Indian cultures) and the tundra/coastal areas (the normal domain of Eskimos) and how shifts in climate and these boundaries through time were related to the distribution of different cultures.

The subsequent survey has been a monumental undertaking, involving dozens of scientists and students from a number of U.S. and Canadian universities and institutions. Beginning in southern Labrador each June, the researchers traveled in teams by boat along the coast, stopping at likely areas where people might have lived—protected harbors, coves with sandy beaches, river mouths and, in central Labrador, the plethora of coastal islands and skerries (rocky isles).

Fitzhugh and his colleagues have now identified more than 1,000 habitation sites, dating from 500 B.C. to the early 20th century. Amazingly, there are 350 sites along the north coast, an area including the forbidding Torngat Mountain Range rising 5,500 feet directly from the sea.

From these sites they have collected and analyzed hundreds of thousands of vegetation and pollen samples, shells, tools, charcoal, bones and other evidence of occupation. The picture that emerges from the continuing analysis is a dynamic one, with Indian and Eskimo cultures occupying various parts of the Labrador coast for varying, but lengthy, time periods.

From the artifacts, Fitzhugh has reconstructed much about their lifestyle. Picture, for instance, maritime Archaic Indians living 6,000 years ago on the central Labrador coast (in the area around present-day Nain). In the spring, they moved from the mainland to large sites on the outer islands, where they hunted northward-migrating harp seals and walrus. In the summer, they dispersed into smaller groups on the surrounding islands in the inner bays and traveled southward, trading for wood, birch bark and copper, and northward to Ramah Bay to obtain Ramah chert, a beautiful stone used in trade and in many of their tools.

Indian cultures were the first to appear in Labrador, about 3,000 years before the first Eskimos arrived and at a time when remnants of Ice Age glaciers still persisted in the interior. They migrated from the south and, unlike traditional Indian cultures, the early Labrador Indians lived remarkably like Eskimos and hunted seals, walrus and caribou. The Indians often lived north of the forest boundary and relied on the maritime resources to survive. For this reason, they have been named "Maritime Archaic" cultures.

Their extraordinary navigational abilities put them in contact with related cultures as far south as Maine—about 1,500 miles away—where Ramah chert has been found in pre-historic Indian sites.

In September, they hunted caribou and prepared food for the winter. Following the return of the caribou hunters, they began preparations for the fall harp seal hunt in October and November. In the winter, the Indians probably moved to interior areas to escape the harsh coastal weather.

Although such Indian cultures were abundant on the central coast, Fitzhugh was surprised last summer to find an extensive Maritime Archaic settlement in Nulliak, well up the coast north of the forest boundary. The site dates back 4,000 years.

New Findings In Labrador . . .

To an untrained observer, the site appears to be nothing more than a boulder-strewn field. But to Fitzhugh and his team, the boulders formed the unmistakable outlines of a series of structures, ranging from 30 yards long to the length of a football field. The structures, apparently houses, were replete with hearths, floor passages and tools. At Nulliak, they also found large burial mounds and the remains of a caribou trap.

"In essence, we discovered a much more complex maritime Archaic society than we'd ever found before," Fitzhugh says. "The buildings and burials indicate large social groups, perhaps formed into clans, with certain people accorded special status as seen in the elaborate burial mounds and profusion of grave goods. The post-Maritime Archaic Indian cultures had a lower profile, with a simpler technology, less trade and smaller social organizations."

But what strikes Fitzhugh the most are the buildings.

"We've seen nothing like these structures before in Labrador," he says. "There is no wood this far north to construct such large buildings. How did they do it? Did they bring building materials north with them as southerners do today in the Arctic? This is a mystery, he admits, that may never be solved."

The expansions and shifts of different cultures in Labrador, Fitzhugh believes, are probably a result of complex relationships between changing climate and environmental conditions which affected hunting success. Although Eskimo cultures expanded south during cold periods and Indians expanded north during warm periods, these changes do not seem to result from shifts in the forest boundary, which has been stable for the past 4,500 years.

Instead, he says, factors such as disease, rivalries, starvation and, much later, trading opportunities with Europeans, probably resulted in major cultural movements and changes. "Ultimately, social and economic, rather than environmental or climatic, factors may have been more important in territorial shifts," he says.

While the full story may never be deciphered completely, the Labrador survey findings, he says, have practical value to the Indians, Eskimos and European-Canadians living in Labrador today.

As recently as the early 1900s, thousands of people lived along the northern Labrador coast, exploiting the resources and trading for needed goods; many foreign fisheries thrived on the great stocks of cod. Then, as a result of World War I and the subsequent worldwide economic depression, the northern settlements began to collapse.

When Newfoundland and Labrador joined Canada in 1949, the Newfoundland government establishment jurisdiction over the area. In efforts to centralize social and economic services, it closed the northern settlements and relocated the Eskimo populations to the south. The last big settlement, Hebron, was closed down in 1958. Port Burwell, a smaller settlement at the northern tip of Labrador, was closed by the Northwest Territories government in 1978.

"We see from the past that this northern area could be occupied today," Fitzhugh says. "Implanting a completely modern economy won't work, because the area is inaccessible nine or 10 months of the year. But our research shows that for many thousands of years, people had learned how to adapt to this environment, and they have the capabilities to reoccupy it today."

"If the past is prologue, the northern settlement issue may soon be reopened, especially by native peoples desiring a traditional livelihood and to support a growing interest in tourism and the exploitation of large stocks of fish and game for outside markets."

Team Nears Season End

The Eastern Kentucky Gymnastics team has completed its second competitive season with the exception of the state meet which is to be held Feb. 22. The EKG team has done quite well in its five meets with teams from Louisville, Lexington and Winchester.

Nine-year-old Kristy Nunery has won 10 of the possible 25 first-place awards in her age group this year. This includes four of five first place all-around awards.

Sherry Dingus, 12, who is no longer with the team, competed in three meets and won five first place awards, including one first place all-around award.

Other team members winning first place awards are: Crissy Lawson, age 8, 3; Misheala Sloane, age 12, 2; Bonnie Hensley, age 11, 2; Rachel Bentley, age 10, 2; Mary Clifton, age 9, 1; Lisa Young, age 11, 1; and Tanzi Webb, age 11, 1.

Team members who have qualified for the state meet with at least an all-around score of 28 are Kristy Nunery, Misheala Sloane, Rachel Bentley, Lisa Young, Bonnie Hensley, Leigh Ann Patton, Wendy Combs, Mary Clifton, and Crissy Lawson.

The team will compete in the Class IV meet which will be held at Gymbyme Gymnastics, Lexington. Some of the girls will be moving up to Class III competition next year. They are coached by Henry Young.

Cheerleaders Win Recent Honors

Bobcats Win Conference Title

By C. "OLLIE" ROBINSON

Tommy Lynn May The Betsy Layne Bobcats won three games last week. Starting on Wednesday night at Prestonsburg, the Bobcats defeated the Prestonsburg Blackcats, 67-54 with four starters hitting in double figures. Prestonsburg's Joe Marson took scoring honors for the night with 25 points, however, Betsy Layne finished their conference games and won the conference title with a record of seven wins and one loss. The Bobcats won over Millard Thursday night in the opener of the Mullins Invitational tournament in easy fashion, 95 to 43. Dwayne Lykins was high man with 21 points. Saturday night's win for the Bobcats was sweet. They won the Mullins Invitational by defeating Mullins, 81 to 69, and extended their winning streak to seven games. Coy Samons and Dwayne Lykins were named to the five-player All-Tournament Team.

McDowell won its 21st game of the season by defeating Magoffin County at Salyersville Thursday night, 98 to 82. The Daredevils got off to a 28 to 4 lead at the end of the first quarter. Pete Grigsby scored 29 points, had a fine floor game and dished out six assists. However, scoring honors went to Salyersville's Mark Bailey with 38 points. McDowell finished its conference play with a record of six wins and two losses.

The Allen Central Rebels won two out of three games last week. Last Tuesday night the Rebels defeated the Wheelwright Trojans, 83 to 51, to avenge a loss two weeks ago. Bruce Mullins fired in 23 points and 17 rebounds. Gilford Hall was the leading scorer for the Trojans with 18 points. Friday night, the Rebels entertained the Ashland Tomcats and lost a barnburner, 57 to 56. The Tomcats led at halftime, 30 to 27, but Randy Conley got a hot hand in the third quarter when he scored 15 points and the Rebels led, 42 to 41, going into the fourth quarter. Bruce Mullins fouled out of the game and Randy Conley was the only one left that could rebound against the Tomcats. The Rebels had a couple of chances in the closing seconds but threw the ball away and the Tomcats held onto the one-point margin to win. Allen Central finished conference play with a record of four wins and four losses.

The Allen Central Rebelettes won three games last week and ran their record to 27 wins without a loss. Their big win came last Saturday night at Belfry when the Rebelettes defeated the home-standing Lady Pirates, 56 to 53, and in one of the state high school polls, the Rebelettes soared to the fifth spot. Last Tuesday night, the Rebelettes won over the Wheelwright Lady Trojans, 76 to 37, with Trena Hensley scoring 26 points.

The Betsy Layne Lady Bobcats won one game and lost one last week. Wednesday night the Lady Bobcats traveled to Prestonsburg and won, 71 to 30. They were led in scoring by Lela Layne with 15. Saturday night, the Lady Bobcats traveled to Sheldon Clark and lost, 66 to 59.

The McDowell Daredevilles lost two games last week. Wednesday night they traveled to Knott County Central and lost, 87 to 41.

W'wright Ready for 3rd Season

By KENNY RICE

Win a key game and it can build a world of confidence in a young team. That happened to Wheelwright on January 13 when the Trojans beat Allen Central, 60-54. It marked the first time in six years Wheelwright had won a game against the Rebels at Wheelwright.

"Beating Allen Central was the biggest win of the year for us," says Coach Danny Johnson. "We lack experience and I knew it would take until after Christmas for us to come around. Now, I can see improvement in every game. No one can take us lightly now, we have respect."

Johnson was a star on the 1970 regional championship team of Coach Frankie Francis at Wheelwright. He is proud of the Trojan hardwood tradition and he thinks the future is bright.

"I thought it would take two or three years to build the B team program here. We have a 24-game B team schedule this season and we have a freshman team. Our two feeder schools, Osborne and Melvin, have fine coaches and winning records. We are using a lot of young people this season. I have nine players who can help us. I think everything is coming along real well."

Johnson has relied on four sophomores and a freshman among those nine. The youthful aggressiveness is one reason for the Trojans' major problem, turnovers. They have made them at crucial times this season.

The Trojans are anxiously awaiting the district tournament. They are hoping to pull a few surprises. That has been the goal of Johnson and his team since the preseason when it was obvious the Trojans were a year away from being contenders.

"We figure we can be the darkhorse. We play three seasons, the one before Christmas, the one up until the district and then the third season, the district tournament. We're looking forward to the third season and we hope to knock somebody off. That's our aim" says Johnson.

ONCE MORE?

McDowell coach Johnny Ray Turner has guided the Lady Devils to back-to-back regional tourney appearances and three trips to the regional in the past four seasons.

The Lady Devils have been plagued by injuries over the second half of the season, with starters Liz Hamilton, Melinda Hopkins and Brenda Kidd all being out of action at the same time during the middle of January.

Turner has used three eighth-graders extensively on the varsity this season and when his three starters

HERE IT IS

Another Marvin Tackett golfing gem. Marvin and some of his pals were at Jenny Wiley a few years back to watch another friend in a tournament. Their friend was matched against an out of countian who had a rowdy gallery with him.

The gallery heckled Marvin's friend at each hole. As they reached the final hole, each man hit the ball out of bounds. One of the members of Marvin's group found their buddy's ball in the rough. The guy who found it was barefoot and he picked the ball up with his toes and flipped it in bounds. When everyone caught up with the twosome, their friend's ball was in bounds, the out of countian's was still out.

"If that guy's friends hadn't given our friend a hard time, well," Marvin grinned that famous grin.

WHAT IS A CONSTABLE?

Some people may not know or have forgotten the responsibilities of a Constable. A Constable has the same power as the County Sheriff in District 1. This power has not been exercised in the past several years. A Constable should escort funerals and support the local sheriff to the best of his ability. A man needs experience to do this. I have been Deputy Sheriff for 4 1/2 years. I have answered calls all hours of the night. I've escorted nearly every funeral I knew about. I've served the people of Floyd county the best I could and given the opportunity I can do an even better job for the people of District 1. So restore the office of Constable for better law enforcement.

I have found that most of the people of our county want a change. They look back over the years and they see they voted for people who knew them only at election time.

People are tired of getting the run-around. They want something done with our drug problems, bootlegging, stealing and many other problems our county has. We need stricter laws enforced. If you, the people, will get behind me, we can make a change—a better county for our young people. If elected, I will work with our schools, show films on drugs and alcohol. We will let them know early in life just what drugs and alcohol will do to their lives.

I don't have organized crime behind me. I don't think I need it. I need the good citizens of this county. I think I am old enough and have the experience to do you a good job. I am a Vietnam veteran and a Master Mason at Lodge 869, Wayland, Ky. I live at Boldman, and am employed by the Chessie System. I am the people's candidate . . . the rest is up to the voters on election day.

Support me and let's have a better county to live in. Thank you.

College Testing Program Registration Date Set

High School students who plan ahead for college have a better chance of successfully completing their educational goals, many believe.

The planning process generally is started by successful students in the spring of their junior year in high school. In addition to exploring college publications, these students often take the Act assessment at this time.

The American College Testing (Act) Program is particularly helpful to high school students who are exploring what they want to do after high school. Students who wish to take it this spring need to register for it before February 27. Information can be obtained from High School Guidance Personnel and College Admissions Offices.

CHESTER (T.Y.) JARRELL DEMOCRAT, CANDIDATE FOR CONSTABLE, DISTRICT 1 "A COAL MINER"

(Pol. adv. pd. by candidate, 2-4-21-pd.)

TO THE VOTERS IN DISTRICT 1

A few months before the election we get some of the things that we have been trying to get done for the past 4 years: such as road repairs, gravel, or drain tiles put in. Don't be fooled by these kinds of schemes. It's only to get your votes and get re-elected. How many times have you tried to get something done? And were promised time and time again and then forgotten? So look around at our county roads and hollows in District 1 and judge for yourselves. Don't settle for getting things done just before election. Elect a man who will get the job done year-round, a man to serve all the people-rich or poor.

I'm asking all concerned voting people, my friends and neighbors of District 1 to get behind me and support me in this campaign.

IN MAY, ELECT

PAUL SLONE

DEMOCRAT CANDIDATE FOR
MAGISTRATE, DISTRICT 1

A SPECIAL VALENTINE MESSAGE TO THE VOTERS IN DISTRICT 4

I was born and reared in Floyd county, the son of Harmel and Lurie Salisbury Roberts of Toler Creek. My grandparents were Floyd and Lucky Perry Roberts, and Sid and Margaret Hall Salisbury. My great grandparents were Willie and Rachel Tibbs Roberts and Tipton and Polly Tackett Hall. I am married to the former Sue Wagner, daughter of Stanley and Della Burchett Wagner, of Endicott. We have five children: Steve, Monica, Tim, Brian and Stevie Lee.

I have always had a great desire to be of service to others. After graduating from Betsy Layne High School in 1950, I enlisted in the armed forces and served our country in the Korean War. I returned a disabled veteran and finished my education at Pikeville College. Since then, I have been working with your children in the classrooms of the Floyd County Schools helping to meet their educational needs.

Now, I am a candidate for magistrate, because I have seen many needs and problems go unsolved. The reason for this negligence I do not understand, but I do understand that our taxes are higher than ever before and benefits returned to the community seem less.

Pledge your heart and support to my campaign; I pledge the best that is within me to you and our communities. Together, we can get the job done.

HAVE A HEART—DO YOUR PART VOTE FOR

LEO ROBERTS FOR MAGISTRATE, DISTRICT 4

Claims Road Is Neglected

Ronnie Moore and Donald Ray Howell, residents of the Dick Moore Branch of Frasure's Creek, point to deeply rutted section of the road which residents must travel. Six families live in the narrow hollow near McDowell, and, according to one resident, Ed R. Moore, the road is impassable to all but four-wheel-drive vehicles. Fifteen children must walk out of the hollow each day to school, according to Moore, and he reports that repeated requests over the past year for help with red dog, ditching and grading have been ignored.

"I put in a bridge last summer, myself," he says, "and people on the branch pitched in and hired a dozer and jack hammer to break up rock. The only things that get done is what we do ourselves."

One of Hostages Takes Part In Governor's Day of Prayer

It was a day of stirring music, American flags and teary eyes, of yellow ribbons, speeches and standing ovations. It was the Governor's Day of Prayer and Thanksgiving.

Nearly 1,000 Kentuckians gathered in Frankfort's Capital Plaza Convention last Tuesday to participate in the event and express their appreciation for the return of Air Force Lt. Col. David M. Roeder, one of the 52 Americans who was held hostage in Iran for 444 days.

Guest-speaker, Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, pastor of New York's Marble Collegiate church and renowned author, said the United States "has been changed" since the former hostages returned home.

"Maybe you folks have rendered a service to your country," Peale said to Roeder. "You've started a revival in the United States."

Speaking, he said, on behalf of his 51 fellow former hostages, Roeder said "we are profoundly grateful" for the support they received from the American people during captivity.

He said there were no heroes among the 52. The real heroes are their families and the American people, Roeder added.

In the quiet, steady voice that was filled with emotion, he told reporters after the ceremonies "it is great" to see Americans of all races, social strata and ages waving flags. He said he had "had enough of burning flags by non-Americans."

The highly-decorated Vietnam veteran said "what was happening when I left and what is happening now" is the biggest change he has seen in this country.

Gov. John Y. Brown Jr., in his welcoming address, said a doctor in a World War II German prison camp noted that the prisoners who survived were those who had the will to survive. Brown said Americans can be proud of the 52 former hostages because all of them had that will and because of it they withstood pressures of their captivity.

CLOTHING LABELS INFORM CONSUMERS

Labels and hangtags on textile items provide information valuable for buyers, sellers and professional cleaners. In fact, labeling is the most popular vehicle for manufacturers to convey their message.

Apparel and household textile labels identify the item, aid in selling the product, aid in helping the consumer make an intelligent selection, and assist in choosing the proper care and maintenance of the item. Rarely will a single label or hangtag contain all this information; so you must be prepared to look for several labels.

You may find as many as five labels on an item.

Most prevalent are informative labels that help you make a wise purchase. Pertinent information you'll find on these tags include the size, type of fabric, fabric performance, and special instructions or precautions on care. Informative labels may also include information required by the Textile Fiber Product Identification Act, specifically fiber content by percentages.

The brand label is usually a separate tag containing a distinctive mark, symbol or wording identifying a particular manufacturer. These are usually called trademarks.

Apparel manufacturers may obtain a registration number from the Bureau of Consumer Protection, Federal Trade Commission. Instead of using the name of the company, the RN, sewn-label identifies the manufacturer.

The union label identifies the garment as one made in the United States. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, or United Garment Workers of America union label assures you that workers constructed the garment under fair working conditions.

Some textile items also display a hangtag often referred to as a "seal of approval." This certifies the item has been tested by a specific laboratory independent of the manufacturer. Each laboratory establishes its own fixed standards of quality.

As a rule, there is no additional information on the label about the exact standards of quality the item has met. If you'd like to know about the specifics, write a letter to the manufacturer or certifying laboratory.

Art Exhibition Set

The Arts Club of Louisville is sponsoring the Fifth Biennial Regional Art Exhibition October 4 - October 26, in Louisville. The competition is open to youth 16-25 years of age.

Artists are eligible to submit two entries: paintings in oil, water color, acrylic or egg tempora, or mixed media using any of these. All works must be original and completed within the last two years.

The show will be juried by 35 mm slides (2"x2"); no glass slides accepted. Awards will be made by viewing the actual exhibition. Total awards of $5500 will include six $500 tuition scholarships, six $250 scholarships and a minimum of twelve cash or supplies prizes.

Any person wanting a prospectus of The Bluegrass Exhibition should write to: Mrs. E. W. Roles, Chairman, 7401 Woodhill Valley Road, Louisville, Kentucky 40222.

Med Students Work With Local Doctors

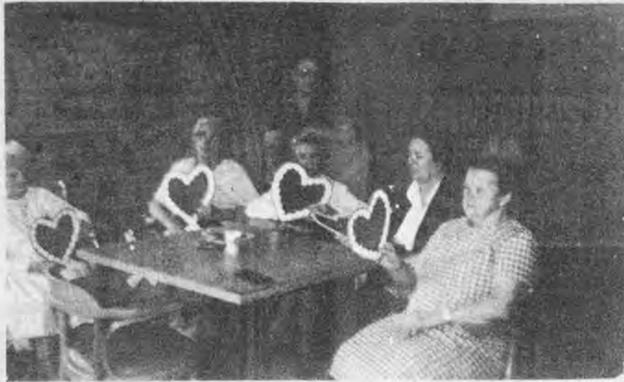

Three students from the University of Kentucky are studying with local doctors.

Robert Hughes, fourth year medical student, and a son of Fayette Hughes, of Prestonsburg, has been here since January 5 working with Dr. Cook and Dr. Bader. His wife, Joyce Forsthoefel, also a fourth year med student, has been working with Dr. Vidwan.

Barbara Davis, a clinical associate student, will be with Dr. Narong Chalothorn through March 6.

The students are here to study under the supervision of local physicians and to acquaint themselves with the practice of medicine in a rural area. The long-range goal is to have students return to this area to practice.

The students' stay in the area is coordinated by the Big Sandy/FIVCO Area Health Education System, which is a program of the Council on Higher Education funded by the State.

Residents at Riverview Manor Nursing Home are shown making posters for the Rock and Roll Jamboree to be held at Riverview at 2 p.m., Saturday, February 14. All proceeds will go to the American Heart Fund.

McCoy To Headline East Ky. Telerama For March of Dimes

Country recording artist Charlie McCoy will headline a combination of local celebrities, political figures, local clubs and talent when Channel 57 (KYH-TV, Hazard) broadcasts the third annual Eastern Kentucky Telerama for the March of Dimes, March 14-15. The show will originate from the Hazard Community College auditorium.

Mr. McCoy, who is also music director of Nashville's "Hee-Haw" television show, will be appearing with his band, featuring vocalist Laney Smallwood.

The telerama will raise funds for the March of Dimes programs of birth defects treatment and prevention. The money raised will go toward local and national programs of research, education and medical services to help the nearly 250,000 children born every year in this country with birth defects.

The telerama will be carried by cable systems outside Perry county in Floyd, Knott, Estill, Leslie, Breathitt, Harlan, Letcher, Pike, Johnson, Laurel, Clay, Magoffin, Morgan, Owsley, Powell, Wolfe, and Jackson counties. Groups in those counties who wish to help the telerama efforts may call the March of Dimes in Lexington at 233-3634. Groups who raise funds for the telerama will be invited to present the results of their effort on the air.

Local chairman will be named shortly in each of the counties where the telerama is carried. These chairmen will help to coordinate and carry on local fund-raising efforts.

A meeting of the Floyd County Chapter, American Heart Association, is scheduled for next Wednesday, February 18 at Riverview Manor Nursing Home. All members and interested citizens are urged to attend.

Ecumenical Youth Plan Valentine Party Here

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Ip will be the site for a Valentine party Friday, sponsored by the Youth Club of First Presbyterian, St. James Episcopal and St. Theodore Catholic churches. The ecumenical youth club has been meeting together since November for discussions and programs on Sunday evenings. Parties and special events are planned the third weekend of each month. The party will begin at 6:30 p.m.

Sponsors from the three churches who work regularly with the youth include Mrs. Ip, from St. James; Mary Neeley and Maureen Sullivan, from St. Theodore, and the Rev. Timothy Jessen, from First Presbyterian. Parents and interested church members provide refreshments and program help on a rotating basis.

MEETING RESCHEDULED

The meeting scheduled at the Johnson County Library, Paintsville, by the Big Sandy Chapter, National Organization for Women, for a discussion of the Human Life Amendment, was postponed last Sunday because of bad weather. The meeting has been rescheduled for next Sunday at the same place at 3 p.m.

NOTICE OF INTENTION TO MINE

1. In accordance with the provisions of KRS 350.055, notice is hereby given that: Bebe Coal Corporation, P. O. Box 183, Ivel, Kentucky 41642 intends to file an application for the surface disturbance mining of approximately 4.0 acres located west of Amba in Floyd county. The proposed operation is approximately 2.25 miles north of State Route 979's junction with Parson Branch, and located west of Mud Creek, latitude 37d. 31' 46", longitude 82d. 39' 10". The surface of the area to be mined is owned by: Tex Mitchell. A brief description of the kind of mining activity proposed is: Surface disturbance for underground mining (Amending the original permit to provide for an additional 1.2 Ac. disturbance). The application will be filed at the Bureau of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement, Prestonsburg Area Office, South Lake Drive, Prestonsburg, Kentucky 41653.

Persons wishing to file written objections and/or request a formal administrative hearing in regard to the above described surface mine should notify the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection within 30 days of the date of this notice. A copy of the newspaper clipping must be attached to the written objection. The objection or request for a hearing will reference application number 036-5117 (Amend). Such objection or request must be in accordance with KRS 224.081 (2), and must be forwarded to the Director of Permits, Bureau of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement, Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601.

2. Notice is hereby provided pursuant to 30 CFR 715.13 (d) (10) and KRS 350 that the proposed post mining land use does not constitute a change from the pre-mining land use. Public comment regarding a proposed change in land use may be submitted to the address listed above.

LEGAL NOTICE

Power Demand Hits Record High Feb. 5

Customers of Kentucky Power Company set a 979,000-kilowatt demand record for electricity at 9 a.m. last Thursday.

This new peak is 6.2 percent higher than last winter's record demand of 922,000 kilowatts. Interestingly, peaks for both winters occurred on February 5.

"This new peak occurred when outdoor temperatures were in the range of 10 to 12 degrees above zero Fahrenheit," said Robert E. Matthews, company president. "Had the temperature been 5 or 10 degrees colder, the load would have exceeded the predicted peak of 1,000,000 kw."

"Higher usage brought on by cold weather and the increase of approximately 2,600 new customers since last season are the chief reasons for the new peak," said Matthews. "Also, the relatively stable and good economic conditions for area industry require high energy usage."

Kentucky Power serves more than 140,000 customers in 20 eastern Kentucky counties. The company's only power plant, the Big Sandy plant near Louisa, has a capacity of 1,060,000 kilowatts.

"At the present growth rate of electricity demanded by our customers," Matthews continued, "our Big Sandy plant will not be able to provide all of our power generation needs after next winter. That will put us in the position of being a generation-deficient company, relying on other utilities for power during high demand periods."

Seek Help in Locating Abandoned Mine Peril

Residents of Kentucky's coal-mining counties are being asked to help the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection locate potentially dangerous abandoned-mine sites.

The department's division of abandoned lands has begun to inventory the thousands of abandoned-mine sites in the commonwealth. "Locating the sites and determining the extent of problems at each one is the first step toward getting funding to reclaim the potential hazards," said Dave Rosenbaum, division director.

After the sites are located and documented, the division will set priorities and request annual funding from the federal Office of Surface Mining for reclamation of the sites.

The department has contracted with Skelly and Loy, a Lexington consulting firm, to help conduct the inventory. Representatives of the firm have already begun to locate mine sites through interviews with local residents and personnel of various agencies.

Anyone knowing of a potentially dangerous abandoned mine site should write to Abandoned Mine Land Inventory, c/o Skelly and Loy, 2356 Harrodsburg Rd., Room 220, Lexington, Ky. 40504, or call (606) 223-3844.

In order for the sites to qualify for reclamation funding, mining at these sites must have ceased by Aug. 3, 1977, the date the federal Surface Mining Control Act became effective.

"Of primary concern are sites that endanger people and property," Rosenbaum explained. "In other words, the danger, whatever it might be, has to be near people—where they live, travel or play."

"There are many examples of danger. Unsealed underground-mine entrances or air shafts, abandoned tipples and cleaning facilities, and abandoned mining machinery are common dangers because they are considered "attractive nuisances" to children when near residences or play areas, he said. Landslides threatening houses or roads are obvious dangers, he added.

Although not common in populated areas, subsidence can be very destructive, Rosenbaum said. Subsidence, in which the land surface cracks and caves in, occurs where significant underground mining has eliminated support for the surface, he explained.

Other dangers of abandoned sites include those connected with water, Rosenbaum said. They include drinking water which has been contaminated by acid mine drainage, impoundments above residences and streams clogged with silt or other debris from abandoned mines which cause flooding of nearby homes.

"We urge anyone knowing of dangerous mine sites, abandoned before Aug. 3, 1977, to report them to Skelly and Loy as soon as possible," Rosenbaum said. "They are working county by county and the sooner we know of the sites, the better chance we have for reclaiming those sites."

Named Scout Executive

Mrs. Sandra Patton, of Toms River, N. J., has been named executive director of Ocean County (N.J.) Girl Scout Council. She was most recently employed by Keystone Tall Tree Girl Scout Council of Kittanning, Pa., as finance director and was previously employed by Wilderness Road Girl Scout Council of Lexington, serving the Floyd county area as field director. Residing with Mrs. Patton in Manchester Township are her two sons, Tim and Travis.

Revenue Get Ethics Code

The Kentucky Department of Revenue has issued to its employees a personnel handbook which includes a new code of ethics covering conflicts of interest and gifts to department employees from outside sources.

Commissioner of Revenue Robert Allphin called it "the most comprehensive personnel handbook to be issued to any department of state government."

"We are in effect a law enforcement agency," Allphin said. "Our employees must be beyond approach."

The new policy:
—Limits acceptance of gifts, favors or entertainment by employees to "nominal courtesies extended in a spirit of hospitality."
—Requires employees to immediately return any gifts "which can be construed to be provided in connection with your departmental duties."
—Prohibits employees from using information obtained on the job for service gain when the information is not available to the public.

The handbook also provides Revenue employees with information on state and departmental rules and regulations concerning fringe benefits, overtime, sick leave and other working conditions.

PUBLIC NOTICE REGARDING APPLICATION APPROVAL

The Eastern Kentucky Educational Development Corporation (EKEDC) of Ashland, Kentucky, has recently received approval for two (2) projects funded through the Kentucky Department of Education with Federal funds under EHA, Part B (P.L. 94-142). The projects are known as the Big Sandy Diagnostic Service Center No. 1 and No. 2, and will serve, respectively, handicapped children in the school districts of (No. 1) Pike County, Pikeville Independent, Morgan County, Magoffin County and Floyd County; and (No. 2) Johnson County, Paintsville Independent, Elliott County, Lawrence County and Martin County.

The projects have four main purposes: (1) child identification, testing, evaluation and placement for handicapped children, with special emphasis on severe, problematic cases; (2) Inservice training; (3) Interagency coordination; and (4) Information/product dissemination.

These purposes will be accomplished through the following: (1) Establishment of Board/Interagency planning group; (2) Hiring of psychologist or psychometrist; (3) In-service training and (4) Use of a part-time coordinator to assist in interagency coordination services, in-service training, purchase of testing and assessment materials, and information/dissemination and child-find.

The applications for these two approved projects and any subsequent evaluation, periodic program plan or report relating to the project, are available for public inspection by contacting the Superintendent's office in each of the 10 participating school districts. In addition, if you would like further information on these projects, please contact: Harry P. Brown, Project Director, Cynthia Champer, Coordinator, Eastern Kentucky Educational Development Corporation, P. O. Box 1269, 925 Winchester Ave., Ashland, Kentucky 41101.

Many items in this ad carry a reference retail price. This reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our selling area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops, and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retail prices do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this ad are listed as "regular" selling price. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. Celebrates Birthday

Douglas Holbrook celebrated his 12th birthday on February 3 at the Burger Queen of Prestonsburg.

He is the son of Glen and Anna Holbrook, of Prestonsburg, and grandchild of Arthur and the late Sarah Meadows, of Paintsville, and Johnnie and Missouri Holbrook, of the Abbott Road.

Those celebrating his birthday with him were Glenda Holbrook, Robin Mullins, Craig Mullins, Claude Mullins, Tracy White, Angela White, Estil Lee Porter, Ralph Davis and Angel Owens.

The children played games and enjoyed hamburgers, fries and cokes. Many nice gifts were presented to Douglas, and cake and ice cream were served as compliments of the Prestonsburg Burger Queen.

Hypothermia Risk Cited

The Kentucky division of disaster and emergency services last week alerted emergency personnel across the state that winter-related deaths are being reported by police, fire and medical officers in even southern states and that residential fires have increased sharply in some areas. Predictions that as many as 50,000 persons may be hospitalized for accidental hypothermia have been given by the surgeon general.

The disaster and emergency services division is alerting all personnel of organizations that work with people, especially the elderly, to the problems of accidental hypothermia. This condition involves the lowering of body temperatures below 95F and can be fatal.

Hypothermia should be suspected if an individual has any one of the following symptoms: uncontrollable shivering or uncoordination, sluggishness, swollen face, discolored or pale skin, slurred speech, shallow or very slow breathing, drowsiness, reduced blood pressure, or irregular or slowed heart-beat.

If accidental hypothermia is suspected, the person should be rewarmed slowly and should receive emergency medical attention, even in those cases that appear mild or where the victim no longer feels cold.

Real Estate Comm. Awards Grant To PCC

Robert R. Allen, assistant director at Prestonsburg Community College, announced this week that the Kentucky Real Estate Commission has awarded a grant in the amount of $2,000 to the college. The grant will be used to subsidize the two-year technical real estate program at the college.

This is the fourth consecutive year a grant has been made available to P.C.C.

Nuclear Energy Still Going Strong

By Lynn Varacalli

Cheap oil and natural gas will be gone in 100 years—maybe even in 50. Coal will last a while longer but it has grave disadvantages, namely, damage to health and the environment. Solar electricity, although a viable resource, is, at the moment, very expensive and will not be available for large scale use until sometime beyond the year 2000.

What, in the name of energy, is left? To many, the answer to that question is nuclear energy.

"Nuclear is an energy option which is capable of being adopted by a very large number of consuming nations," says William P. Tavoulareas, President of Mobil.

Even those in favor of nuclear energy would probably agree that it is not the best idea to come along since the windmill, but it is readily available. No doubt, we are in an energy crisis and nuclear power is there. The Three Mile Island mishap made it ever so clear that it is there.

Perhaps the accident at Three Mile Island was a warning that if we are to energize in the direction of nuclear power, we ought to be more careful.

"It was our Titanic," says Dr. Karl Walske, president of the Atomic Industrial Forum, a nuclear trade association, referring to TMI.

"The accident was a shock that showed us we weren't quite as good as we thought we were or as good as we said we were. When a plane crashes, you lose the plane, but you begin to learn a lot of things about yourself. There's a new attitude toward safety in the industry, a new awareness. Things are better."

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) is putting all its energies into making sure of that. To increase safety at the 67 operational reactors and the 90 under construction or awaiting licensing, the NRC has proposed or adopted nearly 200 new regulations. The improvements could cost as much as $30 million for each plant.

"The new rules do little to reduce the likelihood of a nuclear disaster," says former NRC member Robert Pollard, now with the Union of Concerned Scientists, a Washington-based group that has often provided hostile criticism of the nuclear industry. Pollard believes that the commission will endure additional TMI-scale accidents as long as they are few and far between and no one is killed.

"In a sense, that was our last warning," says Pollard. "You can't have an accident any worse than that without infecting the public seriously."

The TMI effect on the public seems to have simmered down, though. There are still cries of "no more nukes" but they are not quite as loud as before. According to a recent study by Rutgers University, 64 percent of the people living in the Three Mile Island area favor maintaining the facilities, but improving the safety features.

The nuclear power industry itself has been greatly affected by TMI. Orders for new nuclear power plants have been falling steadily since the mid 1970s, with the TMI mishap not helping matters. Tight money and soaring interest rates have made financing new $2 billion nuclear power plants unthinkable.

"It's not just nuclear," says Dr. Walske. "It's anything. Utilities generally are in poor financial straits." Industry analysts agree that the foundering economy is as much to blame for the decline in nuclear plants as TMI, but the accident has created an atmosphere of hostility and doubt that hovers over the nuclear power industry in this country.

"The basic problem that the nuclear industry faces in this decade is far more psychological than it is technological," says Governor Dick Thornburgh of Pennsylvania. "The biggest barrier to those who would call for the further promotion of nuclear energy is a psychological barrier, dealing with anxieties."

Dr. Robert L. du Pont, a psychiatrist who studied television coverage of nuclear power plants, feels that TV reporters spend too much time telling viewers about what might go wrong, instead of presenting the facts. "One of the striking characteristics I saw occur over and over was the reporters continually going down those 'what if' worst-case branches," says du Pont.

Opponents of nuclear energy hope that the added cost of the safety improvements will make nuclear plants economically unfeasible. It is unlikely, though, that atomic reactors will phase out of the energy picture. In fact, Robert Pollard, the ex-NRC member, insists that he is not advocating the death of nuclear power in America. He feels that stricter licensing and a greatly expanded public role in the process would go a long way toward solving the problem.

"The nuclear industry thinks the issue is too technical for ordinary people to understand," he says. "How safe is safe enough? That's not a technical question. If the word democracy means anything, people must be allowed to determine it."

Our Fragile Earth

By DR. JERRY HOWELL
Department of Biological and Environmental Sciences
Morehead State University

The last chance for many endangered animal species may rest with the world's zoos. Becoming increasingly rarer in the wild, many species in peril have found refuge in some specialty zoos, according to a recent Time magazine article and other sources.

These modern arks cannot solve all problems for all endangered species. The undertaking is expensive, space is limited, and not all species can be bred and reared in captivity. In addition, because of limited resources and other problems, some ethical questions must be resolved. Which species should be selected for a particular breeding program? What about inbreeding, a special problem in limited zoo populations? If breeding is successful, should the offspring be transplanted to their original habitat, a place obviously not too hospitable? Is it "fair" to the species involved to relegate them, perhaps permanently, to life in glass cases or cages? Should we even be interfering? These questions have been resolved to some extent by zoo officials and their governing boards throughout the world. Some hard decisions must still be made.

Some noteworthy success have already been achieved. Prezewalski's horse, a wild species believed extinct in its native Mongolia, has been maintained at the Bronx zoo through an intensive breeding program. This zoo has also successfully bred Pere David's deer, extinct in its native China since the turn of the century, and the European bison, recently reintroduced into Poland, where the last wild one was killed in 1921.

Animal physiology and behavior are important factors in zoo breeding programs. For example, ornithologists have induced breeding in such birds as puffins and cranes by artificially varying lighting and climatic conditions and the Andean condor's low reproductive rate has been increased through the snatching away and incubating of individual eggs soon after laying, thereby leaving the female free to lay more eggs.

Hormone treatments and artificial insemination are popular techniques at the Bronx, London and San Diego Zoos. Hormone-treated surrogate mothers have been used to give birth to such endangered animals as the gaur, a wild cow form southern Asia; the Siberian tiger, a rare species now free to produce several litters per year because of artificial embryo implantations in lionesses; and several species of gorillas and pumas. Many of the offspring produced by these methods have been reintroduced to their original or other suitable habitats.

Some zoos are experimenting with futuristic endangered species preservation techniques. For example, San Diego Zoo scientists have a "frozen zoo," in which they keep both sperm for future insemination use and connective cell tissue for possible future cloning. Next: the President's Council on Environmental Quality annual report.

Cutworm Protection

Anticipating potential problems in your 1981 corn crops and developing plans for dealing with them is part of the important decision-making that should be done before planting time. Identifying a problem may not be too difficult, but determining the chances or risk of having it develop can be a real challenge.

Early season cutworm damage is a good example. Severe infestations can greatly reduce a stand and may cause some fields to be replanted.

Fortunately, the odds are against cutworm problems in most fields. But instead of relying on averages, think about each field and identify those that most likely will have a cutworm problem. Then plan some strategy for controlling the pest.

Here is information from Lee Townsend, Extension entomologist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, that can help you plan your best strategy for protecting your corn crop from cutworms.

Conditions that favor cutworm infestations are late planting, broadleaf weed growth, reduced tillage and poor field drainage. A history of cutworm problems in a field also should be considered.

One strategy would be to use a preplant or planting time insecticide to prevent cutworm problems. Several are available that can provide moderate to good cutworm control. For best results, these treatments must be incorporated lightly into the soil.

If you do not plan to use a soil insecticide or plan to use one that is not effective as a cutworm preventive, you should be prepared to apply a rescue treatment if a cutworm problem develops.

Rescue treatments are sprays that are applied when an infestation is found. In general, this approach has been very effective throughout the Corn Belt. The use of rescue treatments means that field infestations at economic levels must be detected early.

You must be able to inspect these "risky" fields often for cut plants from emergence through the four-leaf stage or have a field scout do the job for you. The use of field scouts is possible in many counties now through the University of Kentucky Multi-Disciplinary, Multi-Crop Integrated Pest Management Program.

Details on this program and 1981 insecticide recommendations for conventional and no-till corn are available at your county Extension office.

Fifteen Floyd county 4-H Club members were named area champions on their 4-H projects last week on the basis of project work conducted in 1980.

Junior project champions included Robert Mayton, auto; Brett Meade, dog; Tina Brown, entomology; Donna Cline, canning; Shawn Johnson, geology; Steve Hamilton, woodwork; Kelli Johnson, birds; Delilah Rice, foods; Karen Hamilton, conservation; Monty Frazier, poultry.

Senior champions were Jackie Cecil, photography; Rebecca Mayton, conservation; Hilda Hunt, electric; Connie Burchett, clothing; Todd O'Brien, small engines.

Other members participating were Mark Meade, bicycle; Terra Clark, careers; Annieta Hall, dairy foods; Joey Hammons, lawns; Lori Hardwick, speech; Robert Jones, photography; Randy Hunter, electric; Tammy Trimble, home improvement; Shawn Johnson, crafts.

Workshop Focus On Mental Health Series

KET will hold a series of twelve regional workshops in February and March to assist educators in the effective use of the new, in-school mental health series, "On The Level." The workshops, supported by a grant from the Kentucky Mental Health Foundation, will train secondary guidance counselors, school social workers, school psychologists and representatives of parent groups in the implementation of the 12-program series.

Premiering Tuesday, March 10 at 2:30 p.m., "On The Level" attempts to promote teenager's personal, emotional and social well being.

According to KET's Instructional Television Utilization coordinator, Tim Tassie, each workshop includes three segments: a guidance awareness session, a video equipment session teaching the use of videotape machines in the school, and an in-depth orientation to "On The Level."

"The guidance and social work professionals who attend the workshops should be able to return to their schools and conduct their own workshops for 'On The Level' for local faculties and parent-teacher organizations," says Tassie.

When the educators return to their schools, they will have an opportunity to practice the video recording techniques they learned in the workshops. On Friday, March 6 at 2:30 p.m., teachers and counselors around the state will practice-tape a KET broadcast of the mental health series. They will then be prepared to record all the segments of "On The Level" and other instructional programs for use in the schools.

According to Tassie, the workshops will be held in the following communities between February 24 and March 5: Bowling Green, Kentucky Dam Village, Owensboro, Elizabethtown, Carter Caves State Park, Danville, Hazard, Louisville, Corbin, Paintsville, Lexington and Fort Mitchell, Ky.

The "On The Level" workshops will be jointly organized and conducted by the Student Services Section of the Kentucky Department of Education and KET.

"On The Level" is a co-production of the Agency for Instructional Television (AIT), the Educational Film Center in North Springfield, Va., and The Ontario Educational Communications Authority in Toronto.

Has Perfect Standing

One of seven students from Kentucky who made the Dean's List of Virginia Tech, Blacksburg, Va., for the fall semester, Thomas Gregory Porter, had a perfect 4.0 average.

A son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Porter, of Allen, he is a sophomore electrical engineering student. He entered Virginia Tech after graduation from Prestonsburg High School.

It is helpful to understand the typical relationship between national and local health agencies. National voluntary health agencies fulfill many of the same functions that are filled by state and local agencies. Education, service and research are their primary concerns. National agencies also make every effort to strengthen state and local agencies. They offer advisory and consultant services and promote inservice education of workers at all three levels. They prepare educational materials which are generally distributed to the public by the state and local agencies.

A good relationship with your neighborhood pharmacist can go a long way in making sure you know about health related issues. At COOLEY APOTHECARY INC. we have a pharmaceutical staff that takes its responsibility as your physician's consultant seriously. We're small enough to know you and large enough to serve you. We're located at 2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30; Sat. 9-5.

Ky. Coal—$3 Billion-a-Year Industry

To say Kentucky's $3 billion-a-year coal industry is important to the state would be an understatement.

The state's sixth largest occupation (manufacturing is first), coal mining accounted for more than 7 percent of the state's personal income in 1978—$1.3 billion—and currently employs some 50,000 people.

About one out of every $10 which enters the state's General Fund is a coal severance tax dollar. The more than $58 million in coal severance tax revenue received the first quarter of this fiscal year was the third largest chunk of revenue for the state after sales and personal income tax receipts.

In eastern Kentucky, where about three-quarters of the state's coal is mined, the industry is more than important—it is vital. Coal mining and related industries account for nearly 40 percent of the total nonagricultural employment in the 49 Appalachian counties.

Kentucky ranks first nationally in the production of coal. In 1979, a record 149 million tons of it were produced in the state. Figures through the first six months of last year indicate 1979's record would be broken.

Things should continue to get even better. Western Kentucky is said to have more than 400 years in underground reserves and eastern Kentucky, more than 100 years.

Coal is not a true mineral. It is a fossilized plant material, similar to sedimentary rock, composed of fixed carbon, volatile material, moisture, sulphur and ash.

Kentucky's coalfields were formed more than 300 million years ago during the Coal Age in the great swamps which covered thousands of square miles of the earth. The climate then was warm and moist. The swamps, hundreds of years old, were filled with fast growing trees and shrubs and ferns, some more than 100 feet tall.

As time passed, vegetation in the swamps died and peat bogs were formed, consisting of a slimy layer of brownish to blackish decayed vegetation underneath living plants.

Below the water and safe from oxidation by the air, the decayed plant deposits retained much of their carbon content. As millions of years passed, the peat bogs were covered periodically by layers of sand, gravel and mud. Sometimes ocean waters would leave deposits of limestone.

After millions of years of being subjected to the pressures of the deposits and chemical and bacterial action, the peat bogs, which no longer exist in Kentucky, finally became the lowest grade of coal, lignite.

Greater pressures produced the seams of bituminous (soft) coal found in the Eastern and Western Kentucky coalfields and the anthracite found in other states.

The seams of coal buried in Kentucky soil are still surrounded by the sedimentary rocks whose pressure formed them. Fossilized roots and stumps can be found below a coal bed today as evidence of the plant life which existed during the Coal Age.

Kentucky's coal deposits exist in two distinct regions. The Eastern Kentucky Coalfield is part of the huge Appalachian Coal Basin, which covers six states from Pennsylvania to Alabama and supplies three-quarters of the nation's coal. Kentucky's Eastern Coalfield covers an area of more than 10,000 square miles, about one-quarter of the state's area.

The Western Kentucky Coalfield is part of the Eastern Interior Coal Basin, which includes part of Indiana and much of Illinois. The western coal field is about half the size of Kentucky's eastern coalfield, but more accessible. The mining and transporting of coal in the mountainous region of Eastern Kentucky is much more difficult than in the flatter grounds of Western Kentucky.

Although Eastern Kentucky's coal deposits are smaller than in neighboring states (Ohio, for example, has more than 600 years of underground high-sulphur coal reserves), coal in this region is more desirable because it is low in sulphur and burns clean.

Western Kentucky coal, though high in sulphur and less valuable than Eastern Kentucky coal, will be a major supplier of the synthetic fuels plants that will be built in Western Kentucky during this decade.

According to the state Department of Energy, more than 150,000 tons of mostly Western Kentucky coal will be used at the liquefaction plants every day.

Right now, more than 75 percent of the coal produced in the state is steam coal, used to fire the generators of electric utilities in surrounding states.

New Program To Aid High School Dropouts

Are you a high school dropout interested in completing your high school education and at the same time receiving valuable work experience and counseling in a field of your choice? If your answer is yes, the Big Sandy Area Community Action Program may be able to help you.

Applications are now being taken for a new Youth Employment and Training Program funded by E.D.C.E.P. in Hazard. This program is for economically disadvantaged youths between the ages of 17 and 21 who have been out of school for six months or longer.

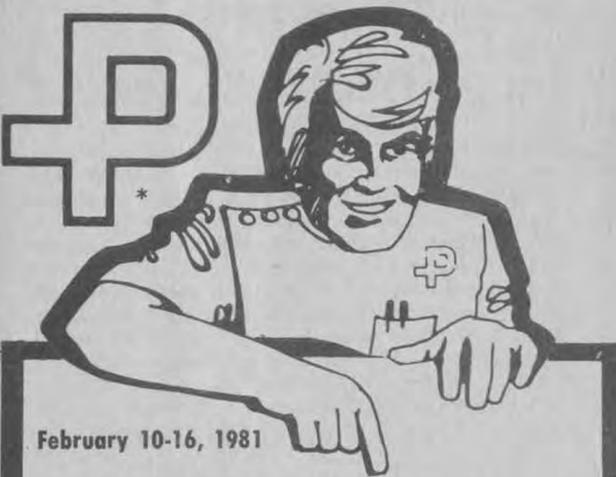

If you meet these requirements and are interested in participating in the program, come in to your local Big Sandy Area C.A.P. office and put in an application. The C.A.P. office in this county is located in the court house in Prestonsburg. Applications will be taken between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Attend Training Lesson

The February Homemakers training lesson was conducted last week by Kathy Bullen, area management agent. Those attending were Mary Sue Moore, Dorothy Tackett, Jean Meade, Bev Schissler, Dorothy Harris, Mabel Allen, Becky Short, Dorothy Burke, Alice Inglis, Carma Sturgill, Cheryl Leslie, Alice Hayes, Charlotte Smith, Francis Pitts.

United Federal Savings & Loan Association explains the NOW account.

What you should know about our NOW-checking account, available January 2, 1981

Recently, we have been informing you about how NOW-checking accounts will work. Now we will inform you how NOW-checking will work at United Federal Savings and Loan Association. This way you may compare it to where you're currently doing your checking. We are sure if you compare, you will be a regular United Federal customer just like many of your friends.

What is a NOW-checking account? A NOW-checking account is simply a checking account that earns interest.

When will NOW accounts be available? NOW-checking accounts are effective by law December 31, 1980. NOW-checking accounts will be available at United Federal as of January 2, 1981.

Who qualifies? Only individuals, sole proprietorships, or a non-profit corporation qualifies by law to earn interest on their checking accounts.

How to qualify for a NOW-checking account at United Federal? All you have to do is maintain a balance in your NOW-checking account at United Federal of at least $300.00 and we will pay you interest at the annual rate of 5.25% compounded daily. If your account drops below the minimum balance, you will be charged a $5 service charge for that month only and receive no interest.

Why you should have your Now-checking account at United Federal? There are many reasons why, but just to mention a few:

1. A low minimum balance.
2. An itemized monthly statement sent to you.
3. Write as many checks per month as you wish, with no additional charges.
4. We pay the maximum interest rate allowed by law.

For more information about NOW-checking accounts, savings accounts, or any other savings and loan service, stop by any of our offices and talk with our staff. We want you to know more about your financial opportunities. The more you know, the more likely you are to have your savings and NOW-checking accounts with us.

Happy Valentine's Day, Sweet One Hundred!

Remember the homemade red and white valentine box that graced the teacher's desk? Remember the homemade valentines cut out with tiny blunt scissors and put together with school paste or paste made from flour and water? Those who are old enough will remember.

On Feb. 14 quite a few Kentuckians will take a look back over a century of love notes penciled on hand-cut, lopsided hearts. For members of this select group, it is not the lack of skill in the cutting and pasting that brings a smile to a lined face, but remembered excitement when a certain valentine was received from a certain someone.

Mrs. Florence Higgins, of Mt. Sterling, observed her 104th birthday last June 4. Miss Bridget Hickery, also of Mt. Sterling, celebrated her 106th birthday in January.

McGarvey Harper, 100 last year, submitted to major surgery recently in Morgan County Appalachian Regional Hospital, West Liberty, and has recovered and is back in a rest center in Magoffin county.

"Grammy Cotton" whose formal name is Elsie Cotton Wheeler, a former resident of Johnson county and later of Riverview Manor in nearby Prestonsburg, was 105 last year. she has appeared on TV's "Good Morning America" program.

Mrs. Alma Seay was honored on her 100th birthday last December with a reception in Water Valley Methodist Church near Fulton.

Mrs. Florence Childrey Freeman, native of Lewis county, marked her 100th birthday with a party at East Galbraith Nursing Home, Cincinnati, last Dec. 29.

Mrs. Susie Hall Lawhorn, of Life Care Center, Morehead, formerly of Carter county, was 103 last Aug. 30. she has smoked a pipe for almost 95 years.

Mrs. Mary Rice, of Riverview Rest Home, Russell, formerly of Ashland was 103 back in 1978, and George Hurt, of Prestonsburg, was 104 in 1977.

In Johnson county a Van Lear couple, Gilbert Young and May Salver Young, celebrated their 74th wedding anniversary last July 13.

A Menifee county couple holds the record for long marriage. Lynn and Lydia Rupe Wells celebrated their 80th wedding anniversary in July 1978 before his death later that year. She will be 98 in September.

Think of all the courtship notes, sweetheart valentines, heart-shaped boxes of chocolate shared through the years. However fancy, however laced and however imprinted with a sweet message, the valentine was without meaning unless the message was heart to heart, friend to friend.

Mrs. Hester Cooley Stephens, of Eastern Kentucky, was not 100 but she handed down to her daughter, Mrs. Fannie S. Jarrell, a handmade valentine that had been in the family 100 years.

"On the fourteenth Day of February I was very merry. Lots were cast And tickets drew-Kind fortune said. It must be you. I drew you from Among the rest. The reason why... I love you best!"

KENTUCKY AFIELD

By JOHN WILSON

John Phillips, the wildlife biologist in charge of Kentucky's deer management program, has been collecting and counting check station stubs and other harvest data since the last phase of the 1980 season closed Dec. 31. He's just got everything added up and the results contain some surprises.

The biggest surprise is the increase in harvest by bow hunters. Archers in open counties took 1,004 bucks and 710 does during 1980, an increase of 175 percent over the bow harvest in 1979. The gun harvest in open counties was 7,323 bucks and 665 does, up six percent over 1979.

Phillips isn't sure what made the bow and arrow harvest jump so much, but he feels that the two-tag system is probably responsible. For one thing, more archers may have taken their deer to check stations, since a stamped check station stub was necessary to validate the second tag.

Also, Phillips says, bow hunters may have been willing to take the first deer they encountered, feeling that they could trophy hunt with their second tag after putting venison in the freezer with the first.

Only 380 deer were taken with second tags, which is just about as expected. Phillips had estimated the second tag would cause an increase in harvest of 400 deer from open counties.

Of course, the increase in bow harvest could also be another reflection of the growing deer population and the growing popularity of deer hunting in Kentucky.

The only problem with this increased harvest is that too high a percentage of does were taken in some counties, Phillips says. "We had a doe harvest of up to 30 percent in some Eastern Kentucky counties," he says, "and that's too high for these areas, where we want the herd to continue to grow."

The total estimated harvest from open counties, federal areas and state wildlife management areas was 16,183, as compared with 13,570 in 1979. These figures include the total check station count plus a mathematically derived factor to take into account the estimated number of hunters who did not visit a check station or those not required to do so, such as landowners hunting on their own property.

Harvest data will help form the basis for setting next year's deer seasons across the state. Phillips and other wildlife biologists will study these findings and submit their proposals to the Fish and Wildlife Commission at its March meeting. The commission will make the final decisions and the specifics of next year's hunts will be announced then.

Phillips is also in charge of keeping the lists of trophy deer. Although he's not had time to work up last season's results yet, he says there will be some interesting additions to the lists, including a 300-pound (field dressed weight) buck and a 28 point non-typical rack. We'll let you know the full particulars when they become available.

Art Exhibition Set At Alice Lloyd

Alice Lloyd College is sponsoring its Second Annual National Works on Paper art exhibition, March 31-April 24.

David Routon, Associate Professor of Art at University of Nebraska at Lincoln is the juror; the show will be selected on the basis of 35 mm slides; there is a $5 entry fee for either one, two, or three slides; the deadline for receiving slides is February 20, 1981.

For entry forms and additional information contact, Susan Patton, Art Department, Alice Lloyd College, Pippa Passes, Kentucky, 41844.

ABANDONED MINE INVENTORY

The Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection is requesting information about abandoned mine lands which present a potential danger to human life, health, safety, and/or property. A statewide inventory is needed before that state can begin funding reclamation projects for the abandoned mines. In order for the land to qualify for this inventory, activity on the mine must have stopped before August 3, 1977, the date that Public Law 95-87 was enacted. Examples of dangers include unsafe abandoned tipples, unsealed mine openings or shafts, landslides, burning mine refuse piles, and dangerous mine water impoundments. Dangers should be near residences or where people regularly travel. The public is asked to submit, in writing, by February 25, 1981, details of the locations and conditions of any such sites to:

Sheriffs' Association To Meet Feb. 13, 14

The Kentucky Sheriffs' Association and the Kentucky Sheriffs' Boys and Girls Ranch will have a Sheriffs' meeting for Districts 9 and 10, mountain counties, at Jenny Wiley State Park, Friday, Feb. 13 and Saturday, Feb. 14.

The banquet on Friday will start at 7 p.m. and the Sheriffs' Association will honor at this district meeting, Sheriff Charles "Fuzzy" Keese, who has been elected Sheriff of Pike County three times.

Executive Director of the Boys and Girls Ranch, Ray Stoess, said the "Succession Bill" will be the main topic on the agenda and there will be a forum conducted by Sheriffs' Association President Jerry Gaines, of Warren County.

For more information, contact Helen Barter, Executive Secretary, at the Ky. Sheriffs' Boys and Girls Ranch at 502-362-8660.

Pikeville College Research Offers Mine Water Control

A scientific study team at Pikeville College led by Dr. Charles Jordan of the Science Division has developed a technological breakthrough in mine water purity that offers, for the first time, what is described as a simple and inexpensive means for bringing coal mining operations into compliance with tough, new mine legislation and EPA standards.

Originally the group perfected methods to determine whether mine water runoff met acceptable standards for the limits of iron, manganese, and acidity required by the recent strip mining bill, Public Law 95-87. Now, on their own initiative, the team has developed new procedures for control and removal of such chemical contaminants, making it considerably easier for coal companies to come into compliance with both federal and state requirements. Several coal companies have already benefitted from the breakthrough, one of them only three days short of a shutdown, according to Dr. Jordan.

To understand the significance of the present discovery, the history of water purity needs review. A few decades ago, the destruction of pathogenic bacteria was accomplished with chlorination and similar processes. Little concern existed once municipal water supplies were protected with such methods, and people generally were confident that as long as no bacteria were present and the water was fit to drink there was nothing more to worry about. Even well water could be tested for drinking suitability, sediments could be removed to make water look better, and we did things to remove bad taste. Everyone relaxed.

But today there are new concerns throughout the nation, indeed, throughout the world, as we wonder what mankind is doing to the land that will ultimately affect the water with respect to toxic chemicals which are produced in large quantities by modern technology. In eastern Kentucky, this concern manifests itself mostly with regard to coal mining and subsequent water runoff into streams and ponds. Presently, stringent new mine legislation seeks to limit the presence of certain chemicals in the water, irrespective of whether they were placed there as a direct result of mine activity. The mine operator is required to exercise control over toxic chemicals, monitor them and, where they exceed designated limits, take corrective measures. Compliance with the new laws has not always been easy.

"Now, however," Dr. Jordan notes, "we have not only developed sophisticated methods of analyses to tell the coal companies whether their mine water meets specifications, but we have been successful in developing procedures that can correct adverse conditions and bring the water up to established specifications."

Dr. Maurice Bailey, chairman of the Science Division at Pikeville College, endorses Jordan's assessment and predicts an expanding role for the new technique. "It is easy to see this program developing as people get more concerned about chemical contaminants in water," Bailey says. "We seem to have solved the problem of biological contaminants as a society, only to face the new problems of undesirable chemicals in the water, and often these chemicals are toxic. It now seems assured that Pikeville College has succeeded in altering this problem in the area of the mining industry with a system that is simple, ingenious, and inexpensive."

Most coal companies experience problems with the EPA when the runoff tests high in iron and manganese and low in the pH factor (pH is the measure of acidity or alkalinity; when it measures low in the water, the water is high in acid).

The accepted method has always been simply to bring the pH up as high as possible, at least to some middle standard such as a reading of 7 and often it was recommended to pull the pH level up to 11 or 12. That was costing a lot of money and did not result in a satisfactory solution to the overall problem.

At the college new experimentation developed using a hypochlorite solution, actually working with the product, Clorox, right out of the bottle, and bringing the pH up to acceptable levels, to about six or seven.

By carefully adding hypochlorite, and then working out correct combinations of pH and hypochlorite, the right balance was achieved and iron and manganese formed solid precipitates that separated from the water—a dramatic demonstration, according to officials of the program. "It seemed like magic," observed one of the members of the team, Frosty Levy.

"We worked for months with solutions that did not bring about the change and I began to feel doubts, but then we got the right combination and I watched the precipitation of the chemicals, floating down the vial at about six inches in half a minute. It was exciting."

Levy and another member of the team, Archie Fugate, see special applications for the new process. They describe a method that works quickly, two hours instead of the usual 24 in many cases; and they have now brought it to the point where it is effective in heavy spring rains with swollen creeks and overflowing streams. This method is as adaptable to small sedimentation ponds as it is to large volumes of water, Levy and Fugate point out.

"However, it is important to remember that chemical controls are necessary," Levy cautions. "We are not suggesting to anyone that they go out and just dump clorox into their water without concern for the accurate balance between the volume of water and the amount of contaminants. Samples must be examined in the laboratory and the results of analysis should determine the amount of hypochlorite to be added."

In their testing procedures the group found that immediately after adding Clorox to the water some residual chlorine remained, but by next morning it had dissipated overnight and only the solid precipitates remained in the bottom of the flask. The rest was pure water. They state that this process would be hastened on-site due to natural conditions and water movement causing more rapid aeration in many cases. Other treatment methods recently developed by the group indicate more rapid removal of excess chlorine.

Dr. Jordan sums up the program at Pikeville College: "We should stress that this is not ivory tower science, nor is this some random laboratory accident," he says. "This team has demonstrated a workable solution to the very serious problem of chemical contaminants in mine water runoff, and it is what we deliberately set out to accomplish and we have succeeded."

"The procedure has been effective in at least three onsite situations that I personally know of, making this educational institution an authority on the matter of modern problems connected with water purity and the hazards of chemical contamination."

The work at Pikeville College is supported by the Coal Industry Technical Assistance Center (CITAC), a program serving the coal industry in eastern Kentucky which is located at the college and funded by the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC), the Kentucky Department of Energy, and the Institute of Mining, Minerals and Research (IMMR). The CITAC team is available for consultation on mine water analysis and corrective procedures for eliminating chemical contaminants from the water, by calling CITAC at (606) 432-9396.

Get instant relief for your pocketbook with our Equal Payment Plan.

Winter is here. And with its chilling winds comes the most expensive time of the year. Bills from the holidays, snow tires, cold and flu expenses, taxes—the list is long.

And winter is also the highest electric usage period for most of our customers. That means higher energy bills come right along with everything else.

To help ease the overall winter drain on the pocketbook, Kentucky Power is offering "instant relief" for customers with good bill-paying records. It's called the Equal Payment Plan (EPP). By going on EPP now, qualified customers can defer part of each winter electric bill to spring and fall when usage is less.

Here is how it works — If for example, your current bill is $150 but your average bill (based on last year's usage) is $75 per month for a year, you would have to pay only the $75 when you go on EPP. Over the first 11 months you would pay $75 per month. (If there is any difference between your estimated and actual usage, we'll make an adjustment in your monthly EPP amount after six months.) On the 12th month, we'll settle up any differences.

EPP is that simple. You pay less than what you actually use during these heavy-use periods, then pay the company back (with no interest) during the low usage months.

EPP is of most benefit to heating and air conditioning customers whose bills fluctuate seasonally, but the program is available to all residential customers.

If the idea of leveling off your electric bills sounds good to you, come in or call your nearest Kentucky Power office. We have an EPP specialist waiting to talk to you.

We give it our best.

The pageant was the state's largest, with 63 contestants, and was held during the 33rd annual Kentucky Fair Board Association meeting. Miss Tackett was accompanied by Miss Sherry Ratliff, of Martin, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Tackett. Also attending the Association meeting were John Sparks, extension agent, Lloyd Daniels and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Ratliff, all of Prestonsburg.

Art-Photography Weekend
At Jenny Wiley Park, Feb. 27-28

By HELEN PRICE STACY
Winter Weekend for Artists and Photographers, Kentucky's most popular art and photography competition and exhibit, is scheduled Feb. 27-28 at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park.

A number of the prestigious Kentucky Heritage Artists will appear on the program and demonstrate their skills, as will other experts in photography.

Registration for the event, which attracts artists and photographers from throughout Kentucky as well as surrounding states, begins Friday afternoon, Feb. 27.

At 7 p.m. opening day, Kentucky Heritage Artist Robert Powell will present a program based on reproduction (prints) of art works. He will outline in detail all phases of the process including costs, paper selection, technical data, promotion and packaging for art prints.

Powell also will discuss publication of calendars, note cards, books and will answer questions from the audience on other publication topics.

Following Powell's talk, artist Russell May and his wife, Eve, of Prestonsburg, will serve refreshments as a welcome to all participants in the Winter Weekend.

Starting at 9 a.m. Saturday, Dick Boneta of the Camera Shop, Richmond, will present a program on photographing flowers. At 10:30 a.m. artist Donna Richardson, of Greenville, will discuss and demonstrate how modeling paste can be used for relief painting.

All art and photography must be entered by noon Feb. 28, and must remain on exhibit until 7:30 p.m. (Entries must be original work of the artist or photographer and must be framed or matted and ready to hang.)

At noon Saturday, art work and photography will be on display for one hour, allowing the public time to vote for the "Popular Favorite" painting and photograph. This is the first year awards will be presented to the artist and photographer voted tops by the viewing public.

At 1 p.m. the exhibit area will be closed to the public while judges select the best entries.

At 2:30 p.m. Russell May will treat the audience to a demonstration of his technique in painting an oil landscape. Starting at 4 p.m., Charles Spaulding will demonstrate painting, showing how he incorporates ideas from planning stages to composition and finishing the work.

Awards to the winning artists and photographers will be presented at 7:30 p.m. after which A. Jack May will lead a "critique session" on the winning works. May will also critique any painting submitted by program participants.

The Grand Award winner in photography and in art will each receive a julep cup. Door prizes will be given at the beginning of each session. Winners must be present.

The artist and photographer are responsible for listing in which category the work should be placed and a notation so made on the front of the work.

Each photographer may enter a total of four photographs in color, black and white and toned. Minimum size including frame or mat is 11 x 14 inches and maximum size 20 x 24 inches.

For more information, contact the park, weekend hostess Mrs. Nellie Meadows in Clay City, Russell May at Prestonsburg, or Robert Powell, Printing, Lexington.
